On several occasions within the last few weeks, representatives of several police associations have said that if public attitudes toward lawbreakers don't change, police will be forced to carry out justice in the streets, shooting to kill without taking any prisoners.

"That certainly is not the proper way to approach the problem," said Chief Jenkins in a This Week interview. "It seems to be an American view and it's a very irresponsible one."

He said he realizes there is a particularly severe problem with law enforcement in the United States, but there are better avenues to explore to find solutions.

"The old hard line just isn't the cure-all any more. The world is changing and we have to change with it. We're the people in the middle and when the two sides of the law shift, we have to shift with them."

Chief Jenkins praised

SHORT TAKES

ASPHYXIATED

Lawrence Leslie Atkinson, 43, of 1016 Olive Avenue was pronounced dead on arrival at Oshawa General Hospital Thursday following a fire at his home. His wife was at the summer cottage Wednesday evening and returned early Thursday morning to find her brick bungalow in flames. Mr. Atkinson is also survived by a son and two daughters

NO SIGN

The Ontario Municipal Board has upheld a decision of the city's committee of adjustment prohibiting the illumination of a sign in front of the Oshawa Medical Centre at King and Farewell Streets. The committee had ruled that an illuminatee sign is not permitted under the zoning by-law for the area

CHAIRMAN APPOINTED

Trustee Morgan O'Connor of the Ontario County Separate School Board will become chairman of an action committee designed to pressure the Ontario government into reaching a decision on a brief presented by the Ontario Separate School Trustees' Association The brief calls for the extension of the separate school system to Grade 13 and so far the province has been noncommittal on its status

WORKERS RECALLED

General Motors has recalled some 3,700 workers, most of whom are engaged in the pre-production phase of auto assembly in the A-plant and truck plant. The recall was in conjunction with the first body drop in the A-plant scheduled for Monday

ARBOUR DAY

The Ontario County Separate School Board has complied with a request by a Grade 5 student at St. Gertrude's School to revive Arbour Day. The student, Christopher O'Reilly, learned about the event from his teacher and wrote Mayor Bruce Mackey asking him to have Arbour Day revived. The mayor passed on the letter with supporting comments to the school board

AWARD REGIMENT

Oshawa's Ontario Regiment has done it again The 100-man student militia returned home from Camp Petawawa last week with another trophy this one for best all around unit over the nine other regiments participating in the six-week training course

PRINCIPALS

Principals in schools with more than 240 pupils will no longer be required to teach in the Ontario County separate school system. This decision was taken Wednesday by the Ontario County Separate School Board. In addition, vice principals in senior schools of over 350 pupils will have to teach only half time

INQUEST

An inquest will be held at 7 p.m. Aug. 13 into the death of Gordon van Egmond of Whitby Egmond died on July 17. The inquest will be held in the Ontario Provincial Police building in Whitby

CORBETT PLANT

The Ontario Municipal Board has given final approval for the purchase of industrial land for the construction of the Corbett Creek sewage treatment plant. The plant, which will service the corridor area of Whitby and the western portion of Oshawa, should be under construction by mid-fall and completed in two years.

QUOTA SHORT

The latest blood donor clinic held Thursday at St. Gregory's Auditorium fell short of its objective by 160 quarts. The quota had been set at 550 quarts, but only 390 were collected. The next clinic at the same place will be held Sept. 3 with another 550-quart quota set.

NO RETURN

City Council has endorsed a proposal by the city of Kitchener that no return bottles to be banned in Ontario. A Kitchener resolution forwarded to Ontario municipalities, the Ontario Municipal Association and the Ontario Association of Mayors and Reeves, called the bottles unsightly and dangerous

ON TARGET

The completion date for the $5-million expansion project at the Oshawa Shopping Centre is still the third week in September with work progressing on schedule. The plaza is being turned into an enclosed climate-controlled mall.

HOSPITAL BUDGET

An Ontario government announcement to restrict 1971 budget increases at hospitals and nursing schools to 7.6 per cent will not affect the Oshawa General even though last year's increase was 8.5 per cent. The new regulation is based on gross expenditures while last year's was figured on net allowable expenditures.

Tyrone's mill scene of a hippie swim-in Scenes from around the mill pond at Tyrone, which brought on a hippie-swim-in.

What do these kids want ?

EDITOR'S NOTE: Last week belonged to the youth of Canada and the United States as they flocked to Mosport Park to listen and groove to music, swim in the Tyrone mill pond and just generally live in peace with their fellow man. They had high praise for the Ontario Provincial Police who went out of their way to be fair and co-operative. Inevitably, however, there will be those who criticise and wonder what these youngsters want out of life. As an answer, This Week presents the following views prepared by members of Oshawa's Youth Drop-In Centre.

Oshawa's "Hair Youth" are the drop out segment of our economic society. Their aims in life are hazy, often disjointed and misunderstood by a public that all too often judges them too harshly with little or no evidence to support their accusations. They are, according to public opinion, a dirty, drug-crazed, useless cult that is of absolutely no value to anyone and should be stamped off the face of the earth.

This unfortunate attitude toward "Hippiedom" is lunacy for, throughout history, when a cause was supressed it went underground and flourished. The Rise of Christianity is an excellent example of this phenomenon. Christ, theoretically, was a supressed hippie who went around preaching love, patience, forgiveness and the right to an independent existence. He advocated change, just as "Hair" is protesting "the system" and he, like these kids, was subjected to an unbelievable amount of bad publicity. Most of "Hair's" bad image stems directly from the free use of drugs which is condemned by a pill popping public that hypocritically tolerates the annual consumption of thousands of gallons of alcohol mixed liberally with mass carnage on the highways and violent deaths by the score.

Most of the "Hair" kids are pacifists. They are not afraid to fight, they simply don't want to waste the energy. There has never been a fight at the Drop-In in Oshawa. The kids there are anything but hostile. They are wary of anyone who could be from the police but, once a mutual trust has been established, they often communicate with a frightening openess and intensity.

Talking with any of them is an unnerving experience. They are a reasonably intelligent group of people. They attack ideas and social rituals that have been universally acceptable for years, using valid arguments to effectively destroy today's concept of a sense of value, and by so doing they leave one seriously questioning the aims and purposes of an established way of life. Long standing social attitudes are often totally rejected by them and replaced with their own ideas of a logical approach to social conduct. And yet they are an honest group, clean, unbelievably open and much more ethical than many businessmen.

Not all of them are like this, but the older guys most often are the most modified in their ideas. They protest, but they temper their convictions with the knowledge that they will soon have to make the decision of either being trapped for life by a non-productive system or they will have to work to eat. In many cities, Welfare Cheques have a limited life span.

Much of their philosophy is purely idealistic and, many of the kids are hypocritical by nature. They are joiners, protesting any form of authority. They grow long hair, wear tight jeans, go bare-footed, smoke pot or hash, and have a hell-of-a-time being different.

But they are a pleasant group of people to be around. Their feeling toward strangers if not outright friendly, is at least tolerant. The girls are strikingly attractive. Theirs is a felt sensuality of long hair falling on small shoulders, skin, tight pants, granny glasses and bare feet; a subtle mixture of youth, beauty, and sophistication. They are cool, unshakable and dedicated to the task of being absolutely bored with anything material

On the other hand the appearance of the male is almost primitive in comparison. Long hair is a throw back and it seems that the dirtier a man appears irregardless of his actual cleanliness the greater his strength. There is often a love-hate relationship that exists in the minds of "straight women" when confronted by these males. Natural repulsion occurs at the sight of all the hair and weird attire, and yet a deep, inner and natural feminine urge accepts this primitive male image and is often secretly attracted to it.

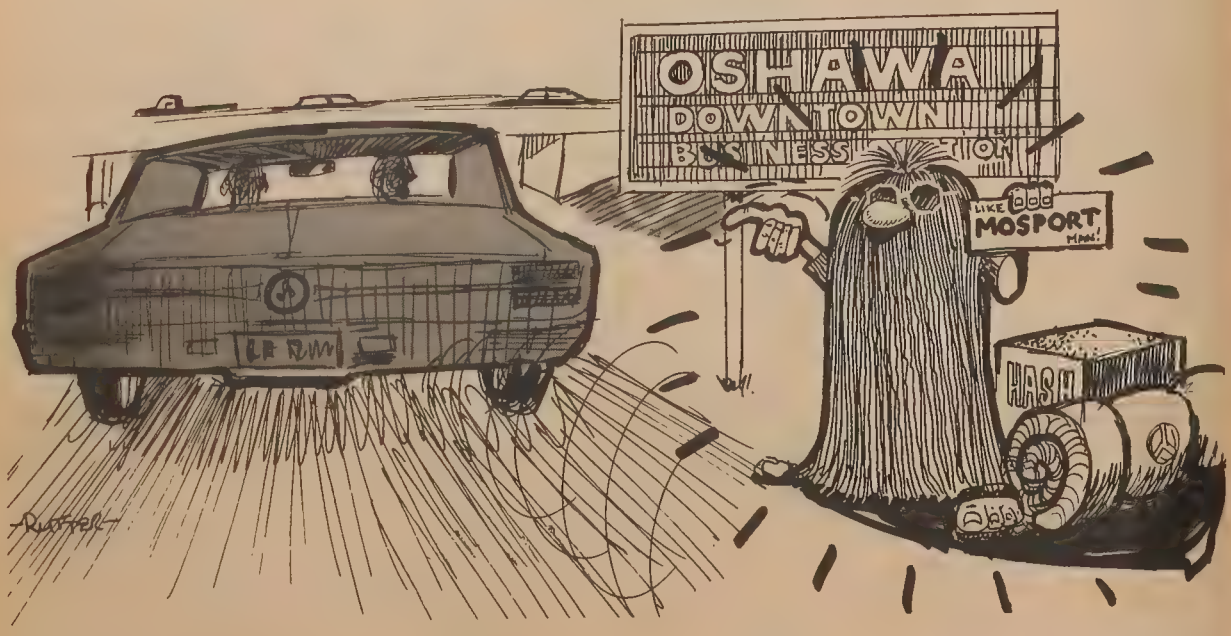
Among "hair kids" pot is often shared as a social thing, much like others use alcohol. But even the older ones are deeply concerned about the irresponsible intake of the young. It has been estimated that there are at least 200 "speed freaks" in Oshawa who are regularly strung out on "Meth." Their life expectancy is roughly three to five years from the time they start using the drug heavily. These kids know their drugs. They are completely aware of what they are doing to themselves and the thought that they don't care is frightening.

'HAIR KIDS'

Happy at rebelling, but looking for secure tomorrow

The problem exists, but it is being attacked from several angles. City-formed committees are presently hiring ex-users to supply the much needed first hand information on drug use, and effects. Older kids themselves are discouraging the use of bad drugs like speed or acid and, of course, the police are in there blindly pitching with their usual misguided zeal.

There is a limit on what can and cannot be made illegal and only two out of the three fronts are showing any real progress. The kids refuse to respect a law endorcement agency that condones the wrong doings of a "monied mass" and yet physically harrasses a youth for being caught with a half-ounce of pot in his possession. But a lot of this "Pig Panic" stems from a mutual misunderstanding and mistrust. Police officers are taught at their training academy to automatically expect trouble from the "Drug-crazed Hippie" who is constantly high on anything he can inject into his veins. The kids retaliate against this kind of stupidity by automatically rejecting the police as the ultimate symbol of authority.



Even the Drop In feels the fallout from this hostility, and even though it is a well run, orderly meeting place, it has rules that strictly forbid the use of drugs and liquor on the premises, parents often forbid their kids from attending and, on any night that it is open the police force is well represented in the area. "Hassling" the police is an inbred thing, part of the club image is to reject the "pigs". Many young kids adopt this feeling for no apparent reason, other than to project the generally accepted protest image

But the kids are careful of the image they do project. They would never admit to this, but a good example of this feeling is their current project, the publication of N.A.R.K., a youth oriented newspaper they hope will bridge the age gap between them and their parents. The paper is scheduled for release around the middle of this month and it will contain in-depth aticles, news stories, editorials and opinions written by the kids themselves. N.A.R.K., by the way, stands for Nice, Average, Respectable, Kids

Several Churches in the area were actually responsible for supplying the incentive that got the kids moving in a creative direction. The churches got together and jointly hired Ian Gamble as the Project Youth Co-ordinator to act as a guidance counsellor, friend, troubleshooter and liaison between the "Hair and the Square." Ian cares about the kids. He respects them and believes that with the right kind of guidance they can be a valuable contribution to a rapidly changing world. He works hard with a budget that is unfortunately far short of what he needs to get the job done

In the meantime the "Hair kids" are happy being different, rebelling and being secure in their club that only looks for a less strenuous and more secure tomorrow

editorial

We've all learned something

No doubt we haven't heard the last of the weekend's "festivities" at Mosport.

Opinions as to how successful or unsuccessful it was and what was good and/or no good about it vary. In fact there are probably 50,000 different views, one for each of the participants, plus a few other hundred thousand thrown in on behalf of all those who weren't there but followed the event in the news media.

Some of the pedlers of nasty drugs will be dealt with severely. Good.

Some of the kids from big American cities have taken home, along with all the polluton with which the Mosporters polluted themselves, a better understanding of their Canadian neighbors. They know that all policemen don't shove and push and hit and draw guns and are easily provoked.

The OPP officers we have seen on duty in the Mosport area on the weekend deserve a big hand. They used their good judgement. Had they not, Mosport could have turned into a disaster. Not that it didn't seem strange to see an OPP officer condone 20 people packed into and all over a convertible driving on a public highway, or people parking on bridges and hills, making for traffic hazards . . . .

The fact remains though, that Clarke Township's bylaw pertaining to Mosport and the type of activity for which the racetrack premises are to be utilized, was disregarded. The township council ruled earlier this year, no doubt on pressure from Clarke Township residents, that there were to be no rock festivals at Mosport. A clever organizer decided to have a rock festival after all, only under the guise of a motorcycle race.

That's what it looked like last week, before "Strawberry Fields" got going, and that's the way it turned out to be.

The rest is up to our lawmakers and our law enforcers.

The idea of great hordes of young people getting together for a jam session is great. At one Mosport visitor summed it up: "It's the greatest man, just being here together." But it has become more obvious than ever that close surveillance is necessary to prevent the merchants who sell pills and needles of destruction to carry on their trade at the expense of a lot of innocent kids.

Strawberry Fields at Mosport is perhaps best summed up this way: we've all learned something.

Settle it, gentlemen!

The Toronto Star in an editorial last week made the suggestion that perhaps it was time Prime Minister Trudeau put his hot shot labor minister, Bryce Mackasey on the post office dispute. We're beginning to wonder if even he could settle it.

Perhaps it's best the government sold its post offices to private enterprise. Maybe that way we can all get back to being able to count on getting our mail in the morning, or in the afternoon, or whenever we have expected it.

This nonsense of strikes and counter strikes has gone on for too long. And we're not the only ones who are becoming downright bitter about it all.

If the country's government is unable to come to terms with its postal workers, what can we expect when a real problem crops up?

Masquerading

The police of Washington D.C., in the pursuit of their duties will no longer be permitted to pose as reporters, according to a new policy adopted under pressure of complaints from news media.

The decisions to stop the priactice seems to have been made grudgingly. Nevertheless, it was made.

Similar policies should be adopted and enunciated by all police and military agencies which have been guilty of such subterfuge in the past.

There must be an awareness among public officials at all levels that the reliability, trustworthiness, honesty and effectiveness of ALL newsmen and women are seriously compromised whenever it is revealed or even suspected that people masquerading as reporters are, in truth, law enforcement agents.

So we ran this story last week about the apartment dweller, and how, under city bylaws he's allowed to have a barbecue on the balcony . . . .

And then there were these three lady-apartment dwellers who climbed in the phone to give the ditor a blast even hotter than all the hot air from the barbecue below. They made a point though. If you live on the top two or three floors of an apartment building, and the neighbors below are at it with the hamburgers and the hot dogs and the steaks, things one floor up can become pretty difficult. One woman phoned to say she hadn't been able to open her own balcony doors and windows for a week, during the supper hour . . . .

Anyone have any suggestions?

If anything, it means perhaps that the higher you're up in an apartment building, the lower the rent ought to be, instead of the other way 'round, and especially this time of year . . . .

And talking about "the higher you are", some people said there was a haze of smoke over Mosport by Sunday afternoon. I can put them at ease, though. It was just a nearby grassfire. You know, the ordinary kind of grass that grows in fields and lawns around here.

The family refused to give me the weekend off to mix with all my long-haired friends at Mosport, but I did manage to get in a few visits. The trip to Tyrone on Saturday was probably the highlight. Here were all those Tarzans and would-be Tarzans swinging from ropes in willow trees that surround the pond at Tyrone's mill. It was hot, and the water was cool, and the whole thing seemed to make a lot of sense . . . until I saw the pond from the air on Sunday.

I'm not sure if it has anything to do with the stirring up of the pond — I'll bet it hasn't seen so much action in all its history — but from about 1,500 feet up it looked much more like a cesspool. Incredibly dirty.

If you take a good look at this week's page four cartoon, on the opposite page, you're probably seeing a familiar sight. Things started out like that last Tuesday. Frank Rutter, the man who lays out all those smart looking ads in this paper, is the cartoonist. I'm very anxious now to get him to cover a city council meeting, scratchpad in hand. If he can do that kind of thing with a hippie's hairdo, can you imagine the results of a little work on Mayor Bruce Mackey's sideburns? Why, he could have the whole board of control sitting on the ends of the burns

As for the OPP patrolling the festival, their "U-2" planes (remember those) were up constantly, and mixed with some of the other sightseers from up high, I hear it was surprising there weren't any accidents in the Mosport sky. The ground patrol meanwhile was pretty amazing. Never before had I seen a convertible loaded with 16 or so kids, on the trunk and the sides and all over it, proceed past an OPP officer on a public highway, or for that matter a dozen guys hanging in and out of a Volkswagen

Here's a little something to "back up" the classified advertising campaign I'm running in this week's This Week.

Holidays are approaching, and the livestock at the house is becoming a bit of a problem. Both cats presented us with four kittens and 10 felines is a little much around any house. The kids tell me the kittens are house — and lawn broken, and you can make of that whatever you want. They all have names, though they don't necessarily come when called. Some look like purebred miniature Holsteins, others are more the Swiss kind. And I'm in deep trouble for having mentioned this, because I'm outvoted when it comes to the number of cats the Brouwer household can or cannot put up with.

If you're part of a family with school age children, try the "who's who game" sometime and see how much of the radio or television news or of what they read in the newspapers, registers with the kids. Ours are elementary school age. Who's the PM and the Premier of the province and the mayor and all that is easy. But then you ask who's the mayor of Montreal, and one of them answers "it's Desmond somebody . . . " Pretty good going for the mayor of Whitby, I'd say. And ask them sometimes what a mayor does all day. Here are two answers I collected on the weekend.

What does Mayor Mackey do?

Youngest answer: "He sits on a big fancy throne in city hall, with a crown on his head, and people come before him. Two girls wave palm branches to keep him cool." (How's that, your worship?)

Older answer: "He sits crouched over a desk all day, books and letters piled up high on his desk, his glasses on the tip of his nose, he shouts into the telephone, orders for the garbage trucks to go out to pick up some stuff, and the sweat is just pouring from his forehead."

A third answer that shot the two previous ones down was that the whole city hall is airconditioned, and it's a great place to work, "and I know 'cause I've been there."

In the same vein was the question "what does the prime minister do?" It got one reply that had him travelling "from coast to coast and through the world all the time, with a big jet, and mommy and daddy have to pay for it."

As far as the Premier is concerned, "he goes for balloon rides" remembered one from a page one newspaper story not so long ago.

I hear there are plans underway for an Oshawa Press Club. A committee of organizers is in the process of approaching local businessmen and one of the hotels to find accommodation and support. Wouldn't it be nice if This Week and last week could sit down together with people from the Times and the radio and cable and the three newspapers in Whitby and so on, to plan for a better community. That's what they do at pressclubs, and you probably never thought of it that way.

If you're having as much luck getting a hold of people this week as I have had, you'll find half are out on vacation, half have just returned and the other half is about to leave on holidays.

I'm faced with some major decisions on accommodation, transportation and how not to forget the axe on our upcoming camping trip.

May the next column come to you with a sprinkling of beach sand on the paper and the odd drop of lake water and fire water thrown in for good measure.

by tom douglas

Two men enter the room and immediately those assembled stop talking. The first man is rather handsome, except for a ski-jump nose and blue jowls that give him a sinister look.

The second man is larger and rather awkward-looking. His facial characteristics resemble a deer-hound that has just lost the scent and is fractically trying to pick it up again.

The two newcomers mount a low platform and the bigger man remains on his feet while his companion slumps in a throne-like chair.

The bigger man shuffles from one foot to the other, staring out over the large group sitting in front of him. He looks several times as though he is about to speak but continues to stare silently out over the crowd and then finally clears his throat.

"Gentlemen, we have asked you to come here today because we feel it is time we made a few comments about the small band of weirdos and rabble-rousers who are disrupting our country and undermining the freedom we have fought to maintain," he says.

"We would also like to take to task those of you who pay so much attention to this group of ruffians and blow up their cause way out of proportion. You are the opinion formers and we think it's time you started telling what's right about this country instead of being so ready to criticize it."

There is a rumble of discontent from the audience and several of the gathering get up and leave the hall in dusgust. The big man is visibly distrubed by this and turns to his companion who indicates by a nod of his head that he wishes the speaker to continue.

"It's very easy to play up the outcries of the vocal minority in this country, but they are a bunch of radicals. What about the silent majority of our citizens who agree with our policies but don't come forward to discuss them? Shouldn't you be seeking them out and asking them their opinions?"

At this point, one of the assembly jumps to his feet and directs a question at the speaker: "Why should we seek out the people who are content with things? If there is discontent in this country, shouldn't we act as a public forum to try to get to the root of the problem and solve it?"

The man on the platform stares angrily at the speaker in the audience: "Now that's the kind of radical talk that can get you people into a lot of trouble," he says. "We admit you have a right to discuss things, but if you abuse that right, well, I wouldn't like to think that we'd have to start putting restrictions on what you say, but you might leave us little choice!"

Another rumble of discontent runs through the audience, but the man on the platform seems to ignore it as he continues: "Just recently, one of those long-haired, bearded bums was arrested on a charge of killing a number of upstanding citizens. I believe my superior here would like to say a few words about this."

The big man turns to his seated companion who then rises to his feet and comes to the edge of the platform. He addresses the group in a deep voice charged with emotion.

"Let me say this about that," he begins. "You people have got to stop turning these criminals into folk heroes by playing up their crimes and glamorizing them.

"This man my colleague was referring to is a man who was guilty, directly or indirectly, of eight murders without reason."

A look of shocked disbelief sweeps across the audience and another man jumps to his feet: "Sir, isn't this man you're talking about on trial at present? Couldn't you be prejudicing his trial by making such a statement?"

The two men on the platform go into a worried huddle and then the big man addresses the audience: "Gentlemen, don't get us wrong. We did not intend to speculate as to whether the defendent is guilty. What we meant to say is, uh, well, that is

By this time, pandemonium has broken loose in the hall as the town criers fall over each other in their hurry to leave the building and start spreading the news. The two men on the platform stare dejectedly at each other, sadly shaking their heads over the blunder they have made.

That afternoon, the streets of England ring out with the following cries:

"Hear ye, hear ye. Today, King John and the Sheriff of Nottingham accused Robin Hood of being guilty of the murder of eight good men and true. Robin Hood is on trial at the moment for the murder of these men ane experts believe his trial has been prejudiced by these statements.

"A country-wide outcry has arisen over the king's statements and a reliable source has indicated that the landed barons are at work at this time drawing up a Magna Carta designed to guarantee rights and privileges to all men, be they serfs or nobles

Oshawa posties speak out

Keane added that the post office department is treating the workers like a bunch of children.

"Some of the stuff they've pulled is really petty," he said. "There's so much confusion that nobody knows what's happening and it makes us look bad to the public. But when they lock us out of the post office, they're locking out the public as well.

Keane was referring to post office action Friday afternoon when men on the 11:30 p.m. shift were called and told not to report for work. The postal workers considered this a lock-out and walked off the job.

In retaliation, the workers struck the post office Sunday evening as part of the national procedure of calling 24-hour strikes in various parts of the country.

Marchbank said both unions at the local post office are on a three-hour standby in case they are ordered by national office to participate in a 24-hour strike.

"People think this is just haphazard, but it isn't," he said. "A lot of thought goes into where and when the various locals will go on strike."

Nantais added that the unions are trying to put pressure on the public, especially big business, so that they'll lose confidence in the post office and use other means of sending mail.

"If we can win the battle by jabbing, we'll do that rather than go out on a national strike," he said. "We want the public to start putting pressure on the government. We've been trying to do that for 10 months and it hasn't done much good."

Coming down Simcoe Street with an empty bag early in the morning

Top wage for a letter carrier is $2.99 an hour while a clerk makes $3.14 an hour. It takes a man three years to make this top wage.

"I don't know of anyone at thepost office who doesn't have a part-time job or a wife who has to work," said Marchbank. "We're the guinea pigs for this 6 per cent wage guideline. Other unions have settled above that figure in the past couple of months in government contracts.

"Some unions have gone up as far as 26 per cent. We're not asking for anything like that. Nobody wants to take the taxpayer for that much money."

"No, but if we were salesmen and the boss said I want your workload to increase by 15 to 20 per cent but I'm only going to give you a 6 per cent increase in wages, we'd holler and everyone would think we were justified," said Nantais.

The consensus of the union officers during the interview was that the only way the post office is going to get on its feet is by bringing in 20th century ideas.

"For instance, we have a suggestion box at work for ways in which to improve service," said Clark. "You get a pen and pencil set for your suggestion. I have more pens and pencils than I know what to do with. There are better incentives than that."

The men were also bitter about government claims that the unions have not budged in their contract demands.

"We originally asked for 45 cents in a one-year contract," said Nantais. "Now we're asking for 60 cents over two year. If that isn't budging, I don't know what is."

Pools oasis

In spite of a slow start in July the warmer weather which arrived later in the month made the four city operated swimming pools welcome asis for those who spend at least some of the summer in the city.

A tabulation shows Centennial Pool led the field with an attendnace figure of 9446 for public swimming. Second was Somerset pool with a total of 9174 followed by the municipal pools in Rotary Park with 7263. The General Vanier pool, the LSD-- A HALLUCINOGENIC. IT GIVES A "DANGER" TRIP!

LSD, a man-made chemical, was first discovered in 1938. Researchers are still trying to find a way to administer this drug safely for possible medical benefits.

It cannot be sold legally, even with a prescription. Pharmacies do not stock it. It is mass distributed by criminal "pushers." It is made in clandestine laboratories with unpredictable strength. A speck of LSD can cause lasting dangerous effects.

Users speak of "good or bad trips." Either one increases the heart rate, the blood pressure and temperature, dilates the pupils, causes irregular breathing, nausea and loss of appetite.

The next issur of these Public Service messages will tell about the happenings on some LSD "Good and Bad Trips."

SENIORS SCENE

On the move all year round

By Audrey MacLean

The elderly citizenry like the youth of the country are on the move, scanning the length and breadth of our nation and its bordering neighbours, enjoying the landscape and its inhabitants.

Hundreds of thousands of our senior population are taking advantage of their good health and free time to plan trips here and there. It may be a visit to relatives in Vancouver or an extended bus tour of the Maritimes but whatever the destination, flexibility is the keynote.

Both Canadian airlines, Air Canada and Canadian Pacific offer all citizens of the country 65 years of age and over, passes to travel anywhere in Canada for half the regular fare. There are conditions of course, like proof of age and no advance flight reservations (you have to travel on slack days) but the advantages by far outnumber the restrictions. Afterall when you have lots of time and can avoid the hustle and bustle of weekend traffic any trip or wait over in an airport could be enjoyable.

The railways and some bus transportation agencies also offer special rates for slack periods and with the opportunity to travel at leisure during off season the retired individual generally speaking can go where he wants, how he wants and do what he wants at considerably less than the every day traveller.

Last years' new Government regulations added a bonus in approving low group economy fares to Great Britain and the Continent. So attractive are these rates that groups can plan well ahead for next summer and when you are retired and living on a limited budget planning ahead is essential.

While on the subject of reduced rates for senior citizens, just a reminder that any resident of the city of Oshawa who is 65 or over can travel throughout the city at half the regular fare which realizes a considerable saving in a month or two if bus transportation is used daily. Special passes for this are issued at the Centre.

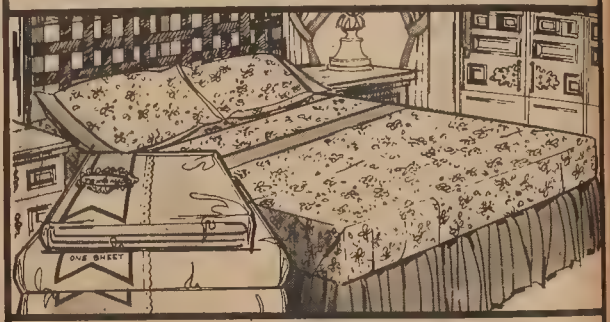
In November of last year to meet the demand for holiday trips, the Oshawa Senior Citizens Club organized a Travel Group which meets regularly on the first and third Wednesday of each month at 2:00 pm. This active group under the leadership of Chairman: Cyril Weeks and Co-Chairmen: Alex McCleery and Alice Rodgers have five trips to their credit including a two week excursion to Florida in February.

When the group meets the program includes films on travel provided and operated by the staff of the McLaughlin Public Library, Film Department; travel talk and discussion on "where are we going next". The attendance at these regular meetings ranges from 45 to 85 depending on the travel interest and the other activities going on simultaneously at the Centre.

Three trips are scheduled within the next four weeks with reservations coming hard and fast for Muskoka Lakes Boat Tour for August 11, which is sold out with a waiting list. A second trip planned for August 25 to Thousand Islands still has a few seats left and the third trip takes place on September 1st to the Canadian National Exhibition (Senior Citizens Day at the Ex.), with some seats still available.

Club Hours: Monday to Friday 9 am to 9 pm Saturday 6 pm to 10:30 pm

RAIL SITE



The city has called in planning engineers from the CNR and CPR to plan for the extension of the main Montreal to Toronto rail line into a proposed 13-acre site for a proposed new $10-million iron ore smelter in the Oshawa Harbor area. Fetio Indusrial Developments Ltd. of Hamilton announced plans for the smelter July 14

The gardens at Parkwood never looked lovelier than last Wednesday evening when Colonel R. S McLaughlin invited guests to enjoy their midsummer beauty

The guests strolled along the flagstone paths beside the spreading lawns and stood in silent groups on the terrace absorbing the majestic sight of the flood-lit fountains in the Italian garden

The golden jets arched high on the windless air as if to engulf the pale crescent moon before it disappeared behind the trees

The deep borders burgeoned with bloom. — Canterbury bells, zinnias, petunias, marigolds nestled amid dark red foliage. Geraniums stood like standard rose trees and beds of begonias looked like oriental carpets spread under the trees

The sound of footsteps on a gravel path: the soft murmur of voices; the splash of the fountains and the sweet scent of nicotine wafting on the night air — that is the memory of a rare evening in August at Parkwood

The host was unable to greet his guests and they in turn, were unable to thank him personally for his kindness and consideration. The thought was expressed among themselves because, like many well-remembered Parkwood parties, it was a coming together of old friends, some just returned from vacations, others on the point of departure

The colored lights concealed in the shrubs and trees cast vague shadows and by ten o'clock the throng dissolved into them and quietness descended

Earlier in the evening, Edward Philip Oscapella had presented his Concert Number Four in the McLaughlin Public Library

This was an all-Mozart program with two pianos With Pam Wharram he played the Sonata in C major (18th Century Drawing Room). Pam played the Mozart sonata and Oscapella the second piano part written by Edvard Grieg

With Jeannette Taves he played the 1st movement of the A major Concerto for Piano

Jeannette Taves opened the program with the Sonata in B flat. Susan Schultz played Fantasia in D minor and Pam and Susan, duo pianists, played three waltzes

Quite outstanding performances were given by these talented young pianists

Tonight Edward Philip Oscapella will present an all-Chopin program under the auspices of the Oshawa Recreation Department

Oshawa to have English fish and chips

Anglo-Saxons, and many others, will experience deep feelings of nostalgia when Haddon Salt opens Oshawa's first authentic English Fish and Chip Shop tomorrow at 932 Simcoe Street North

Fish and chips are a British institution. Haddon Salt, who for business and advertising purposes, likes to add the traditional "Esq." to his name, was born in the rolling midlands of Derbyshire England in 1928. His ruddy complexion and twinkling blue eyes are as typically English as his bowler and umbrella. Fish and chips entered his life when he was 16 and the family moved to Skegness, where his father opened a succession of fish and chip shops

Subsequently, Haddon Salt took over his father's business and extended it to the U.S.A. By 1969 there were over 100 H. Salt Eq. authentic English Fish and Chips shops in the U.S. chain and Salt had become a multi-millionaire

Now the H. Salt Eq. shops are being introduced to Canada and have already been opened in Windsor (2 shops), Chatham, London, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Hamilton The eighth is now being opened in Oshawa at 932 Simcoe Street North

One reason the chain has been successful, Salt believes, is because he has stubbornly retained the original British character of the enterprise. Salt feels that good food is international, that is to say that food of any nation will be appreciated by people of other countries, provided it is of top quality

A second major reason for his product's popularity, and Salt is insistent about this, is that all his fish come from the Arctic-cold water of the North Atlantic. Cold fish is demonstrably firmer, sweeter and generally more delectable than fish taken from warmer water, he says. The North Atlantic catch is also vigorously inspected for quality.

Strict quality controls are also carried through all the franchise operations, where regular inspections keep each H Salt shop up to company standards. New franchise operators must attend the company's College of Fish and Chips before they can hang out their H. Salt Master Fryer's sign.

And now a word about the history of fish and chips. Fish and potatoes have probably been eaten together in England since the discovery of fire - "Fish and chips" sold together, however, date from the 1860's when a vendor mounted a small stove on a two-wheeled cart and began hawking his wares on the British streets and docksides The fish popularly thought to be "a nice bit of plaice", more often cod, was dunked in batter, the potatoes sliced, and both fried in hot fat.

In olden days in England it was customary to sell fish and chips wrapped in a piece of daily newspaper. Today Haddon Salt preserves this tradition, but in a much happier way. When you buy fish and chips at an H. Salt store today, you get them on a cardboard tray wrapped in a neat outer paper container printed to simulate a sheet from the London Times of January, 1788

"Great bunch of young people" - Youth Theatre

The Orono Youth Theatre got an important boost recently when Herbert Whittaker, drama critic for the Toronto Globe and Mail, had high praise for the presentation of Dark of the Moon.

"They're a great bunch of young people" is how Whittaker described the Orono players. "Murray Twist as the Witch Boy. . .makes his yearning for a soul as convincing as his accent and provides the true focus of the evening.

"Candy Storks is a sincere Barbara Allen. . .she is effectively distraught in the scene where she gives birth to a witch and later when driven by the congregation to being unfaithful to her converted witch husband."

Whittaker also praises Keith Allin as the rapist of Barbara Allen and Jim Westheuser and Val Watson as Barbara's parents

"There were several happy contributions from individuals in the congregation, also a handsome joint confession by Hermine Kerekes and Glen Madill," said Whittaker. "The whole cast throws itself with enthusiasm into the old-time singing and the shouting and the soul-searching which leads up to the rape

The Orono Youth Theatre was formed when a disagreement arose with the organizers of Newcastle's Great Pine Ridge Festival where the youth theatre under director Roy Higgins had performed for two years.

Since Aug. 4 and until the end of the month, the youth theatre is presenting Dark of the Moon. Antigone and Indians daily except Monday and Friday. Performances are at the Orono Theatre at 8:15 p.m.

Tonight the group will give another performance of Dark of the Moon while theatre goers have a chance to see Antigone Thursday evening. Indians will be performed for the first time next Tuesday.

Also on that date, a Western Steak Barbecue will be held prior to curtain time at Orono Park. Those interested are invited to "have a cold swim in the pool, enjoy a delicious 12 ounce steak and be entertained at the theatre." Advance reservations are necessary.

Oshawa members of the company include Philip Akin, Marilyn Burnett, Monica A. Connolly, Gordon Crawford, Jane and Rossie Grose, Eileen McQuarrie, Robert Paynter and Herschel Rosen.

JOHNNY GUY BACK AGAIN

Johnny Guy and the Sugar 'n Spice return by popular demand for another command performance at the Gold Rush Inn, Central Hotel.

Co-starring with Johnny are Trish Guy, Mary Steele and Ray Harrison.

Johnny Guy considers Oshawa his home because it was here that he started his business career at General Motors. However it was not long before his rare combination of personality and talent drew him in to the entertainment world, where he has become one of the fastest rising stars on the circuit today.

Smash appearances throughout the show centres of Ontario, New York State and Las Vegas have made this talented young performer and his all-star cast one of the most sought after shows in the entertainment world today.

Johnny Guy and the Sugar 'n Spice are at the Gold Rush Inn for this week. Join the biggest party ever held in Oshawa.

The night shift

To help you beat the heat enjoy the Cool Sweat, a five-man group entertaining at the Cadillac Hotel. Catering especially to the young they all sing and play rock and western.

A group that has enjoyed success at the Central, John Guy and Sugar 'n Spice will be performing this week, at the Gold Rush Inn.

The Oshawa Carousel plays the 'Sound of brass', with a five-man group from Las Vegas, the Fabulous Eli.

The Par Four, the Georgian's own local group will entertain for you this week. Featured on Saturday as an extra attraction is Rick Elliot.

An 'Electrifying Group' the High Voltage featuring Billie Joe Butterfield is playing at the Genosha Hotel. Three guys and two gals play rock and roll favorites.

Held over for the final week, the Lancaster hosts Shirley Field Show before they leave on their tour of the U.S. Modern music, country music and comedy rolled into an entertainment package of good listening.

the work of the chief of the Washington, D. C. police force and said he considers him a man acceptable to change.

"I don't think any municipality in the world is under more stress than Washington. They have had tremendous riots and demonstrations. Demonstrations have to be allowed as long as they are within the law.

"Washington's chief is making a lot of headway by changing his way of thinking. He's keeping the people happy, he's keeping the politicians happy and he's keeping the diplomats happy."

Chief Jenkins said on-street justice would be like taking the law into one's own hands and the law must be respected by everyone, including policemen.

"No one is denying that there are a lot of laws on the books that need changing, but as long as they are the laws, we have to enforce them.

"I think it's awful to charge a 19 or 20-year-old boy with minor consuming. I'm not saying at what age he should be allowed to drink, but it's time someone took the bull by the horns and did something about it."

The chief said there is no doubt that the image of the police in the United States and Canada has been damaged considerably and cases of police killings and beatings have risen tremendously.

"Something has caused this and I don't know what it is. But I do know that we're not going to help things by sticking to the old hard line. We have to be more realistic."

Chief Jenkins said police must be more modern in their thinking, always remebering, however, that the law is the law.

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

Ever since the time I first touched a live elephant and felt the roughness of its skin the animals and people of the circus world have held a strange fascination for me. Who are these people that risk death twice a day on the high wire and in the lions cage for the roar of the crowd? Do they do it for fun or profit or is it something that gets into the blood of the performer and drives them on?

Perhaps the answers to these questions will be answered this Friday night when several circus acts will perform just outside the East End mall on the parking lot. From 7 till 8 p.m. Cablecast 8 will televise the acts live and then later in the next week play the recorded performance for those who missed it. Because of importance of this show for entertainment value, special cameras are coming down to handle the many acts scheduled. If you want to see them live then be at the East Mall, 600 King St. East around 7 p.m. or watch it on channel 8.

The Rock Festival and Motorcycle races at Mosport are now history, and funny history at that. Every time we tried to do some work with the cameras some liberated hippy would walk on the scene in his birthday suit and ruin whatever we tried to do so we just gave up and gawked at the spectacle. After all how much editing can you do with in one short segement of tape and still have it make sense.

With the lacrosse playoffs in high swing it's almost impossible to get an accurate schedule as the eliminations go on but as many as possible of the events will be presented, so all fans who have an interest in this venerable Indian game, watch the message board for the latest word.

Thursday the Police, Fireman and, local financial experts will be on to bring the viewers up to date on their respective duties. As a matter of fact the financial report will become a weekly one with all the latest news in the investment world and the bull market, whatever that is.

Next Tuesday a series on folk music begins called "MY KIND OF FOLK" and it originates from one of the network studios in London.s-30-

12 new faculty brings Durham staff to 71

Twelve new faculty members are presently undergoing an orientation program at Durham College in preparation for teaching duties Sept. 14

John F. Potts, a graduate of California State College and the University of Waterloo, has joined the applied arts division of the college as an assistant master. He has several years teaching experience as well as having participated in group counselling for the probation department of Juvenile Hall, San Leandro, Calif

W. D Birch, a new master in the technology division, graduated from the University of Saskatchewan with a bachelor of science degree and obtained his master of science diploma in Dayton Ohio

He served in the Royal Canadian Air Force for 18 years, retiring with the rank of Squadron Leader

Mrs. Ages Glenn, a graduate of Queen's University, has taught commercial subjects for seven years and has been an occasional teacher of Manpower Retraining subjects. She will be an assistant master in Durham's business division

W. N. Bodnar has two years' experience lecturing in engineering technology in Thunder Bay. An associate master in the technology division, he is a graduate of Lakehead College, Michigan University and the University of Toronto

Russell B. Goodchild, with a background in mechanical engineering, will be teaching as an assistant master in the technology division. His experience consists of 14 years in electro-mechanical engineering, progressing from junior engineer through design project engineer and promotion to chief engineer

Ronald J. Munro, an associate master in Durham's business division, is presently working towards his master's degree at the University of Toronto. He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Windsor

William O'Brien, a technician in the applied arts division, studied advertising design at the Ontario College of Art He worked for 18 months with the Scarborough Board of Education in the area of audio-visual communications and formed his own company in audio-visual services

Douglas Glynn, an assistant master in the applied arts division, is a graduate of the Larry Henderson Television School and is working towards his bachelor of arts degree

He has been a freelance radio broadcaster and has experience writing for The Globe and Mail, Toronto Star, Hamilton Spectator and the Toledo Blade

Bruce Tuck, a recent graduate of Lake Superior State College of Michigan Technological University with a bachelor of science degree in business administration, is an associate master in the business division. His background includes 16 years in the purchasing department of Algoma Steel Corporation in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, latterly as office supervisor.

Ralph E. Laing, a part-time instructor at Durham last year, has joined the applied arts division full-time as a commercial art and photography instructor. He is the proprietor of Laing Studio in Oshawa

Robert Sablin, an electronic technology graduate from Ryerson, is no stranger to Durham College, having installed and maintained its General Electric 405 computer system. He will serve as an assistant master in the technology division

John Lackner, a graduate of York University with a B.A. in psychology and of Toronto Teachers' College, will instruct in the applied arts division as an assistant master

The new faculty members brings the total staff in Durham's four divisions to 71 plus six technicians. Projected enrollment for September is 550-600 full-time students in applied arts, business and technology, another 600 or more in the Retraining Division and 1,500 enrollees in various night school courses.

Legionaires win semi

The Oshawa Senior Legionnaires won the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association Lakeshore Intermediate semi-finals Saturday with a 9-1 win over the Bowmanville Electrons at Soper Creek Park in Bowmanville

The Legionaires will be in the Ontario Baseball Association play-offs within the next few weeks. They enter the playoffs as the only intermediate A Major team in the area

The Legionaires' win Saturday was particularly notworthy since this is their first year in the league. They had a fine season with 16 wins and four losses playing against Port Hope, Bowmanville, Little Britain and Kendal as well as participating in an interlocking schedule with Trenton, Belleville and the Oshawa Junior Legionaires.

Darin Bird, a student at University of New Brunswick, pitched Saturday's game. His regular season record was six wins and one loss. The first game in the playoffs against Bowmanville saw Gary Carroll pitch a three-hitter to beat the Electrons 14-0

Other players on the team include Pat Watters, catcher, who lead the league with a .542 batting average, Bob Reid, first base, Ted Lutton at second, Butch Dowe, shortstop and Ted Whitely at third Outfielders include Tony Jones, Paul Borchuk, Clyde Smith, Ross Hayes and Russ Hall. Relief pitchers are Dave Waite, Dave Whitely and John Fair.

Gord Johnston and Jim Fegan coach and manage the team while Jim Bishop is base coach

Dance tonight at centre

The Oshawa Recreation Department and the Oshawa Shopping Centre are sponsoring a Free Open Air Dance for the youth today, August 12 at 8 p.m.

There will be barrels of refreshments for all at the dance located on the Southeast corner of the Oshawa Shopping Centre parking lot.

The Atlantis, a six-piece band from Toronto will be performing.

The Youth Department has had its ups and downs throughout the summer in scheduling activities for the kids in Oshawa. Free concerts at Memorial Park Bandshell have met with much opposition from residents in the area A concert scheduled for Sunday, August 9, was cancelled because of residents' complaints to city council. The veterans are worried about vandalism to the memorial.

The Leathercraft classes have been going very well. Since the materials are supplied free and anyone between 13-21 is welcome, the classes have been informal and the kids are making everything from leather arm-bands to pouches.

An art teacher from an Oshawa highschool is instructing in the pottery, sculpture, silkscreen and printing class and it also has received good response.

Oshawa and area groups entertain every Thursday night to good crowds at the Coffee House and the admission is 25¢.

Hyde Park Day 'Youth Voice Your Opinions' scheduled for Saturday, August 8 didn't get off the ground as expected because of the Mosport Festival.

The Youth Department closes August 21, and Joanne Button, a chief member in organizing says the work has 'taken a lot out of me,' but, she says, "I hope we have helped the kids enjoy their summer."

smallest, had an attendaance of 4836. In all a total of 30,692 children and adults sought relief from the heat with a dip in one of the pools.

If the current hot spell persists into August this record may well be broken. Scores of people also made use of the lakefront swimming beach however a tally there is very difficult.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Lee were united in marriage in Port Perry United Church on July 4th. The bride, the former Joanne Vander Heide is the daughter of Mrs. Alice Vander Heide and the late Mr. Sybren Vander Heide, Oshawa. The groom is the son of Mr & Mrs. Elmer W. Lee of Port Perry

Vol. 1, No. 13 — in oshawa, whitby and area — Wednesday August 19, 1970

Miss Oshawa, Mister Oshawa and Miss Tulsa in the civic square.

Miss Tulsa in Oshawa

Two misses are hit with Mayor

Anyone fortunate enough to be passing by the fountain at City Hall at 4:30 p.m. Aug. 11 got a double eyeful

At that time, Roxanne MacKenzie, Miss Oshawa, was giving a rundown on the city to another beauty queen, Debbie Garrison, 18, Miss Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Miss Garrison, a member of the Youth Choir of the First Baptist Church of Tulsa, had just been presented to Miss MacKenzie and Mayor Bruce Mackey in a short ceremony in City Council Chambers.

The choir was in Oshawa to perform at Memorial Park and was invited to the City Hall complex by Mayor Mackey who outlined to its members a bit of the background of the Motor City

Miss Garrison won the tile of Miss Tulsa in April and was runner-up to Miss Oklahoma in a contest in June. She will be attending Tulsa University in the fall and intends to major in music with hopes of becoming an entertainer upon graduation.

Miss Tulsa, a member of the choir for four years, was very impressed with Ontario's greenery and — all you residents presently sweltering in this heat take note — Oshawa's moderate climate.

Apparently the temperature in Tulsa these days is well above the 100-degree mark if that's any consolation.

The 60-member choir visited Oshawa as part of a two-week visit to Ontario that included concerts in Toronto and St. Catherines

The First Baptist Church of Oshawa acted as host to the visiting singers and included a visit to Camp Samac on the sight-seeing tour taken by the group.

Says Mayor Newman

Amalgamation red herring

The proposed amalgamation of Oshawa and Whitby has been called a red herring.

This was the term used by Whitby mayor Des Newman in a recent interview with This Week in taking a stand exactly opposite that of Mayor Bruce Mackey of Oshawa.

"In regional government, there is a great responsibility to maintain community spirit," he said. "If we start off with the amalgamation of Oshawa and Whitby, everything such a municipality would say had to be done would create distrust among the other members of the region."

Newman said what regional government must do is create an environment in which people can enjoy living and open spaces must be preserved wherever possible.

"It is our duty to set up priorities in relation to those things that are important to the region as a whole as well as to individual municipalities I am not very enthused by other approaches that seem to me very superficial.

"We need an association of municipalities in the region in a co-operative relationship to maintain a sense of unity and a sense of balance."

Mayor Newman could not agree with Mayor Mackey's contention that an amalgamated Oshawa-Whitby is necessary to offset the city of Hamilton in the provincial government's plan for Greater Toronto

"Oshawa per se could never hope to balance Hamilton. Eastern Ontario as a whole must get preference in relation to the incentive thrust from the provincial government.

"We're living in a time of competition. We have to provide a voice to attract development in our area and as far as I'm concerned, the regional vehicle is the only way to provide it."

The Whitby chief magistrate said the amalgamation plan is a pretty introverted way to look at regional government from the point of view of the city of Oshawa and the town of Whitby

"If our aim is to take a position of supremacy in the region. then perhaps

Everyone but Rip VanWinkle here today

If Rip Van Winkle were alive today, he'd be in Oshawa — not because the Motor City is a good place to catch up on sleep, but because today is the day for the General Motors Gold Cup Tournament in Rip's favorite sport — lawn bowling.

Sixty-four rinks from all over Ontario and from as far away as Florida are vying for the gold cup at this moment and will be doing so until 10 o'clock tonight.

With four men to a team, there are 256 bowlers anxiously awaiting the outcome of this the 31st annual competition being held at the Oshawa Lawn Bowling Club on McMillan Drive.

The event got underway at 9 a.m. today with a representative of General Motors throwing the opening bowl while Scottish pipers played in the background.

Last year's winner, a rink skipped by Jack Tiatti of Oshawa, will be on hand to attempt to gain the first prize

Also on hand for the tournament as a participant is Gordon MacMillan, a dominion singles champion. He will skip a rink made up of his father Sam, Bill Tewksbury of Florida and Jack Hunter, chairman of this year's Gold Cup

Hunter told This Week that his one regret of the tournament is that Charlie Peacock, a long-time lawn bowler, now in his 90's, will not be able to attend the tournament since his is confined to hospital.

SHORT TAKES

GRANT REJECTED
Controller Christine Thomas, who worries that children have to be paid to do everything, was successful in having the board of control reject, for this year anyway, a request by the Oshawa Safety Council for a grant increase of as much as $795 to buy jackets for the best school safety patrol.

BANDING
Oshawa's Fish and Wildlife Advisory Committee will continue banding ducks at the Second Marsh duck-banding area on a year-to-year basis until a new deep-water harbour is built, Ed Kroll, an advisory committee member, announced last week that a suitable arrangement had been worked out with the Oshawa Harbour Commission.

MILK WAR
Using milk as a loss leader to attract customers is apparently working for Oshawa's chain grocery stores but is hurting the small store. Several small store operators have indicated that they are feeling the pinch of the larger stores' practice of cutting milk prices in order to attract customers who buy other products.

DELEGATES
Oshawa was well-represented at last week's 52nd annual meeting of the 34,000-member Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario. Delegates from the Motor City included Margaret Knight, Susan Sandford, Jane Manning, Marlyn Black, Linda Edwards, Helen Pardon, Sharon Holmes, Ena Brooks, Mrs. Carol Munro and Mrs. H. Richards.

GOLDEN
A mass at Holy Cross Roman Catholic Church began the recent 50th anniversary celebrations for Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Gibbens of Burk Street. The affair, attended by the couple's nine children, included a dinner and dance for family and friends at the Credit Union Hall.

REJECTED
A complaint by 20 Bloor Street East residents against expropriation by the city of land for road expansion has been rejected by a provincial enquiry officer. The official ruled that the expropriation, part of an $89,000 road-widening project by the city was "fair, sound and reasonably necessary"

COOL HEAD
Police of Moose Falls, Ont. praised the calm thinking of 17-year-old Valerie McGill of Oshawa last week when her car plunged into 25 feet of water after crashing through two guard rails. Miss McGill waited until the car filled with water and then swam through the window to safety.

NO MIRACLES
Ed Broadbent, Oshawa-Whitby MP, told a Timmins audience Thursday that despite what some party officials suggest, his New Democratic Party could not solve all of Canada's problems if they gained power. Mr. Broadbent is on tour at present in hopes of garnering enough support to take over party leadership.

MISS BOWMANVILLE
Sylvia Katzer, a 16-year-old Courtice high school student, was chosen Miss Bowmanville at ceremonies before a crowd of 2,000 Friday night. The winner, officially called Miss Kinsman 50th Anniversary Carnival Queen, won $500 worth of gifts. Runners-up were Patsy Blake and Rosemary Casganetto.

WALK-OUT
A walk-out by about 100 men at Houdaille Industries Ltd. Friday night caused the shut-down of the plant. The men, members of United Auto Workers, Local 222, walked off the job reportedly because of the suspension of two fellow workers who had refused to work outside their job classification.

REMANDED
William Middlemiss of 376 Buena Vista Avenue was remanded to Whitby Psychiatric Hospital Friday for a period not exceeding 60 days at a court appearance before Judge D.B. Dodds. Middlemiss had been charged with attempting to murder his wife one week ago today.

INSPECTIONS
Some 400 local motorists had their vehicles inspected last week by a team from the Ontario Department of Transport. Oshawa police pulled cars off the road at random for the test and gave owners of faulty vehicles time to have the defects fixed.

NEW SCHOOLS
Two new schools are ready for occupancy when Oshawa youngsters return to studies Sept. 8. A 15-classroom senior elementary school on Central Park Boulevard was erected at a cost of $707,313 while a 16-class school on Chaleur Avenue cost $624,576.

By now everyone in Oshawa knows about the Cable TV bus. What everyone didn't know was that it was the forerunner of the Pepsi bus and the 7-Up bus and the Orange Crush bus, which may well become known as the crusher. This puts the Oshawa PUC in the advertising game full throttle and passengers are anxiously awaiting the arrival of a "Molson Golden" bus. Or does this thing stop at soft drinks only?

They're treating us like children: posties

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the last issue of This Week, we carried an interview with members of the local clerks' and letter carriers' unions explaining their stand in the postal dispute. We continue the interview this week as the men discuss the hardships of their job.

Thousands of letters a day could be turned back at the post office if the clerks and letter carriers worked according to the rules.

This remark was made in a recent interview with an executive member of one of the Oshawa postal unions who said that many letters are sent with improper or missing box numbers or addresses.

"If we went by the book, we could have the place tied up in knots. We usually know the correct number though and deliver the letter anyway."

All the postal union executives interviewed were bitter about remarks they claimed had been made by postal officials about the ability of anyone to do their jobs.

"They keep saying they could get people in off the street to do our job," said one spokesman. "We've had guys start and within two days they've had to quit. There's 30 pounds or more of mail in those bags and they're never empty all day long."

Down family settled here 100 years ago

By Jo Aldwinckle

When Alderman Norman Down celebrates his 80th birthday next Tuesday, August 25th, he will become the second octogenarian in the widely respected Down family. His brother, Heber, celebrated his 80th birthday in April, 1969.

Farmers, like their father and grandfather before them, the eight children of Edwin Down, have inherited a love of the land, loyalty to their church and a sense of responsibility to the community which they have served unstintingly.

They have a strong family instinct and are proud of the fact that they all live in the immediate vicinity, within 15 minutes drive from each other.

The first of the Down family to come to Canada was William, born May 1, 1816 in Devonshire. He came to Upper Canada as a boy. The first record is his marriage in Providence Church, Durham County, Canada West, December 19, 1849 to Grace Allin, whose birthplace was in Cornwall.

The couple settled at Purple Hill in Cartwright Township. In 1870, one hundred years ago, William Down purchased one hundred acres on Bloor Street West for mixed farming. His grandson Wilbur, still resides in the old homestead and this is where the family gathering, honoring Norman, will be held.

William's son Edwin married Gertie Baker of London, Ontario. They reared a family of eight and the circle remained intact until this spring when the death of a daughter, Mabel, the late Mrs. Frank Prouse of Pickering made the first break.

The remaining seven are Heber of Brooklin; Norman, Oshawa; Wilbur, Oshawa; Russell, Columbus; Marion (Mrs. Harold Hayes), Columbus; Olive (Mrs. O. Robbins), Oshawa, Beatrice (Mrs. Orville Osborne), Bowmanville.

Edwin's descendants now number 21 grandchildren and 66 great-grandchildren. He brought his sons up to be farmers and three of his daughters married farmers.

They attended the one-room school which still stands near the new C.N. station.

"There were forty children at the school," mused Norman, "and the teacher was paid $200 per annum. We were all different ages and at different levels yet she gave us a wonderful grounding in reading, writing and arithmetic.

"The schoolroom was heated by a wood-burning, pot-belly stove and the pupils that sat near it roasted and all the rest shivered.

"There was no time for getting into serious mischief. We all had our chores to do. The girls had to help mother who had plenty to do keeping us all clean and fed and looking after us when we were ill.

"There were some bad epidemics in those days — typhoid fever and diphtheria. Pneumonia was pretty bad too, and there were no wonder drugs. If one of us was really ill we would send for Dr. Kaiser. Didn't take him long in his horse and buggy to make a call."

Alderman Norman Down has spent 31 years in public service. He has served 18 years on Oshawa City Council and in 1955 was mayor of Oshawa. For two years he was deputy reeve and two years, reeve of East Whiby and served for nine years on the East Whiby Council.

Heber Down has served on Whitby Township Council a total of 30 years. In 1953 he was warden of Ontario Country. For seven years he served on Pickering Township Council and was also deputy reeve. During World War II, his farm was expropriated for a shell-filling munition factory and he moved to Brooklin.

In 1949 his farm was used as a model by the Ontario Government in a conservation project and in 1956 the International Plowing Match was held on the Down Farm, Brooklin.

Russell Down has served on East Whitby Township Council and although Wilburn Down has not entered directly into municipal affairs, his name and his opinions are highly esteemed in the community. In the same way, the four daughters of Edwin Down are admired and respected.

Nerve gas crisis a forerunner of worse?

The insidious character of chemical and biological weaponry — smaller, cheaper and more easily stored than the hydrogen bomb — was recognized by the North American public as controversy raged in the U.S. last week over the dumping of some obsolete nerve gas.

Actually, the cannisters of nerve gas the U.S. dumped in the Atlantic ocean were made during World War II. Today the gas is considered common, the product of another era. Yet, in two and a half decades no one has devised a guaranteed safe method of disposal for these rusting rocket containers with their out-dated but still highly dangerous contents. What will be the case with the much more lethal vials of death that have been developed since then?

Disposal of the nerve gas "coffins" was first ordered when it was discovered that the gas was leaking from its containers. A temporary patch job, encasing the rockets in concrete and steel jackets, only complicated the matter. Protests from the scientific community stalled for a year the first attempt to dump them in the ocean. Engineers and technicians attempted to come up with a better solution, but none was found.

The U.S. chief of fish and wildlife, Charles Meacham, who originally opposed the dumping saying it would pollute the ocean, eventually agreed to the U.S. Army plan because of the danger to humans if the gas is stored any longer on land. However, there was bitter and continuing protest from some states as well as the Bahamas.

The world's oceans are a very delicate ecological system already tained by man's thoughtlessness. The nerve gas, like the mercury poisoning which has turned up in penguins and polar bears, could have profound effects on the marine life surrounding the whole continent. The plan for the gas disposal must be related to other actions which are polluting the sea. A Congressional inquiry was recently told that the U.S. Army had been granted permits to dump sewage, industrial waste, acids and other noxious substances in no fewer than 210 coastal areas.

We have created a dilemma by manufacturing ever more lethal substances with no thought about what can be done with them. The nerve gas crisis may be only a forrunner of what is to come.

Liberals could be vulnerable

Finance Minister Edgar Benson has set a timetable for implementation of the government's tax reform proposals, but may find himself in the midst of political turmoil before they can be introduced.

The present schedule calls for legislation to go into effect January 1, 1972, which is the earliest date possible according to Mr. Benson. He also said last week that the white paper will contain changes emanating from Commons and Senate committee recommendations, from private representations and from his own views on certain sectors of the economy. A known concern of the finance minister is the delicate position of small businesses in relation to the proposed increase in the basic corporation tax on them.

The finance minister's predictions will be carefully studied by his contemporaries in Ottawa for their bearing on the timing of the next election. Mid-1973 is the outside limit and usually elections are called before the end of a five-year term. But if the government is anticipating a tax harvest from the new measures which will enable it to make a dramatic reduction, it may have to wait until sometime in 1973 to assess the results.

Also, Mr. Benson is on record as predicting an upturn in the economy by the end of the present year. If it is delayed, with no improvement in the bleak unemployment picture and no slowdown in inflation, the Liberal party could be placed in a vulnerable position long before the due date for an election. It will be interesting to watch the Liberal stretegy between inroduction of the new tax system and voting day.

Children's shelter for extra drop-in?

Sir,

I read your article about the drop in Centre for Teenagers. As the Mother of two girls I feel this is an excellent place for the teenager of this city.

But I cannot see why when they need more space they aren't allowed to use the old Children's Shelter on Centre Street, it has been empty for nearly 2 years, needs painting etc. I'm sure if given this place they would be willing to paint it and keep the ground neat and tidy.

I think someone should take the suggestion to the City and I feel maybe your paper is the one to do it.

A tenant replies

Sir,

I would like to reply to your article "The Apartment."

First you mention the swimming pool, and how many consider taking a shower to clean the dirty sweaty grime off before entering the pool. I have seen women rinsing babies panties in the pool (how nice), users of the pools going through the halls with no robes on and in their bare feet (a nice way to spread athlete's foot), this type of attire is offensive to some people.

Second, you say people who do not use the sauna or the pool pay less rent than those who use these facilities. This is false as I am one of those tenants and I pay the same rent, and there are no laundramats on every floor. In regards to barbecuing on the balconies, tenants have every right to complain about them. Let me ask you a question, have you sat on a balcony above the tenant who is barbecuing and the smoke and fumes drive you inside, and the smell of some of the food they cook, is nothing to be desired.

You mention contacting the health unit in regards to this matter. You only mention about health hazards, such as people who suffer from respiritory conditions such as asthma, bronchitis and other chest conditions. The smoke and

Stop asking, start doing, is message to the "hair kids"

Sir:

After reading the article in August 12 of This week on What These Kids Want, I felt compelled to write my letter of comment.

I understand that the views used in this article were presented by members of the Oshawa Drop-In Center, perhaps that explains why this piece tends to favour these young drop-outs.

I found the comparison of the Rise of Christianity a poor example to use in relation to the Hair-kids. Just out of curiosity, I would like to know when the last time was, that these kids ever picked up a bible or went to church; so what would they know about Christianity?

Jesus did not protest the system nor did he intentionally upset the society with drugs. HE was not a full-time bum with no purpose. In fact, his purpose was to stamp out such sinners as these kids today! You can't compare Jesus to these kids, because He was the opposite kind of person. Jesus was warm, kind, friendly to anyone — and HELPFUL: but most of all he was far from being lazy. Jesus was pure and sincere, he didn't start a drug revolution nor generation gap; therefore I see no basis for comparison.

The author of this article shot himself down when he wrote, "The are not afraid to fight, they simply don't want to waste the energy," which justifies my statement of these kids being bums. They are not only too lazy to fight . . . FIGHT, ha! I don't think they could protect themselves if their lives depended on it. They don't do anything constructive. So how can they be intelligent? The article stated these kids are IDEALISTS, which is a fanciful name for DREAMERS, and no one ever made any history by dreaming. Anyone can sit around and protest this and that; but how many of these kids are actually doing something about their peeves?

I would hardly desribe them as "clean" and "honest." Wasn't it these so-called honest kids who created the disturbance in Disneyland. Wasn't it one hundred, long-haired hippies who, for no logical reason invaded a children's wonderland? Was it this "honesty" which led to the delinquency of today?

They certainly are "joiners" but I think the word to be used is "sheep". They have entirely lost their individualism and now their type is a dime a dozen.

The girls might be attractive to other boys in their class, but that isn't saying much! After you've seen one stringy, long-haired, bare-footed teenybopper, you've seen them all! May I correct you, when you describe the girls as "sophisticat-

And this report is coming to you from the bottom of Drag Lake, where for the umpteenth time the mightly bass has once again eluded yours truly. . . .

That's how I had planned to start this column, live from the vacation retreat we've found way up in Haliburton on that pure and unpolluted piece of land my oldest daughter calls "paradise for sure."

A friend loaned us his cottage for a few weeks, and if I ever had a hard time getting away from anywhere, it was from Drag Lake early Monday. The kids were asleep, the sun was just coming up over the lake, the wind rustled the maple leafs and the pines and the white birches . . . . and the only sound was that of the birds, waking up to a new morning . . . .

Funniest moment of the whole holiday so far came Saturday when we finally convinced "mom" (as the kids know her) to try out the diving mask, and she went under looking for bass. The minute she spotted one, she forgot she was under and tried to yell out "I see a fish", whereupon you can imagine, water and more water . . . lungs full of it. . . .

"This is what it must have been like for Adam and Eve," said number one daughter on the evening of the first day there. And honestly, I would agree that the good Lord saved a little bit of paradise right up there in Northern Ontario.

We landed about seven miles off highway 121 out of Haliburton. It's a great place to drive to and even greater to arrive at. It's typically Northern Ontario. There's even an old steam locomotive you can let your kids climb up on . . . . or, rather, climb up on yourself, and imagine you're coming down the vast mountain ranges or prairies. Before long I guess some smart alec will spoil it all and put a record of an actual steam locomotive in there, which for a dime or so you can play. I hope that doesn't sound bitchy. It's not meant to be. Why even at 6.30 a.m. Monday a home-made sign on a Haliburton service station reminded me through the mist from the lake to "kwitcherbitchen."

Enough of this holiday business. You've probably had yours and the last thing you want to hear is about someone else's fabulous experiences, be they in paradise or otherwise . . . .

Two weeks ago we started to publish and "quick glance" promo for classified ads. It offered 15 words for $ 1 if pre-paid, and the ad people tell me the offer still holds. (so look for it, will you?) The ad was headed "Help beat inflation and save money" and this one customer stroked out the "inflation" and made it "help beat taxes" and worded his ad this way: "We want lower taxes from municipal provincial and federal governments. Write your representatives now." The ad was signed "any taxpayer, any street."

And I buy this approach wholeheartedly. That's what we want allright . . . .

But it brings to light one things, doesn't it? It shows up why they're so slow in settling this postal strike. The boys in Ottawa are expecting a fantastic amount of fan mail, and they're playing Ostrich politics. (And we all know how an Ostrich sticks its head in the sand and so on.)

You can look forward to some great things in the near future. A fan in Whitby has asked This Week to publish his manuscript entitled "The Myth of Pan-Africanism", first Canadian edition. How does that grab you?

A soccer write-up in this week's This Week provides an interesting delemma. It's about the fourth game on Field No. 2 in the Eastern Canada Minor Soccer Tournament at Pincourt, Quebec.

Writes our correspondent: "The game was to have started at 10 a.m. but 12 players were at church and the opposing team gave us 15 minutes extra. All boys went to church dressed in their soccer uniforms with their boots in hand." Can you just imagine what Max Ferguson could have done with that?

ACT ONE

Organ music. All the parishioners turn their heads and crane their necks to see what's coming in the back door in soccer uniforms . . . . silent as mice. Not even a peep.

ACT TWO

The minister welcomes the soccer team from Oshawa and in particular team captain Richie Boots and wishes him God's richest blessing in the upcoming duel to be fought in the hot sun of Pincourt later in the day. He says "it's gonna take me a while to get this here service and sermon over with, but you fellows hang in there . . . . the other team won't go away. Not with 12 players from a team of 11 missing." (At which time the minister is a little taken aback himself, because he used to play the game when he was a kid, and they DID always have just 11 players and a few spares).

ACT THREE.

The players become restless.

ACT FOUR.

The minister admonishes the players not to become restless, and to put first things first.

ACT FIVE.

A few of the youthful players are bending down to put their soccer boots from shoulders to feet. It cannot be too much longer now . . . .

ACT SIX.

The preacher says amen, and there's a loud noise in the back of the church as 12 kids race for the door.

ACT SEVEN.

Parishioners turn their heads once again, crane their necks once again, to see what's going out of the back door in those uniforms . . . . Sounding like an army . . . .

ACT EIGHT.

The game starts, and come hell or high water, Pincourt is going to win.

ACT NINE.

H and HW come. both at the same time, and the score ends up 8 to 1 in favor of Pincourt.

Oh well, blessed be the meek.

And then, to round things out this week, here are a few more typos from other newspapers, just to show we're not the only ones who's proofreader is on vacation now and then:

I still can't figure out the decision of the cigarette manufacturers in Canada to cut out the gambling coupons they have been enclosing in packs of their product.

So successful was this gimmick that the relatively obscure brand that started it all, Sweet Caporals, increased sales by a fantastic percentage.

These people must have another ace up their sleeves, if you'll pardon the expression, to take advantage of the fatalistic attitude of the public towards a habit that is known to take at least eight years off one's life.

Actually, Madison Avenue hasn't even begun to cash in on this Doomsday attitude of the public. Much more could be made of it, perhaps along the following lines.

The scene is an advertising agency's conference room and a group of keen young advertising men are seated around a table waiting for the head of the firm to speak. He clears his throat.

"Men, we've been asked to come up with a campaign for a new brand of cigarettes to take advantage of the current devil-may-care attitude of the public towards the dangers of smoking.

"The manufacturer is really going to hit them where they live with this one," he continues. "He's calling this new pack 'Coffin'. How's that for a catchy brand name?"

"Just great, J.B.," says one of the admen. "I can see it now; we design the package to look like a casket and we use the slogan: 'Try a Coffin — in the new flip-top box'."

"That's the kind of stuff I'm looking for. Well done, Smedley," says the ad executive. "Now what else can we come up with?"

"How about this, J.B.," says another young man. "We get this sombre-looking guy in a black suit holding up a pack and we caption it: 'Seven out of 10 morticians recommend Coffins'."

"Great," says the president. "I like that play on words; the public will love it."

Another adman stands up with a suggestion: "We start the commercial with a shot of a graveyard, see, and then we zoom in on this ghoul smoking a cigarette. He's got a skull and crossbones tatooed on the back of his hand and he says: "Welcome to Coffin country."'

This leads to another suggestion: "We have this dame dressed like a vampire with her back to the camera. She's hunched over a victim and she turns around, puts a cigarette between her lips and says: 'Us Coffin smokers would rather BITE than SWITCH!' "

"Now we're really getting somewhere," says the ad executive. "Anybody else got any ideas? How about you, Carruthers?"

"Well, I've been thinking, J.B.," says Carruthers. "These give-aways in cigarette packages have been pretty successful. How about including them in our campaign?

"We could enclose a certificate edged in black. Some of these certificates would entitle the bearer to free Cobalt treatments

"Others would be good for a free headstone or burial plot. We could have four second prizes of complete funeral services including dirges played by The Carlton Show Band.

"And somewhere in one of the packages of cigarettes will be the grand prize," says Carruthers. "An all-expense-paid burial anywhere in the world with the funeral oration by John Diefenbaker and hymns by Shirley Harmer!"

The ad executive stands up, clears his throat and wipes a tear from his eye.

"Beautiful, just beautiful," he says. "It makes you proud you're an advertising man."

Pet kangaroo rat, hippies, guppies at the playground

The Oshawa Recreation Department ended the 5th week of programs with a variety of special events. With two weeks of programs left, it's not too late to go to your nearest Neighbourhood and Community Play area to join in the fun.

Dr. Cannon Community Area became one large picnic ground, Friday Children brought all kinds of lunches from sandwiches to hotdogs which the children were able to barbeque. A treasure hunt was enjoyed by all with the winner Jeff Harrison gaining a treasure of chocolate bars and suckers. After lunch the search was on for a watermelon. Doug Lawrence earned the biggest piece for finding the watermelon. The last and greatest attraction was an organized water fight.

Some hippies couldn't wait for Mosport and came to North Oshawa Community Area. The reason? It was "Hippie Day"; complete with a dance contest, won by Gary Thompson and Jennifer Cray, and a paint in. The paint in, where paintings were judged for color and originality, was won by two girls, Leslie and Heidi Saunders There was also a freeze dance, and the judging of the best costume for a boy and girl. The girl with the best costume was Heidi Saunders, while there was a tie for the boys, Joey and Michael Peeters

Sunnyside Community Area held a pet show There was a wide selection of participants in attendance ranging from puppies to kittens and turtles to dogs. Prizes were awarded in many different categories such as the oldest pet, the youngest, the most unusual, the pet with the most original name and many more. Ribbons were awarded to the winners and the show ended with a serving of watermelon for all.

Last week was a real action-packed week for the children of Kingside Community Area. On Tuesday the children enjoyed the Physical Fitness Program. Then, on Wed. there was a Field Day at Alexandra Park. Edward Walsh-7; Terri Smith-7; Danny Walsh-8; Joan Lyman-9; Jeff VanKuik-10; Donna Walsh-11; Lester Bergma-12; Lorna Scott-8; Andrew Bergma-13; Carol Anne Crew-6; represented Kingside and placed sixth in the competition. On Thursday the children participated in the bicycle rodeo to see who would go to the City Wide Bicycle Rodeo at the Civic Auditorium. The winners were: Doug Hart-9; David Homes-9; Cyrrel Laundre-12; Lynn Hrdralicka-12; Rick Hrdralicka-14; Paul Cheredaryk-13; Linda Hindrie-13; Susan Scammel-13. A games day on Friday topped off the week where everyone won a prize and got soaking wet in a water fight.

"Try your luck" was the call of the day at Grandview Community Play Area. Everyone raided piggy banks for pennies to take part in the Penny Fair. After playing such skill testing games as a penny toss, tin can knockover and a ring toss, watermelon and freshie were sold for a penny. Other booths such as a balloon breaking contest, ball in the basket game, and a ball toss contest were set up and received with enthusiasm. Once the children had spent their pennies,

Women's rights proclaimed at YWCA

Suffragettes invaded the closing exercises of the second day camp at the local YWCA

No one got into much of a flap over it though since they were all part of the act. The theme of the closing ceremonies was Pioneer Day and the feminists were actually day campers in costume, complete with women's liberation movement signs.

Some 127 campers of both sexes and 33 councillors took part in the three-week camp held on the YWCA grounds. There was also a one-day camp-out at Camp Samac

Under the guidance of Camp Director Sheila Entwistle, her assistant Dallas Hart and senior leader Janet Taylor, the youngsters participated in crafts, sports, games, music and drama.

The girls ranged in age from 7 to 12 years while boys of seven, eight and nine took part. Another activity enjoyed by the participants was a daily swim at the Rotary Pool across the street from the Y

The closing ceremonies, held Thursday evening, saw a number of proud parents entertained by skits put on by the youngsters on the Y grounds.

Drug Abuse News No. 7

How Does LSD ("Acid") Act? Its "trips" are scary

LSD is so powerful that an amount covering a pin head can turn a person into a monster. It enters the brain and confuses the senses. A sound may appear as a colour. A fire seems to be a fragrant flower, so that the user reaches for it or puts his face to it and suffers a severe burn.

A feeling of lightness can influence an LSD user so that he thinks he can fly and he does, right out of the window to his death. He is out of touch with reality. If he has a "good trip", he can recover. But, months later, he can get the LSD effects without taking another dose.

LSD does not improve the personality or increase ones creativity. A "good trip" just gives you some new experiences. A "bad trip" can make you mentally unstable. Your brain might not be able to take it. Keep away from LSD.

The next of these public service messages will discuss Marijuana or "Grass".

So you're a petty thief . . . and 18-year old Rosemary shoulder-throws you, and that's the end of it for you

You're a petty thief and you are using the cover of darkness to break into a building in downtown Oshawa.

Just as you jimmy open the door, you are accosted by a security guard. You try to run away, but you are immediately thrown to the ground by a shoulder throw and incapacitated until the local police arrive to cart you off to Whitby

It's bad enough being thrown in the cooler again, but how are you ever going to live down the fact that you were foiled by a security guard named Rosemary? Or Gisela? Or Sherri? Or Donna? Or Carol?

This could very well happen. Oshawa Security Services has five girls on staff by these names and they stand on guard at Durham College, McLaughlin Library and the Midtown Mall.

Rosemary Plowright, an 18-year-old native of Oshawa, is one of these security guards in skirts. She has been with OSS for less than a month, but likes the work so well that she intends to make it a full-time career.

To look at Rosemary, you wouldn't think that she could apprehend a small boy stealing cookies from the cookie jar. She is very petite and mild-mannered, but has no qualms about the possibility of having to arrest someone.

Guns next?

"We're in the process of being trained in the art of self-defence and before long we should be joining a pistol club and getting licences to carry a gun," she says.

The security girls are registered with the provincial government just as male security guards and are subject to fingerprinting and a police security clearance.

Rosemary is not a complete novice at the security game. For two years, she worked with Eaton's as a checker in the women's wear department on the look-out for shoplifters.

"I enjoyed that work and when this opportunity came up, I accepted it. It's an interesting job and it's secure."

The girls work shift work except for the 11-7 overnight shift and the job might find Rosemary patrolling the darkened grounds of Durham College at 10 o'clock at night checking to make sure all the portable classrooms are locked. This doesn't bother her.

The one drawback to the job is having to work shifts when you are young and single, but Rosemary has an understanding boyfriend who alters his schedule to fit hers.

The rest of the job she finds enjoyable and no problem at all. She says that the staff and students at Durham are amiable people and good to deal with. No one else has given her any problems either.

"I find a girl has an easier time of it than a man might. Men don't usually argue with a girl. If someone has his car parked in the wrong spot at Durham, I tell him and he moves it without a quarrel."

The girls must purchase their uniforms through pay deductions. This includes several styles of hats, skirts, blouses, jumpers and ties. In winter, there is a coat and slacks to add to their wardrobe.

The girls are paid the same as the male guards when they perform the same duties and Rosemary, while not an active feminist, thinks this is right.

"I feel that is a girl is doing a man's job, she should be paid equal wages if she is doing it to the same extent. If he has to do some of the heavier or dirtier work, then I think he should be paid more."

Just then sometone pulled into the Durham College parking lot and came to a stop in a no-parking zone. Rosemary excused herself and went out to tell him he would have to move. The fellow, looking a little sheepish, without a word got back into the car and parked where he was told . . . .

Queen's gowns are on display

By Jo Aldwinckle
Women's editor

On her recent visit to Manitoba and the North West Territories Canadians saw Queen Elizabeth as few Britons have seen her. Canadians saw her wearing a kerchief on her head in the windy West and a pant-suit at Frobisher Bay. Unladylike? Not in those circumstances. .

Criticizing the Queen's hats has always been fair sport for fashion writers, but do they realize that even in her choice of millinery, Her Majesty must follow protocol?

Protocol says that her hat must never obscure her features and that her face must be visible front and sides. No floppy brims for her.

However few can quibble about the elegance of her gowns of state. For the last quarter of her reign Queen Victoria, the Widow of Windsor, eschewed state occasion and set a fashion for black taupe puce and other "funky" colors, so imagine the sensation when the new Queen Alexandra made an appearance in jewelled yellow satin.

Several royal state occasion gowns are currently on display in the Royal Ontario Museum. They are gorgeous and merit a special visit.

One of the finest is the state gown worn by Queen Elizabeth on her visit to Canada in 1967, which is on loan from the National Museum in Ottawa. The Maple Leaf of Canada gown was presented by the Queen to Canada as a confederation gift.

Designed by Norman Hartnell it is in soft green satin with a rippling skirt that measures five yards and ten inches around the hem.

The motif of intertwining maple leaves and royal white roses of York emphasizes that Elizabeth is also Queen of Canada.

fumes are a health hazard to these people. It almost strangles them.

Let me quote a section in my lease: "No tenant shall do or permit anything to be done in said premises or bring or keep anything therein which will in any way increase the risk of fire or the rate of fire insurance on the building, or property kept therein, or obstruct or interfere with the rights of other tenants or in anyway injure or annoy them, or conflict with the laws relating to fires."

Barbecuing on the balconies of apartments is both a health and fire hazard.

MARRIAGE

College Park Seventh Day Adventist Church will be the scene Aug. 30 of the wedding of Lorene Joyce Lysiuk, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Fred Lysiuk of Simcoe, and Terry Roger Heisler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Heisler of Oshawa. The wedding will take place at 4 p.m.

MARRIAGE

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Maxymuik of Oshawa announce the engagement of their daughter Patricia Dianne to John David Ashton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Ashton of Guelph. The wedding will take place at Faith Baptist Church, Brock Street North, Whitby, Aug. 29 at 3 p.m.

MARRIAGE

Mrs. Marion Jenkins of Oshawa is pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of her daughter, Elizabeth Ellen, to John W. Forder, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Forder, also of Oshawa. The wedding will be at Kingsview United Church at 3:30 p.m. Sept. 19.

MARRIAGE

Diana Louise Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald A Gordon of Whitby, will become the bride of Tadeusz (Ted) Dolinski, son of Mrs. Janina Czechowski of Oshawa and the late Peter Dolinski, on Sept. 19 at 4 p.m. in St. Hedwig's Roman Catholic Church, Oshawa.

Oshawa posties

lins that plague the letter carrier as he makes his rounds as well. One of these is the habit of subdivision developers of calling streets by similar names.

"If the letter is improperly addressed, it might get delivered to the wrong house by mistake and the householder thinks we're doing a poor job."

The letter carrier said the same feeling is gained if on a humid day a letter for the next house along the route sticks to a letter being delivered to the house before.

Another problem occurs when a woman on an afternoon delivery route gets her family allowance cheque a day before her friend on a morning delivery route.

"The phone at the post office rings right off the wall on baby bonus day," he said.

The clerks who sort the mail have their problems as well. With some 57 letter carriers in Oshawa, the walks of each of them have to be memorized so that letters get into the right mailbag.

"And they're changing the routes every week so that we have to learn the changes and forget the old route. That's harder than learning a new one," said one clerk.

The clerks must also know the 700 box numbers that the post office has and many letters come in without box numbers on them.

In addition, when a clerk is "working forward", he has to know the several thousand towns and cities in Canada and what time the various methods of transportation leave.

Another thing that rankles the letter carriers is the ever-present checker who parks somewhere along the route to make sure the carrier is doing his job.

"They're treating us just like children. That's no way to improve working relations."

Stepping into Fall

By Jo Aldwinckle
Women's editor

What new footwear and legwear looks will be most important with longer skirts? Here's what fashion designers have to say

Aponte: "I foresee the platform shoe and platform sandal at all hours of the day and night. In hosiery, I think the top look is transparent stockings in smokey shades

Simonetta: "I like the look of boots or the shoe with the smaller foot and higher heel

O'Iodagh: "The laced up boot, the higher heel the updated Garbo shoe all, please, with toning stockings. Four inches of nude colored angkle protruding from under a long skirt with the sudden shock of a contrasting shoe just looks all wrong."

Hobson: "Boots will continue to be important with coats and sportswear They will be laced and more ladylike Shoes will be more delicate. — thinner, with higher heels that lengthen the calf Flat heels for fuller skirts and sandals with skinny straps

According to the Designer Shoe Guild, the monster shoe has gone and in its place we are to have a refined pump and tie shoe with slimmer heels. The color of the leg and foot is very important

A lavender grey suit was teamed with jungle brown shoes and matching hose. A red peau de soie midi dress was accessorized with red slingback, T-strap shoes and red stockings

There are boots that end at the ankle, mid calf, under the knee and up the thigh . . . they are buckled, slipped on, elasticized, and laced. They too are in smooth, brushed, shiny, reptile patents and grains . . as well as furs, satins and velvets for evening. The stocking boot . . . and the gaiter are also in the fall picture.

there's something to be said for it. I don't support this idea, but perhaps I'm rather idealistic

"It's more important to attempt within a reasonable economic fabric to hold out for the finer things in life. We have to attract new people; we have to convince them that this is a better place in which to live."

He said that he considered the contention that there would be greater economic strength through amalgamation "a heck of a frivolous argument."

"Seventy-five per cent of the money will be spent at the regional level anyway. The local units will only account for 25 per cent. I think this argument is very shallow."

Mayor Newman said the only balance that can be created to the benefit of the municipalities in the area is the balance of the region east of Toronto with that west of Toronto.

The perfect look for tweeds and fun furs this fall and winter of '71, is the use of brushed pigskin in dark oak tones as used by Mabel Julianelli here in this riding high instep tied pump. . .the silhouette is long and lean. . .the heel high and straight. . .shown with Burlington's opaque ribbed pantyhose

"Come one, come all to the Penny Fair at Woodview Community Area"; and so they came — one and all! Tickets for the 10 booths were made available at the ticket wicket, made each ticket costing one cent (1¢). Some of the events made available to the children were as follows: Fish Pond, Penny Toss, Squirt the Clown, Dart Toss, Bean Bag Throw, Refreshment Stand (which provided freshie and popcorn), Fortune Telling Booth and a Mystery House plus Hit the Pins. Prizes (old toys and things) were provided at the Fish Pond. Most of the other booths provided free tickets to winners to move on to another booth. Credit goes to the children themselves for making the afternoon a success, since they made all decorations and signs involved; painted the ticket booth and fish pond booths; and set up the booths themselves. Altogether, four dollars ($4) in pennies was raised which is to be used towards prizes and treats for the children during the remaining summer weeks.

Eastview Play Area held two special events. A bicycle rodeo was held Chosen to go to the Civic Auditorium were Paula Simiana, Susan Lowery, Stephen Grigg and Mark Reid. A field day was held consisting of 60 yard dash, long jump, soccer kick, shoe kick and ball throw. Individual champions were Sharon Davis for the girls, and Roger Lockey for the boys.

A bicycle rodeo was held at North Oshawa Play Area. The participants were required to not only demonstrate their skill in a written test, but also had to complete a course on their bicycles which called for them to show their riding ability. The winners were Tina Peeters, Irene Kroontje, and Steven and Jim Montgomery who will now go on to compete at the Civic Auditorium on August 11 with the other participants.

Games Day was held at Cedar Ridge Play Area After a strenuous workout, winners in the 9-12 age group were first — Daryl Austin, second — Ken Shaw, third — Michele Guillemette. In the 5-8 age group, there were the following winners: first — Laverne Thompson, second Jennifer Ekkert and third — Chris Shaw.

Glen Stewart Play Area held an all day special event. In the morning there was a watermelon hunt. A long stick was hidden in place of the watermelon which the children had to find. The watermelon was found by Andy Saunders — 10 yrs. who is visiting his friends in Oshawa. Andy is from Manchester, England. In the afternoon, a Pet Day was held. Many prizes were given out for different categories. A few of the winners are as follows: Andy Saunders' pet spider won a first for having the most legs, John Meetimer — 8 yrs won first prize for the fluffiest pet and a first for the shortest tail. His pet was a rabbit.

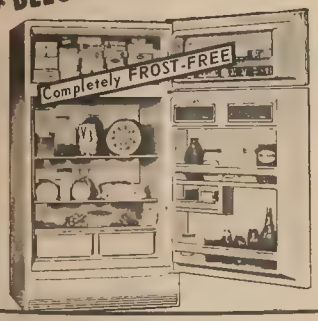
Gaels' 7-year winning streak ends in 16-13 loss

A seven-year winning streak came to an end Friday as the Oshawa Green Gaels were defeated by Toronto Lakeshore Maple Leafs at Central Arena in Etobicoke.

The Lakeshore team will now advance to the finals against Bramalea who eliminated St. Catharines Lakesides. Both teams won their semi-finals in a 4-1 series.



The Toronto Club defeated the Gaels 16-13 in the fifth game of the semi-finals in the Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A Terry Rowland of the Oshawa club fired four goals and assisted with four others but was unable to lead his team to a win. Terry Lloyd and Tom Vann had two goals apiece.

Says Christmas musician

Oshawa kids don't react strongly enough one way or other....

By Mary Ann Polillo

Christmas

Is that a strange name for a musical group?

Not really, when you consider that it was chosen simply because, a group of Oshawa musicians liked it — because it expressed good times, the best time of the year . . . and Bob Bryden says, "It fits in with the mood of our music."

Bob, 19, is lead singer, rhythm guitarist and writer of all songs by Christmas. He's been around the music scene in Oshawa for about five years now and feels deeply about his group and their music. He says, "We want to do something new and dynamic."

The Christmas sound is unique, because no brand-name type of music can define it. "It's a combination of heavy and mellow, it has its loud points, but it is balanced with soft. It's not ranchy or hard to take," says Bob.

"We get criticism from kids, because we don't follow the trends. What would music be if everyone played the same? There must be radicals. We like any form as long as people don't define us or get prejudiced and won't listen to our music because it is not their type."

Music is Bob's life. He collects the sound tracks from movies because he says. "This is music that was created for a purpose. I'm influenced by motion picture composers more than popular trends because of their ability to create music with strong moods and that is dramatic." Practicing eight hours every day, Christmas is a full-time group. Sidemen are Robert Bulger, lead guitarist, 18, Tyler Raizenne, bass, 16, Rich Richter, 16, drums, and Wolf Hryciuk, percussion and vocal. Bob says, "I think I'm playing with the best sidemen Oshawa has to offer. Bulger, Richter, Raizenne, along with the vocal support of Wolf, are the most stylized and interesting musicians around. They bring my material to life." Members of the group have been together since Christmas, 1969 and Bryden feels they will stay as a group because of their strong involvement with each other. They harmonize in every way. "We believe in everything we do. There are no personal or musical conflicts."

Christmas's first album has been out for two weeks, and they feel now that the first hurdle has been jumped, they can polish their sound. Bob says, "The first album was highly improvised. We still have segments in our music where we improvise, but we are now working in a tighter frame."

Christmas has just signed a new contract with MCA, Musical Corporation of America, and in mid-September they will begin recording at RCA studios on the Revolution sound label in Toronto. Since Bob has been in Oshawa, playing with different groups, he has seen much talent materialize, make a ripple on the Oshawa scene and fade away, and he feels that there is an apathy in the Oshawa youth towards home talent.

"Oshawa kids don't react strongly enough one way or the other to our music,to any music. We'd like to hear them clap, sing, stomp or yell. We don't want to play blind." If we see dancing we feel more accepted. If there is no support from the audience, the youth, this seems to breed discontent among the musicians, they feel they haven't touched their audience."

Christmas has enjoyed success from audiences in Toronto, Brantford, Wasage Beach and the cottage country. He says of the recent rock show held at the Civic Auditorium, "Everyone at the were fantastic, but we didn't know that until we talked to them . . . there was no response."

Bob was among the Oshawa youth at Mosport, and he says, "I hope Mosport helped to loosen up the kids of Oshawa to react strongly to something they like or don't like." Bob says, Christmas plays more for the kids, than any great dreams of world-wide recognition, although he says, "Sure I would like success internationally, but I would want to stay in Canada and see an original Canadian musical community develop. This would be the ideal situation."

Christmas will perform September 11, at McLaughlin CVI. They are also tentatively scheduled for an engagement at the Toronto Exhibition.

Two comedies, drama to highlight OLT season

Two comedies, a drama and a children's play will highlight the coming season of the Oshawa Little Theatre.

Pat Patterson, OLT president, announced recently that the company's three adult presentations for the 1970-71 season will be Never Too Late, Lion in Winter and You Know I Can't Hear You When The Water's Running.

As is customary, the group will also present a children's play during the Christmas season and this year has chosen Sleeping Beauty to be performed Dec. 28.

Never Too Late will be the first production of the season, slated for Nov. 18-21 at the Eastdale Theatre. It was written by Sunmer Arthur Long and was first presented in 1962 at the Playhouse in New York.

The play deals with a couple living in a small lumber town who to the amazement of their married daughter and her husband find themselves about to become parents again.

Another family situation, this one anything but comic, centres around King Henry II, his wife Eleanor of Aquitaine and his three sons Richard, Geoffrey and John who are after the throne. Lion in Winter will premier Feb. 3.

The third play of the season is actually four one-act plays in one concerning everything from a playwright's attempt to bring nudity to the stage to a couple's disagreement over purchasing twin beds after 25 years marriage.

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

Well, it's finally happened. Those brainy guys called scientists have come up with another gizmo to further the cause of television and it's called 3-D. Three dimensional television is now a reality and is being offered to television studios and viewers alike. The contraption consists of a doodad that clamps to the front of the tv camera lens and mixes the two images on the camera tube. Along with the camera doodad the tv set at home gets a thingamabob that clamps to it and the viewer wears a pair of special glasses. It sounds complicated but it really works

The possibilities of this breakthrough stagger the imagination. Take the "Beverly Hillbillys", and Elly Mae sitting in your lap or the network news dropping a bomb in the living room via Viet Nam and how about the Gravy Train commercial with the small chuck wagon racing around the rec. room driving your pet poodle insane with hunger pains. All the tv shows now in existence will have to be rewritten to give them more depth — they should do this even without the gizmo — the only problem with this basically simple system is the cost. The camera unit goes for two grand, the set adaptor for around two hundred and the glasses — one pair for each person at only $35 so if you're like me and have hordes of children, forget it. Besides this optical system only works on 8 inch screens. Still, it's an interesting idea.

When Fielding wrote his classical novel "Tom Jones" he probably had no idea at the amount of turmoil it would cause 200 years later. From the Supreme courts of the world to the censors snipping scissors on the now infamous film of the same name, people have become more than aware of the risque, rollicking novel that was a historical record of the times. The film was a trend setter just as "Mash" is a trend setter now. For the first time that three letter word S*E*X* formed the basis of the plot and the movie industry hasn't cast a backward glance since

While Fielding used several scenes that were slightly naughty it is a good book and enjoyable play for the more mature audience. The play was recently performed by a Brantford theatre group at an outdoor theatre and was recorded by one of the stations in the Jarmain Television network. Viewing time Thursday.

This Week with Peter Brouwer is going a full hour and covering the problem of pollution

Oshawa soccer team plays at Pincourt

The Eastern Canada Minor Soccer Tournament was held at Pincourt, Quebec, and members of the Oshawa team in attendance have summed it up at "simply tremendous."

Writes Mrs. J. Blotchley of Oshawa, who went along with the city team.

The camping facilities were very desirable with a swimming pool 100 yards away. After a fair night's sleep the Oshawa team went to the first game with plenty of zip for the kick-off at midday. With the game underway, most of the play was in Oshawas hands; the game was clean and the refereeing was as good as anyone could expect. The first goal was scored by Jim Holleran who was in position at the right time. It was a beautiful pass to centre by the left wing, headed by Dino Caterino on to Holleran's head and into the net

The other team 'Montueil' were not out of the play. They played a good clean game and we had a few headaches at times Half time we switched a forward player back and the halfback to inside right which was Henry Vyfschaft; in about five minutes of the second half a beautiful left wing pass to centre was put over and Henry really banged it home making the score 2-0 for Oshawa. The rest of the game was very well played, and hard played, both teams shaking hands at the end of the game.

2nd Game

The start of the game, with Mayor Bruce Mackey taking the kick-off, between Oshawa and Two Mountains Eagles started off very fast and the weather was very hot.

3rd Game

Oshawa team were ready in earnest to play one of the better teams as all the coaches claimed, they said it would be a hard game. Hard game — it was. Oshawa were down 2-0 at halftime and they had played well, game moving from end to end, perfect passing on each side.

4th Game

The game was to have started at 10 a.m. but 12 players were at Church and the opposing team gave us 15 minutes extra; all boys went to Church dressed in their soccer uniforms with their boots in hand.

Oshawa versus Pincourt, the team that won the cup last month in Winnipeg and last year won the Quebec Trophy started playing at a terrific pace and it wasn't 5 minutes before they got a goal from a corner kick. Three minutes later Pincourt got their second goal, with perfect playmaking by all the team, they were sharp and took all chances, really controlling the ball.

Oshawa came back with sharp play by Jim Holleran to take advantage of a fumble by the goalkeeper two minutes later Pincourt scored again and their play was perfect. Oshawa's Captain, Pat McArthur, who was out of Oshawa's 3 games with a knee injury went on the field in pain and tried hard, but the other team were brilliant and deserved every one of the 8 goals they got.

Oshawa seemed to be tired after the hard games and long travel but Pincourt were the best team and cleanest soccer players I have seen. The results were 8-1 against Oshawa but they shook hands all round and headed home. Incidentally, Pincourt won the tournament.

ed" or even "beautiful". When was the last time you came across a sophisticated girl? I don't think you would know it; if you did!

Alcohol and drugs can hardly be compared as social things. Who are you trying to kid? I have never heard of a drunk do some of the morbid, violent things that a turned-on kid does! Drugs are not completely sociably accepted; and perhaps, they will never be by some people. Presently, they are only accepted by those ignorant of their health

How true! When you say that the kids will not accept our law enforcement, that is the only positive statement the article made. These kids have never been made to respect; for this perhaps, it is unfair to blame them

So it is the churchs in the area who are going to publish this N.A.R.K newspaper; not the bodies at Memorial Park! It seems to me all the Church Youth Groups are organizing entertainment for these kids!

It seems to me that you should be printing articles on the other half too, the so-called "straight kids". At least the straight kids know their business and are going about it! Do you always have to be a radical or protester to get in the news? Too much publicity is given to these long-haired drug addicts! All of Oshawa's youth doesn't sit in Memorial park from sunrise till sunset, only a small number. What about the kids that are doing their own thing and not hurting others while they're doing it! Or wouldn't a story like that sell your paper?

Personally, it gets a little sickening listening to what these kids are looking for; what life is all about; what they want — why don't they stop asking and start doing!

Local soccer team taught a lesson by boy's from Over 'ome

A composite bantam soccer team got a lesson in the finer points of the game from a team of visitors Wednesday evening.

The Celtics, a team of Scottish youngsters from Glascow, trounced the Oshawa players 12-0 despite outstanding playing by Oshawa goalie Jim Adams.

Several soccer enthusiasts in the crowd of 800 that attended the game were heard to state that the score would have been doubled without the efforts of Adams in the Oshawa goal.

The Celtics returned to Scotland Sunday after a tour through Ontario and parts of the United States. They were entertained at a dance in Toronto Saturday night.

Jim Markland, area director for the Ontario Minor Soccer Association, was responsible for the Celtic's first visit to Oshawa.

He arranged to have Mayor Bruce Mackey and provincial representative Cliff Pilkey on hand to get the exhibition game underway. There were refreshments provided at the Civic Auditorium after the game.

Most of the boys on the Oshawa team were from the Old Country Club, while others were from Baker Park and Connaught Park.

In all, there are 39 teams of boys ranging in age from six to 16 years playing in the Neighbourhood Parks Soccer organization.

Chronicles of Osh

1. And the seventh month of the year one thousand nine hundred and seventy was drawn to a close, and this was the month in which the elders of the land of Osh had diligently gathered and made to be put asunder the Sanhedrin of elders which included Fin and Charles the Physician and the two women of Osh and the Wayward Beevee, who was included in all the minor and major groups of elders anyway, because of his position as the chief ruler of the land of Osh.
2. And this putting asunder of the Sanhedrin of elders had come to pass in the beginning of the seventh month of the year, as the elders gathered together at the Temple of Osh had cast their lots nine to six in favor of the putting asunder.
3. Now on the last day of the seventh month, it was found that the putting asunder of the Sanhedrin by the elders was by no means the end. For the oo-em-bee, which was not upon the Holy Mountain of Qupee, but which was nevertheless an arm of the law of the High and Mighty John, had yet to sit in judgement on the casting of the ballot in favor of the putting asunder of the Sanhedrin of Osh by the elders of Osh.
4. And the chief ruler of the oo-em-bee spoke unto the leadersof the land of Osh saying, you shall let the people of Osh in on this thing, and you shall cause to be put in the journal (small jay) of Osh your deliberations and the people shall be heard and then the oo-em-bee shall cause to be held or not to be held a gathering of the judges, before which the people of the land of Osh shall or shall not speak their piece on the putting asunder of the Sanhedrin of the land of Osh.
6. And the Chronicler of Osh saw these things come to pass and he gazed into his ball of crystal and behold what he saw was a gathering of the eldersof the land of Osh in the Temple of Osh.
6. And in one corner of the inner sanctum of the Temple the blonde among the women of Osh arose and she lifted up her countenance towards the throne of Osh and shaking her fist severely at the Wayward Beevee, she spoke saying, behold, I told you so. And she spoke of a great iron horse on which the nine elders of Osh had taken their seat and on which they had iron-horsed this thing through the gathering together of the elders of the land of Osh.
7. And Neely, one of the elders of Osh who spoke with great deliberation, arose from his throne in the inner sanctum of Osh, and spoke, saying, ye men of Osh, and ye women also, let us not be intimidated by those who wish for us not to see the bush for the trees, for behold, I say unto you that the oo-em-bee will look kindly and with favor upon the putting asunder by the elders of Osh of the Sanhedrin of Osh.
8. And there were others who arose, and spoke saying, let the people of the land of Osh speak their piece before the oo-em-bee and let them in one accord voice their feelings on the matter.
9. And so it came to pass that the oo-em-bee departed for the land of Osh and held court, so to speak, and it called before itself the members of the Sanhedrin of Osh to give an account of themselves.
10. And among the members there was one who spoke saying, please put me asunder and his name was Charles the Physician, but the other three of the Sanhedrin spoke and said, we have served the people of Osh as they deserve to be served, but there have been those who have opposed the very being of the Sanhedrin and who have made life downright miserable for us.
11. And the oo-em-bee searched its own soul and behold it found that it was difficult to see where a new Sanhedrin, with a different name and other elders, to be picked from among the elders of Osh, by the elders of Osh would make all that much difference.
12. And the Chronicler's crystal ball became blurry following these events and its pieces were scattered throughout the land of Osh.

MACKEY SPEAKS

Oshawa Mayor Bruce Mackey was a scheduled speaker at the 72nd annual meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association which winds up today. Other speakers on the same panel were City Finance Commissioner Frank Markson, Ottawa Finance Commissioner Sydney Baldwin and Mayor L. E. Cooke of Barrie.

in oshawa, whitby and area

Wednesday, August 26, 1970

Max Rosenheck and some 20 other Oshawa men think The Music Man is all wet. What these men and Portland the Camel have to do with it is on page 12.

SHORT TAKES

SENTENCED

Stephen Taylor, 23, of 57 Colborne Street East was sentenced Friday to the Adult Vocational Training Centre at Edgar, Ont. Taylor had earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of giving a false message when he telephoned a bomb scare that resulted in the evacuation of City Hall July 23.

GUEST SPEAKER

Provincial Liberal leader Robert Nixon will be guest speaker at the Oshawa and District Real Estate Board's annual civic dinner Oct. 7. The annual dinner honors public officials from the area serving at all three levels of government.

CANDIDATE HERE

Walter Pitman, a contender for the Ontario New Democratic Party leadership, told Oshawa party members Friday that he believes more young people should be given training on the job rather than having them kept in school where their skills might be obsolete by the time they graduated. Pitman was in Oshawa as part of a provincial campaign aimed at gaining more support than Stephen Lewis.

GOLDEN

A Whitby couple was feted last week on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Giles of Green Street in Whitby were married in Rhodes Avenue Presbyterian Church on Aug. 14, 1920.

MARRIAGE

Jane Della Joanne Harlow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Harlow of Whitby will marry Gerald Wayne Welsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Welsh of Oshawa on Sept. 19. The wedding will take place in All Saints Anglican Church Whitby.

TWIRLERS

Four girls from the "Tartan Twirlers" attended the Canadian International and National Baton Twirling Championships held at the C.N.E. Cindy Robinson, age 8, Julie Jordan, age 9, Mary Lou Reddick, age 10, and Janice Manning, age 15. Janice Manning, a member of the "Tartan Teens" Sr. Corps, took her second 1st. in Intermediate Solo, 3rd. in Novide Basic Strut, 15-20 years and 5th. in Advance Flag. Cindy Robinson, a member of the "Tartan Blues" Juvenile Corps placed 3rd. in Novice Basic Strut. The girls are students of the Harvey Dance Academy at the Oshawa Shopping Centre under the direction of Miss I. Harvey

AT HOME

Mr. & Mrs. John Clay Kemp, 65 Garrard Road, Whitby will be at home to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary and will be happy to receive their friends, relatives, neighbours and former customers(Kemps Grocery) on Sunday Aug. 30, 1970 from 2 PM to 5 PM and 7PM to 9PM.

MARRIAGE

Mr. and Mrs. Terence O'Malley wish to announce the marriage of their daughter Valerie Jean to James Henry Harlow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Harlow of Whitby. The wedding took place Aug. 15 in Etobicoke.

PENSIONS

Oshawa's board of control has endorsed a proposal from the city of Windsor suggesting municipalities be allowed to sell a set percentage of their debenture to the Ontario municipal employees' retirement fund, ensuring the employees the highest return on their investment and providing municipalities with an additional source of capital funds.

OLYMPICS

Whitby youngsters took part in a mini-Olympics Friday as the Whitby Recreation Department closed out its summer playground program. Some 250 boys and girls from the eight Whitby playgrounds took part in such events as bubble gum blowing, bunny hopping, tin can bowling and backward broadjumping.

PAINTING

The Oshawa Beta Sigma Phi presented the Dr. Joseph O. Ruddy General Hospital in Whitby with a new painting Friday. The work of art was selected from paintings displayed at the McLaughlin Gallery by members of the Oshawa and District Art Association.

THIRD MEAL

A cooking club called 'The Third Meal' has been formed by the Whitby 4H Club. Leaders will attend a two-day training school at Greenwood United Church in September. The club is open to girls and young women from 12 to 16 years of age. Registration is underway at the Whitby 'Y'.

Where is it? What is it? Young Oshawanians, elementary school age, are invited to submit to the editor their story of the subject matter in this photograph. The best and most complete description of the photograph will be published under the winner's name. Send your story to The Editor, This Week, Box 481, Oshawa.

Car salesman Mike Kalynko points to damage

The used car lot at Seaway Motors was the scene of another attack by vandals over the weekend

For the third weekend, an unknown marksman damaged the windshields of used cars on display.

Police think the weapon used is a pellet or BB gun, which is fired at pretty close range at the windshields and bodywork of the cars. The result, as in the picture, is a splinter chipped out of the safety glass, which means a new windshield has to be installed by the car dealer.

The vandal's "bag" for this weekend was six cars.

Whitby Town Police are investigating the attacks, but, so far, have not come up with any leads. They are, however, from now ongoing to keep this car lot, and others in the area under close surveillance in an attempt to catch the sniper.

Other car dealers in the area have also been subjected to this kind of attack in the past month.

The co-operation of the public is requested to report to the police any suspicious activity around car lots during weekends.

Canada Games not for Oshawa

The 1973 Canada Summer Games will not be played in Oshawa. Federal health and welfare minister John Munro announced Friday that New Westminster-Burnaby, B.C. would host the event.

Oshawa was one of 24 Canadian cities to submit a brief in hopes of acting as host for the games. Mr. Munro, in announcing the winner, said Oshawa's bid was very worthy of consideration but declined to say whether its bid was one of the eight finalists

He did say however that the British Columbia site had a favorable climate and its lake had excellent potential for water sports.

He said his decision was not a crumb tossed to B.C. because Vancouver had lost out on the 1976 Winter Olympics while Montreal won the 1976 Summer Olympics.

Ottawa will be awarding capital and operating grants to the co-hosts of some $1,200,000. The Canada Games idea was originated by the Canadian Amateur Sports Federation in 1967.

The first winter games were held in Quebec City and the first summer games in Halifax-Dartmouth in 1969.

Oshawa Mayor Bruce Mackey expressed disappointment at the loss of the games but said he was proud that Oshawa citizens had thrown their wholehearted support into the effort.

This isn't national police week or anything to do with a recent burglary. It's just a reminder that while you're asleep several dozens of Oshawa and Whitby police officers are on the job making sure all will be in order when you wake up in the morning.

Make moon one gigantic junkyard?

If one Oshawa resident were to have his way, the moon would be turned into a gigantic junk yard.

This was the theory advanced by a local man (who for obvious reasons was hesitant to give his name) in a recent survey by This Week concerning the dumping of nerve gas in the Atlantic Ocean.

"There's no reason why they couldn't blast this stuff off into outer space and have it land on the moon," he said. "It would be a lot better than dumping it in the ocean where it could seep out and poison the water."

Asked about the danger of an accident in outer space that saw the space capsule spill its cargo into the atmosphere, he said man would be no worse off than now.

"What if there was a train derailment while the stuff was being transported to the seashore? Or what if the pressure on the ocean floor breaks the cannisters? Any way you look at it, the danger of killing most of us off is pretty great."

Most of the people approached on the subject were highly critical of the United States decision to use the Atlantic Ocean as a dumping ground for the gas.

Several people suggested that the American government through this action and its presence in Viet Nam is as guilty of atrocities as the Nazis in the Second World War.

"They have absolutely no right to endanger the rest of the world the way they have," said Bill Johnson, a local GM worker. "We're not talking about killing six million Jews here, we're talking about the possible annihilation of mankind."

Several youngsters called the gas dumping another example of hypocrisy by the Establishment. They said that the governments of both Canada and the United States are more than ready to 'protect' young people against the evils of drugs by locking them away, but can then turn around the bring the whole world to the edge of disaster.

"At least with drugs, the only people we might be hurting is ourselves," said Alf Hart, a bearded university student sitting in Memorial Park.

American roulette was the term used by one downtown stroller for the dumping.

"At least with Russian roulette the players have the chance to decide whether or not to pull the trigger. And they have a better than 50 per cent chance of surviving. I'd give our chances at about 9 to 1 against."

The lone defendent of American action was himself an American, Ted Kinach of Denver, Colorado. He felt that with the Russian stockpiling of nerve gas and other such weapons, the Americans had little choice

"As our weapons become obsolete, we have to do away with them Better to have them at the bottom of the ocean whete they can do little or no harm. With them stored on the surface, there's no telling what would happen if an accident took place."

by peter brouwer

Over a cool beer at lunch one day last week a friend and I recalled how most of downtown Oshawa was one big maze of detour signs when we first got here that summer. Bulldozers and big shovels were digging deep holes everywhere, and a stranger in Oshawa could easily get himself lost . . . if he finally did give up on the detour signs and decided "there's got to be a better way". Which is of course what I did.

But that was before I had heard of Fred Crome and how the city's works and traffic departments work hand in hand and have perhaps one of the finest detour systems anywhere.

Anyway, the subject was Fred Crome, and I proposed to my friend that we make this most difficult of city hall jobs an elected office. Perhaps even Mr. Crome himself would welcome the idea of having one of those who are the loudest among his critics take over for a year or two.

As an editor I have had occasion to cross pens with Mr. Crome over the past two years. As a newspaper reporter (on these here little papers you are both and the photog and then some . . .) I have learned that Mr. Crome whom you may on occasion have blamed for the snowplow not getting to your street soon enough, and for all those detours and so on, has saved this city piles upon piles of money by being what he is — a very careful, precise engineer who's conscious of the plight of the already overburdened taxpayer. And that means you in your livingroom chair, or out there on the porch . . .

By this time I have no doubt lost all those among my fans who are not Fred Crome fans. (And it seems to me, from talking to some of the builders in Oshawa, there are some who are just not Fred Crome fans.)

This whole introduction is necessary so you, the reader and any prospective candidates for the job won't get the wrong idea.

To get back to this "public office" of the city engineer. Just imagine the election campaign, and the pressure some of the candidates could bring to bear.

My friend — the one with the other beer, remember — said he would run his campaign in a very novel way, one of his slogans being "if you want to keep your driveway in one piece, vote me. If you don't vote for me, I'll make it so that one of my mighty digging machines will be caused to rip through your driveway slightly to erect a hydrant in the middle of your front lawn."

One of these raving maniacs, if elected city engineer, could cause great consternation. A maniac engineer could somehow make those who live on hills have flooded basements, and those of his enemies with many leftovers . . . well, garbage collection, forget about it!

In other words, he would be one hell of an enemy to have.

And that, I suppose, is why this whole idea of making the engineer's post a elected office is preposterous.

Just one thing, Fred. What was with those detour signs on Harmony Road near Olive, earlier this week?

For goodness sake, let's grow up!

Here we go again, projecting the hayseed hicktown image.

When is this town finally going to come of age and learn tolerance? Tolerance of others' foibles is the hallmark of maturity. Times are changing, and rapidly. The resistance to any form of change exhibited by the Oshawa establishment is pathetic.

First it was Sunday opening of stores, then there were the Jeremiahs who forecast financial ruin for the city had we been fortunate enough to get the Canada Games and now they are trying to stop the sale of certain books in Oshawa.

Perhaps they have a point. If the population takes this act of crassly overt censorship of their freedom of choice lying down, then obviously the population is too immature to warrant any consideration as to freedom of choice.

This, if you do but realize it, is the thin end of the wedge. We wonder if that's why it's difficult to attract new industry and business here. The industrial commission churns out propaganda extolling the virtues of Oshawa as a good place to live and work, and the establishment is united in its efforts to screw up any attempt to pull up this town into the 20th century.

Wake up, Oshawa, and get with it. Even Toronto-the-good is changing. What about Oshawa-the-dismal tripping the light fantastic for a change? Don't write and tell us you like it the way it is.

Across the street from our office is Reid's book shop. It was subject to a visit from the Oshawa Police Recently. The police went away with a load of the store's "adult reading matter" — a court case is pending.

Apparently the material along with most of the non-adult material this store sells, coms from our Southern neighbor and naturally goes through Customs (and the Customs people in charge of books are supposedly trained to do the.screening. They certainly are a great deal more sophisticated about it all than the narrow minded perpetrators of this local action.)

It is manifestly unfair to give the local police the job of enforcing the laws governing the sale of adult reading material. Why should our police department be held up to ridicule in having to raid bookshops of Oshawa and then have to decide what publications may give someone cause to be offended? Really, nothing is good or bad of itself, but it is how it affects oneself or others — one man's meat is another man's poison. The police should not be lumbered with the very tricky decision as to what is meat and what is poison. It surely depends on the individual's metabolism.

The "adult books" deal mostly with the sexual act in all its varieties and some of the acts described in there are apparently an affront to persons who are behind the persecution and hence their action. This is not as far as we can ascertain a question of corrupting the young (this universally was done previously at a much earlier age by Saturday and Sunday morning cartoons on the idiot box.)

It should be added at this point that the stores selling this material go to some considerable trouble to keep minors away from the adult material.

Reverting to those cartoons for a moment. Have you ever stopped to consider that you will probably never find a program in any of the media to surpass say "Super Heroes" show for the the sheer concentration of violence sadism, etc. Into half a program we blithely allow our youngsters to watch a coyote being burned, stomped, clouted, stretched, blown up, flattened and dropped from a great height and cats that are clobbered by mice and dogs. You name any form of violence including a fate worse than death (but excluding rape) and you can be sure that at some time or other some cartoon character has perpetrated a similar act on some other unfortunate cartoon character. Well you might say we adults all know that these are all characters of fiction. Yes, but do the children? They may see TV news which will have clips showing equally violent scenes of the obscene killing of human beings in Viet Nam or the violence that has been a keynote of the civil war in Ireland. After the news, say you switch back to cartoons. How are we to be sure that the children differentiate between the real or unreal? The message is the same — violence is the norm and we submit that since the picture eminates from the same box the youngsters will subconsciously believe or disbelieve all the programs eminating from the box. At that age they cannot be expected to be accurately selective as to what is in fact true as against what is violence, thinly veiled as comedy. They cannot unless they are outstandingly mature, have developed points of reference to enable them to make a rational decision as to the authenticity of the message the TV program is trying to convey (or more important, what it conveys to the individual young mind). This is in our opinion a true definition of obscenity — i.e. violence for violence sake. Sex, by comparison, is pretty tame stuff.

We have digressed somewhat, but necessarily so to get this seizure of books in its proper perspective. Just what are the guardians of our Oshawa reader's morals trying to achieve and more important who are they — what is their experience in this field? What are their qualifications — have they passed with honours a sex perverts course? Are they therefore qualified to decide which books will spawn an army of latter day Jack the Rippers? Their usual argument is that someone has to decide for us. What always puzzles us is — if these individuals are anything less than God and we can assure you catagorically that they are — why is it that they are not corrupted by the contents of these books (they must read them, otherwise they wouldn't know if the story was a corrupting one or just mildly erotic, while we lesser slobs must immediately degenerate into raving sex maniacs after reading books similar to those seized. Their hyphothesis is, of course, spurious.

The store has sold thousands of these "corrupting books" in Oshawa. Either this is an oversexed town or this shop is filling a legitimate need.

It would appear that the sexual frustrations of the citizens are being quenched by reading about the sexual act rather than personally acting. In our opinion this state of affairs has much merit and the availability of such books should not under any circumstances be withheld from those adults (and judging by the volume sold, they are a significant group.) When all is said and done familiarity breeds contempt and there is a limit on the number of ways the act of sexual union can be performed.

Accordingly, if allowed to do so, the publisher of adult books will flood the market and the pornographic book business will die a quiet death from reader's boredom.

Apart from those electrical vibrating gadgets we doubt anyone has come up with anything brand new on matters sexual in the last 3,000 years.

Give us more men like Terry Kelly.

As Oshawanians, we can be extremely proud of our chairman of the Oshawa Games committee. No sour grapes type he. While most of us felt like hurling all sorts of accusations and abuse at Ottawa for its decision to award New Westminster-Burnaby the 1973 Canada Summer Games, that was not Mr. Kelly's reaction.

"The fact that the games have gone to the west in '73 improves our chances of getting them in '77," he said. "They'll have to come back east then."

This from a man who had put in countless hours on efforts to get the games here. Knowledgeable people who saw the Oshawa brief had most of us convinced that it was only a formality; we would definitely be hosting the event.

No doubt at some time in our lives, we have all believed that some prize was with-

Sir:

Regarding Disgusted's letter in the August 19th issue of This Week:

Dear Disgusted:

Although it is unfortunate that you suffer from that popular malady commonly known as Narrow-Mindedness -combined-with-hate- of-that-which -you-cannot -understand; (alas, it is in most cases incurable anyway) we, of N.A.R.K. (Nicest All Round Kids) do not have the time nor the inclination to reply to the major part of your delightful letter.

The purpose of this reply is to correct your erroneous statement concerning the fact that N.A.R.K. is a church-backed organization. The people of St. George's Anglican Church on Centre Street have indeed helped us. They have allowed us to hold a dance in the church basement in order to raise money for the publication of the paper and for this help we are very grateful. However, no church finances us or is involved either directly or indirectly with the actual operation of N.A.R.K. Our paper is run solely by "the bodies at Memorial Park." We trust that this particular point is now clear.

In closing, Disgusted, may we suggest that you buy a copy of N.A.R.K. and stand by for the ensuing bigger and better issues.

One of our primary purposes is to promote a better understanding between people such as yourself and our city's youth. Who knows, perhaps in time you'll be cured.

Love N.A.R.K.

Objects to Children's Aid building as "hippy haven"

Sir:

In reference to the article in the Aug. 19th issue of This Week, about letting the teen-agers use the Old Childrens Aid Building for a dropin centre, written by a Mrs J. Goodman, I have only this to say

Tell me tell me oh please do The old Childrens' Aid won't become a Hippy Haven to Centre St. has some beautiful buildings to add to our city. To let teenagers take over another would be a real pity

They begged and pleaded for the old Legion hall They said if they had it they could have a ball Well, now they have it they claim its too hot. So they sprawl all over the street and parking lot And if a real mess you want to see, Take a stroll down Centre St. with me

The old Childrens' Aid is a nice building, I'll agree, but a Hippy Haven don't let it be. Oh I know these kids aren't all a bad lot. There's some that are okay and haven't gone to pot. But instead of weeping and wailing the same old song, why don't they try and help themselves along. The senior citizens work at their dropin centre, and have fun too

If the kids took some lessons from them, they'd be surprised what they could do

Scotty – a Centre St resident

"Straight kids" are becoming hard to find

Sir,

Having just read the published letter signed "Disgusted," I found myself wondering who the real Milque toast people are. If the author of that letter was such an "honest," "clean" and responsible person, why didn't he sign his name. Also, if Jesus was such a loving and kind person do you think he would, 'stamp out such sinners as these kids today," Which kids would he stamp out, the long-hairs in the park or just anyone who didn't say "yes sir"

I guess I don't have to worry though, even if I often sit in the park, or go to the Drop-In Centre, because I don't have long hair

Another point which almost made me ill was the statement that "these kids are bums". Add this to the statement about the kids taking over Disneyland and you really begin to wonder if this person's brain has been fried by too much polluted air. A few years back a guy with a moustache killed 6,000,000 Jews, so I guess all people with moustaches are waiting for their chance to supervise genocide

Finally, the person said that the "straight" kids are doing fine things and being good citizens, but he obviously hasn't gone too far from his safety because straight kids are becoming very hard to find!

John Hamilton

You're the dreamer, his reply to "Disgusted"

Sir:

I feel that the letter in THIS WEEK, August 19, and signed "Disgusted", deserves an attempt at an honest, sincere answer.

The August 12 article on What These Kids Want was well-written and factual. If it appears that those who prepared the article favour we "young drop-outs," it is only because they have seen both sides of the coin and heard both sides of the story, and have concluded that the "hippie" way of life does hold some merit.

I would like to ask "Disgusted", and those who agree with his or her editorial, to keep an open mind. Try to remember that every change is a response to a NEED for change. Instead of writing us off as a bunch of lazy bums and dirty freaks, how about giving us a hand in the search for the reasons why there is so much wrong with our world. You might start with the realization that the kind of bitterness, narrow-mindedness and criminal bigotry that abounds in the conflict between our generations is constantly making our mutual goal more distant. It would seem, Disgusted, that you are in no mood for compromise You want it your way and only your way

Well, YOU'RE the dreamer, my friend Those who entertain your kind of selfish attitude will, I'm afraid, always be disappointed. And disgusted

Paul Barry, 17

Gutless?

Sir:

I wish to compliment This Week on the excellent article in the Aug. 12 issue, concerning my friends, the hair kids.

My real reason, however, for this letter, is to point out to some of the more intelligent and receptive members of the community, just what these kids get thrown at them from people such as "DISGUSTED" of the Aug. 19 editorial page.

I could take many pages to dispute the number of negative points that consist of half truths and outright lies originating from the U.S. government and its law enforcement agencies, and passed on to a gullible public by the various news media. Unfortunately, though, since it appears that poor mister disgusted and his poor Disneyland, and his poor little mind is quite beyond redemption; forget it, man. If I dig my long hair, then that's it. But really, you won't believe how it can totally freak out some of our fellow citizens; for no tangible reason at all

Could the reason for mister disgusted and his peers be the fact that they are so sick and bored with their plastic lives, that they automatically lash out at the present day youth freedom.

Are they really green with envy? Did they miss out back in 1930? Are we really so very gutless? I don't think so. Mr. Disgusted wouldn't even sign his name to his putrid little hate sheet.

Love and Peace,
Samuel R. Hill

There are lots of occupational hazards in being a newspaper reporter. I don't mean just physical hazards, although there are enough of those. During my career so far I have come close to serious injury or death covering fires, accidents and the like. I have nearly been run over by a tank while covering military exercises in Europe. I once received a death threat from a self-professed Nazi organization here in Canada.

These hazards you accept as part of the job and figure they make the work more interesting. It's the little niggling things though that get you down when you're tired and make you wonder whether you wouldn't be better off working in a bank or holding down some nice cushy government job.

The things that really grate include the politician who makes a statement to you and then when he realizes the public has taken exception to it, hollers that he has been misquoted.

There's the English teacher who criticizes the simple grammar and vocabulary used in news stories, turning a blind eye to the fact that it's our job to give the average reader the news as simply and quickly as possible and his job to upgrade reading standards.

There's also the fellow who accuses newspapers of printing nothing but cheap sensationalism. He's usually the one who comes up to you at a cocktail party and wants to know the real low-down on that gory murder case you covered last week

But there are many advantages to journalism, not the least of which is the ability to let off a little steam every once in a while. All of us see things from time to time that frustrate us. Usually there's nothing we can do about them. At least I am able to ask questions about these things in public

For instance, why would City Council listen to the ravings of a handful of old spoilsports and cancel the Sunday rock concerts at Memorial Park? It's not the young people's fault that the petitioners had to grow old.

Why does the proprietor of a recently-renovated restaurant feel he has to put an American flag up alongside the Canadian flag? Doesn't he realize that American tourists don't want to see American flags but want to feel they're in a real foreign country?

Why can't the directory assistance operators be a little more friendly? It almost seems like I am interrupting something else they're doing. Do they have to cut you off without even a 'Thank you' or 'Goodbye' once they've given you the number?

Why don't the husbands and boyfriends of these feminists turn them over their knee? Isn't this what they really want even though they won't admit it?

Why do restaurants mark up the price of wine so outrageously? Don't they understand the basic rules of economics? Wouldn't they sell a lot more if they were more reasonable about it?

If local cigar stores are only going to sell a dozen or so brands of cigars, why do they call themselves cigar stores? Why not be realistic and call themselves Souvenir-Backscratcher-Sunglasses-Toothpaste-Tanning Lotion stores?

Why do the Oshawa city buses carry advertisements for Christmas gifts in mid-summer"

Why do some local merchants look at you funny when you ask for fairly common articles? "That? We don't stock that? You'll have to get that in Toronto." Aren't these the same merchants who complain that business is bad because everyone goes to Toronto to buy things?

Is everyone else as glad as I am that a local grocery store open on Sundays has done away with having you sign a slip saying you bought only necessities? Once I signed "Gabby Hayes' and another time 'Linus Van Pelt of 1816 Charlie Brown Drive'

And finally, police in Ontario have criticized the Ontario Police College at Aylmer as being run-down and filthy. Would it be safe to refer to it as a 'Pigpen'?

One of hospital technician Mao Ouyang's hobbies is photography. He took this one at a meeting of the Oshawa Obedience Association, and calls it "Angela meets Brandy."

MARIJUANA -- WHAT IS IT "GRASS, POT, TEA OR WEED."

Although known for nearly 5,000 years, Marijuana has no recognized benefit in medical practice. Its sale is legally restricted. You cannot even buy it with a prescription.

The leaves and flowers of Canada Sativa, or the Indian hemp plant, have long been used by people who experiment with "mood" type drugs. Marijuana is not considered to be addictive, like Heroin and Morphine. There are no severe withdrawl symptons if you stop.

For this reason young folks think Marijuana is a safe drug to smoke. The illegal drug pushers call these cigarettes "Reefers, Joints, or Sticks." Their smoke is unpleasantly harsh and smells like burnt rope. They are the first step to danger.

The next issue of these public service messages will discuss the dangers of using Marijuana.

in our grasp. We knew that as soon as the winning name was read out, all we had to do was bound up on the stage and receive our just reward.

How shocked we were when the name being read off did not sound anything like ours. There must be some mistake. Then, our shocked disbelief turned to anger and resentment. What have they got against me? The judge must be a relative of the winner

Mr. Kelly could have taken this attitude and no one could have blamed him. To work so hard and to believe victory is within your grasp. But he did not react this way and Oshawa is that much the better for it.

Okay, we lost the 1973 Summer Games. But let's not give up in discouragement. Let's adopt the optimistic attitude of Terry Kelly and work like the dickens to get the 1977 games.

And while we're at it, let's look around and see what else we can go after to put Oshawa on the map. We've shown that we can be magnanimous in defeat. Winning should be a snap.

This Week by taxi

Missed your paper?

If you're a resident of Oshawa or Whitby, and somehow our carrier boy missed your door on Wednesday, telephone MERCURY TAXI (725-4773) Thursday morning and a copy of the paper will be delivered to your door free of charge

THIS WEEK is distributed to all residents of Oshawa and Whitby, and each residence is entitled to one copy delivered by carrier boy or girl to the front door.

FIELD DAY

The Oshawa Recration Department's annual Field Day for participants of the Summer Community Play Area program was a success. Winners of the "over-all achievement" trophies following the big athletic meet were Morris Taylor (10) representing the Connaught Play Area, scoring 70 points out of 90 for the boys, and Melanie White (12) representing the Fernhill Area who had a perfect score in five out of six events to pick up a total of 81 points for the girls.

DONATION

The Ontario County Association for Children with Learning Disabilities was presented with a cheque last week from the IODE Golden Jubilee Chapter. The money will go towards the summer program of special instruction with learning difficulties being held at General Vanier School.

Students go door-to-door

Honesty basic ingredient of test-marketeers

Oshawa-area college students have found a way to earn next year's tuition fees and other expenses in today's depressed labor market

This week, they began going door to door in Oshawa test-marketing a number of beauty products and drugs for two newly-formed Canadian companies, Chemtek and Phoenix House

While Peterborough and London are the traditional marketing test centres, Oshawa has been picked this time for a relatively simple reason — the president of Chemtek is a man who earns his living here

Sherwood Bassin teaches law in the business division at Durham College. With a bachelor of science degree in pharmacy, a master of science degree in hospital pharmacy and administration and a law degree, it seems only natural that he would get involved in such an operation

Bassin teamed up with two colleagues in April, 1969 to form his company and since that time, they have developed a line of products, gained financial backing and received approval from the Food and Drug Directorate

The two other members of the team are Donald Michie, vice president, finance and administration and Austin Fretz, vice president of research and production Fretz is also president of Phoenix House

Michie is a graduate of the University of Manitoba and has had several years experience with management programs He is presently a systems analyst with a major oil company

Fretz is currently senior product development manager with one of the world's largest pharmaceutical product manufacturers.

The basic ingredient these young men are putting into the marketing of their products is honesty.

"We feel this is the only approach to take," said Bassin in a recent interview. "We intend to tell the public just what our products can and cannot do. Take our hair shampoo for instance Where other firms count on you using too much of their product, we insist that you follow directions

"That way, where you have to buy another bottle of the other product in a couple of months, ours will last six months when used as directed."

This honest approach is being used with the college students who are marketing the products as well. Where other companies have been known to exploit students by asking for a large investment from them before giving them products to sell, the students selling Chemtek and Phoenix House products invest nothing but their time.

"We're the ones who are taking the risks," said Bassin. "We have hand-picked these students and they have received our products on consignment. Each of them has a couple of hundred dollars worth of our products without having given us a cent."

Bassin is convinced that this mutual trust between the two companies and the students will make the student salesmen take more interest in what they are doing and will bring results.

Two of the drug products being circulated are a dandruff preparation called Combat and a throat lozenge called Probe

A third product, a poison antidote, is in the process of receiving Food and Drug approval and so will not be on the market for a while

Bassin and his colleagues realize that these types of products are usually purchased in a drug store and this is where they hope to place them once the market survey is completed

The cosmetics, however, will continue to be sold door to door. They include a deep cleansing lotion, emollient lotion conditioning shampoo, hair grooming lotion, conditioning lotion and after-shave balm

Sherwood Bassin (left) and Don Mitchie discussing some of the products to go out in the marketing survey that started in Oshawa this week.

CAR WASH

Junior Achievement of Oshawa is having a CAR WASH on Saturday, August 29 at the ESSO station located at King & Park. At 99 cents, it will be running from 8.30 A.M. to 6.30 P.M., said Jennifer Lewko of the JA committee.

APRICOT

4 pounds pork back or side ribs
2½ tablespoons cornstarch
1/3 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
2½ cups apricot nectar
3 tablespoons vinegar
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Place ribs in a large saucepan, in racks for spit barbecuing or cut into 2 rib sections for grill barbecuing. Add 1 tablespoon salt, 8 to 10 whole cloves, 1 sliced onion and enough boiling water to just cover the ribs. Cover and simmer for about 1¼ hours or until the meat is quite tender. Drain. Use at once or refrigerate until needed.

For the sauce, combine cornstarch, brown sugar, mustard and nutmeg in a saucepan; add apricot nectar. Cook and stir until mixture boils and is smoothly thickened. Remove from heat and stir in vinegar and butter or margarine. Set aside until needed then reheat on edge of grill.

For spit barbecuing: Thread partially cooked rib racks into spit, accordian fashion, leaving space between the folds so heat can penetrate. Check balance then fasten in place. Rotate over moderate coals for 20 to 30 minutes or until nicely browned and glazed. Brush frequently with apricot sauce during last half of cooking time. Then cut into 2 rib pieces and serve with any remaining sauce.

Buying habits show

Oshawa housewives don't scare easily

One thing can be said for Oshawa housewives. they don't scare easily

A report from the United States a month ago that most breakfast cereals have little if any food value hasn't changed things in Oshawa

A survey by This Week reveals that most grocery store managers have noticed no appreciable change in the cereal buying habits of their customers

"The kids are pretty persuasive," said one manager. "They like a certain kind of cereal for its taste or for the prizes it contains and they put up quite a holler if their mother tries to switch."

Robert Choate told a United States Senate subcommittee in July that most dry cereals have no more nutritional value than a shot of whisky.

He displayed a chart of 60 cereal brands ranking the bottom 40 all but worthless because he said, they contain only a few of nine major nutritional requirements

Since then, breakfast food companies have packed the sub-committee hearing room with nutritional experts who have condemned Choate's theory

"That's one thing that has stopped a public boycott of some cereals," said another manager "They have read these other claims and have dismissed Choate's charges

"It's a lot easier to give in to the kids with a clear conscience if you choose to believe the other experts."

One manager reported a slight increase in sales of some of the cereals such as Total and Special K that Choate rated high on the list.

"But there wasn't any similar decrease in the sale of the candy-coated and prize-giving cereals," he said. "I figure this means they're trying to wean the kids gradually over to these higher nutrition cereals but I doubt if it will work."

One store manager was rather cynical about the buying habits of his customers.

"They don't pay attention to any warnings they read. We've had a lot of women buy non-phosphate soap powder and then go right back to the old stuff when they don't figure they're getting as clean a wash as they were getting before."

One woman shopper seemed to confirm the opinions of the store managers polled. Mrs Jane Robertson had just let her little boy pick the cereal he wanted, a sugar-coated puffed rice rated far down on Choate's list.

"I've tried to get him to eat some of the cereals recommended by that expert in the States but most of it just sits in the bowl. I make sure he has orange juice with it and I feed him fruit in between meals. As long as he gets filled up, I'm not too worried about the nutritional value. He gets a good healthy lunch."

August is here and the fur sales are on. If in your secret heart you Think Mink, now is the time to do something about it. The prices are lower than they will be later and the furrier will store your purchase until the first kiss of frost

Winter is too long and life is too short to go without mink, which for all its luxury look is also a hard wearing fur

Mink is being dyed: I saw beautiful pink mink muffs and stoles in New York, and mink stencilled to look like leopard or tiger. It is being teamed with other furs as in a low-belted shadow pearl mink coat with brown fox collar and cuffs and its is being styled with detachable hoods and hems to provide three different lengths, long, midi and jacket lengths.

Jackets are longer, to wear with pants, the exception being the waist-length shortie which is perfect for the midi skirt. Capes are much in evidence, in all lengths, to wear with everything.

Newest idea of all, — mink is for men. Saga mink, bred in Scandinavia where winters are six months long, has entered into the age of the fashion conscious male

In the photograph the gentleman is wearing a camel-dyed mink, double-breasted trench coat with leather trim. The notched collar is fashionably wide, the back vent raised high and the look totally masculine

Following the lines of her companion, the lady wears a Saga white mink, trench-styled, double breasted coat with the added highlight of a wide self belt at centre back. Sporty patch pockets on the flared skirt also take their lead from the coat design. Both coats are by Ben Kahn.

The musk man's all wet

Billiards a great personality builder

Max Rosenheck and some 20 other Oshawa men think The Music Man is all wet.

There is no truth to the rumor that we have trouble right here in Oshawa city that starts with "t" and that rhymes with "p" and that stands for pool.

Billiards, as the Optimist Club of Oshawa prefers to call the game, is one of the activities that boys belonging to the club engage in.

"Billiards is a great personality builder. A boy has to be able to learn to control his temper and concentrate or he's going to get beaten at the game no matter how good he is."

This is the way Bill Tomlinson put it recently in an interview with This Week. He is a member of the club's board of directors and puts in about eight hours a week on club business. Max Rosenheck is club president.

"The typical reaction is that we're encouraging boys to hang around the pool hall, but this isn't so," he said. "We run the billiard club from 9 to 11 a.m. on Saturdays when you don't get the scruffy types hanging around. And the boys scrutinize themselves rigidly."

About 40 boys belong to the billiard club under the supervision of Chuck Trafagander, operator of the Cadillac Billiard Hall and member of the club He donates the hall to the boys each Saturday

The Optimists were in the limelight recently during the parade to promote Oshawa's chances of hosting the Canada Games. They were responsible for having Portland, the possibly-pregnant dromedary (camel to you) in the parade

"Keith Connell of the Bowmanville Zoo very kindly loaned us the camel when he heard what we wanted it for," said Tomlinson. "Since having the Canada Games in Oshawa would be very advantageous to the youth of the city, we felt we should get involved."

As an indication of just how kind Keith Connell was, the camel usually rents out at $300 a day and has been on the Dean Martin show, in a number of movies and is the beauty on the revised package of Camel cigarettes in the United States.

Portland was a great hit with the residents of Oshawa and became the unofficial mascot of the Oshawa Summer Games promotion.

Encouraging activities of young boys was the reason behind the founding of the Optimist movement in the United States early in this century. Originally, the club's work was strictly with boys in trouble, but this is no longer the case.

"A number of our boys are from one-parent homes, have parental troubles or have been in trouble with the law," said Tomlinson. "But we act more in a preventive way today. We provide activities for boys so that they won't get into trouble in the first place."

The local club, just starting into its fourth year, sponsors two activities other than billiards. There is a rifle club with 20 members although there are 150 youngsters who would like to join. Space won't allow it.

Track and field is the other activity. The Optimist Club of Scarborough has provided Olympic material from its track club after only two years and the Oshawa Optimists are hopeful that some day they will do the same.

The Optimist movement is growing rapidly in North America, partly because there are lots of things for its members to become involved in. It is set up on the merit system where inactive clubs are dissolved.

Each local chapter is encouraged to survey the community and determine what type of activities for boys are required. Then it's up to the members to see they get implemented.

Locally, the Optimists hold supper meetings at the Genosha Hotel every first and third Tuesday of the month. Interested residents who feel they might like to join are invited to a meeting where they can be filled in with more detail on the club's activities and plans for the future

VASSAL

Stephen Lewis, candidate for the Ontario New Democratic Party leadership, told an audience at the Credit Union Hall last week that Canada would become a vassal state within a few years if it continues to sell its natural resources to the United States.

Oshawa man brings new life to historic home

EDITOR'S NOTE: This story was especially written for This Week by Pete McGillen, for seven years the city editor of the Peterborough Examiner and for 20 years the outdoor editor of the Toronto Telegram.

By Pete McGillen

This is the story of how a former Oshawa man brought new life and beauty to an old Rice Lake home, a place rich in historic interest because it was built and was the home of Gerald S. Hayward, probably the world's most famous painter of miniatures.

It was known for years as "The Willows" and following a succession of tenants and owners had been vacant for five years. In 1965, Wm. Budchuck and his wife Victoria discovered the place and fell in love with it.

It snuggles into a hillside just east of Wallace's Marina on the south shore of the lake and the view to the north and west across the island-studded lake is breath-taking.

Budchuk, a cabinetmaker and expert in making period furniture started the massive task of restoring and improving the building to meet his conception of what a summer resort should be.

He had been a builder and for five years owned the Sandalwood Restaurant in Oshawa. He was also associated with his father-in-law Charles Victor in Victor's Sporting Goods store.

He enclosed the wide verandahs that ran around two sides of the building, converting them into pleasant bedrooms, closets and sitting rooms. He made new doors in ornate style to match the interior. All the verandahs and the ten bedrooms were panelled. The tower rooms became cosy lounges. The ancient V-joint ceilings and walls were scraped and refinished.

The six bathrooms were tiled and modernized and the five stone fireplaces were rejuvenated.

Four years and thousands of dollars later, the planning and work of Budchuck and his wife were complete and the place opened for guests in July of last year.

It was singularly appropriate that Budchuck should name the new resort, Victoria Inn, after his wife's first name, because the first owner had painted miniatures of Queen Victoria and her husband, Albert. The Queen was so happy over the results that she became one of the artist's most powerful patrons.

To further emphasize the name "Victoria", there is a large and beautiful picture of the Queen taken late in her reign. It's in a box frame and illuminated by hidden lights. At the fireplace in the main lounge is a round stone, with faces carved on two sides, presumably those of the Queen and her husband.

According to 75-year-old Earl Harris, a neighbor of the Budchucks, the building was started in 1902 and took three years to build. The original plans still in excellent condition were drawn by a New York architect, a few years after the artist Hayward, had endeared himself to the great families of that period in the U.S. city

The builder was Fred Pratt, father of Wally Pratt who operates the Rice Lake Boat Works at Gore's Landing

The old building is now a modern summer resort and showplace, with new life, color and attraction. At night banks of subdued colored lights glow and illumine the front, facing the water

For efficiency, the dining room, already famous for its steak, chicken and seafood dishes is operated separate from the rooms. The latter are taken by tourists by the week or by the night.

Youth Theatre expects over 60 per cent attendance

Theatrical statistics indicate that the average attendance figure for summer theatre companies to be an average of 35 to 40 per cent. The ORONO YOUTH THEATRE, in repertory at Orono Arena, fully expect that their capacity will be better than 60 per cent by the end of their first season on August 30

This achievement has led the Board of Directors for the Young Company to start considering plans for the summer program in 1971. The Board has noted the enthusiasm of the audiences who have demonstrated their approval by the many donations received in the envelopes inserted in the programs

Personal comments letters and phone calls from patrons have expressed delight with the well mannered and disciplined company of actors, the Western open-air barbeques, the art displays and booths in the Arena and most of all the calibre of the productions.

With the presentation of IMAGES FOR FIVE (a cabaret entertainment written by JOHN McGUIRK of Bowmanville and described as "a folk montage with music") on Monday the ORONO YOUTH THEATRE end their season with one more performance of DARK OF THE MOON tonight and three more performances of the Canadian Premiere of INDIANS on Aug. 27, 29 and 30.

LAST CONCERT

The next and final concert of the Oshawa Civic Band at the Memorial Park bandshell is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 3. For that concert the band under Captain George Quick will be joined by the 70-voices strong County Town Singers as the guest artists. The concert starts at 8.15 p.m. There will be no concert this Thursday.

STAGE DOOR WINNERS

It would be hard to fathom how two such individual talents as Dot and Morris Rainvilles could come together to make such a special duo, but the pairing was a natural. Whether it's Dot caressing a French love song or belting "The Impossible Dream" Morris cutting up through "Those Were The Days" or the two of them swinging through a Beatle's medley, this is a twosome rightfully tagged "The biggest two-piece band in the world". But more important than being the biggest, they are without a doubt the very best.

Dot and Morris will be on stage nitely at 9:00 p.m. at Jim's Stage Door.

THEATRES

Everyone's talking about 'The Ballad of Cable Rogue' with Jason Robards and Stella Stevens now playing at the Marks. On the same program Kirk Douglas in 'The Arrangement'. The Marks will change its program starting Friday, and 'Chisum', another western populaire with John Wayne is scheduled. 'Up the Brass!' is the message for the army from 'Kelly's Heroes' now playing at the Plaza. Clint Eastwood, everywoman's man, stars with Telly Savalas.

Starting Wednesday at the Odeon, 'Cindy & Donna' with Debbie Osborne and the 'Wild Rebels. with Steve Alamo is scheduled.

The Regent continues its refreshing family entertainment binge and offers Walt Disney again, with 'The Jungle Book' and 'Swiss Family Robinson' with John Mills, and Dorothy McGuire.

A movie that has been around for a long time, and still fascinates the crowds, Ben Hur, with Charlton Heston, is playing this weekend at the Oshawa Drive-In. Also on the same bill is the 'Extraordinary Seaman with Faye Dunaway and David Niven.

HOTELS

There's plenty of country and western music flowing around the local saloons this week.

Don Sailor and James Adams are singing and playing for you at the Cadillac Hotel.

Held over for the first time in Oshawa, the Lancaster features Rusty George and The Canadian Rainbows.

The darlings of the Georgian set, the Par Four are entertaining nitely to growing numbers.

The Carousel hosts the Marauders with Bill Harvey, straight from the Constellation Hotel in Toronto, and they'll be shaking things up with rock and rhythm.

Rendezvous to Harry's Hideaway in the Genosha Hotel and see the Seoul Kittens. An extraordinary versatile group of five Oriental girls, they are simply 'sensational.'

Entertaining for you with the modern and rock favorites, Dave Nichols and The Change are playing this weekend at the Spruce Villa in Whitby.

Mr. and Mrs. Personality, the Rainvilles are offering their usual good variety at Jim's Stage Door, in the Hotel Whitby.

The Central Hotel, brings you 'The Show Toppers' straight from Las Vegas, the eternal

GIRDLE CHARGE LACKS FOUNDATION?

The woman motorist who drives by the seat of her pantyhose is safer on the highway than her sister who wears a girdle, according to a report in Marketing, the Canadian advertising news weekly.

It quotes an automobile manufacturer's survey which claims the girdle is "probably the most unsung menace on the road today."

The car maker's argument goes like this: "Discomfort from the girdle causes the woman to squirm, thus reducing concentration. And the pull from the garters tends to hoist her feet off the control pedals. To overcome this, she often pushes against the pull and ends up going faster than she really intends to. On the other hand (or leg), weightless pantyhose is comfortable and allows complete concentration on the road ahead."

But a leading girdle manufacturer violently disagrees: "We've been making girdles for 30 years and have never heard this complaint. The evidence for this claim seems to have been simply plucked out of thin air. There's no foundation for these statements."

'SPEED' DIET PILLS

Diet pills should be banned immediately, thinks Dr. John Lyon, former president of the Canadian Medical Association.

Dr. Lyon argues they are useless as diet aids and that doctors have failed to live up to their responsibilities by freely prescribing such pills, which he says are misused in the form of "speed". He refuses to prescribe them in his own group practice in Leamington, Ont.

On Wednesday, August 26th, 1970 Edward P. Oscapella, in Co-operation with the Oshawa Recreation Department and the McLaughlin Public Library presents a concert with music of the 20th Century Composers with piano soloists Pam Wharram and Edward P. Oscapella at the piano and violinist Mr. Oscapella.

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

If you have been watching the network stations during this long hot summer you will notice they have started pushing out promotion spots on the fall season. It almost seems like the big one's — ABC, NBC, CBS, CBC, CTV — are groping in the dark in their efforts to fill the thousands of hours of television time.

As usual some of the shows will be terrible and some will be able to barely amuse. After the initial curiosity wears thin cable subscribers will be returning to channels 17, the new educational Toronto station 19 and for local events to Cable 8.

The reason for the shift will be the basic desire to become informed and a natural curiosity to watch events of a local nature. The small ones — 17, 19, and 8 — are also proceeding with new programming for the fall season.

Recently I had a chance to visit with the production types at 19 and viewed some of the many programs already in the can. Most of these programs are in color and I found them informative and entertaining.

Channel 8 will also be putting out new programming but unfortunately in black and white only

The Oshawa Symphony Orchestra is taking over the production of a weekly half hour musical variety show covering everything in music from the nasal twanging of the Country and Western music to the mathematical preciseness of Mozart. Under the direction of Jacoob Groob this show has many possibilities and tentative plans call for a local rock group, an organist and a visit with Groob and family for an opener.

The viewers will find out that Groob is an outspoken fascinating man, superbly well aware of the music scene and most important he's equally at home with Bach or the Beatles. As a matter of fact I have tentatively suggested naming the show "From Bach to Rock" but so far all I have received from the musical types is a small sneer at the name.

Regardless of the name, the potential of this series of shows is almost unlimited, and the Oshawa Symphony Orchestra has in my opinion shown the courage that is exemplary to a youthful expansionist group that wants to get on top of the heap and stay there

The orchestra should also be congratulated for the enormity of the undertaking they are proposing It takes a lot of work to produce this type of show and the people who will benefit are the viewers

1. And in the third week of the eighth month of the year one thousand nine hundred and sixty nine it came to pass that a mighty edict from the Hill of Ott smote the men, women and children of the land of Can with a smite that was severe and that made the very foundations of the land tremble and many a nervous lip quiver.

2. And this thing called edict boiled, and in that it boiled it boiled down to the fact that one of the henchmen of Big Chief Peter Waterhole told unto the scribes gathered on the Hill of Ott, yea unto all the people of the land of Can, even those in the land of Osh that the big plum called Games of Summer would go west, as the young man did, and as an earlier plum didn't which had been expected to.

3. And the henchman of Big Chief Waterhole was from the Land of Ham and oft did he show it, in that he hammed, much like unto the Big Chief who was seen muchly under the waves of the sea in this the third week of the eighth month of the year one thousand nine hundred and seventy. And his name was Johnwhocouldn'tquitpuffing.

4. Now the said Johnwhocouldn'tquitpuffing, and who had made quite a todo about the fact that he was going to be a Johnwhocould, the same John arose on the Hill of Ott and called unto himself the scribes of the land, yea even a scribe who scribbled for the Times of Osh, and spoke, saying, I, Johnwhocouldn'tquitpuffing, and those who are with me, but most of whom shall remain nameless, well, we have chosen unto us the far western reaches of the land of Can, and we have diligently considered that the Land of Burnetcetera should get the Games of Summer in the year one thousand nine hundred and seventy three.

5. And a groan went up in the land of Osh, as the aforesaid scribbler scrambled to the line of bell and spoke unto his fellow scribblers in the Land of Osh to let them know the wherewithall of this thing, spoken unto the scribes of the land by Johnwhocouldn'tquitpuffing.

6. And also did a moan go up, and there was some gnashing of teeth and considerable wailing was heard in the land of Osh.

7. Now the words spoken by the said Johnetcetera were especially disheartening to Terence of Osh, who had set out to bring unto the Land of Osh these Games of Summer in which the young men and maidens from across the land of Can would do battle and run like mad in circles, and in which they would throw things at one another and away from one another and generally exhaust themselves.

8. But Terence of Osh bit his lower lip and spoke saying, we have done all we could and this thing we have done will give the land of Osh a new hope for the Games of Summer to be held the following time. And there were many who said yea and amen.

9. And the Wayward Beevee, chief ruler of Osh who had been a Henchmen Class 1 of Terence of Osh, spoke saying this man Terence has done all he could, and we shall overcome some day(though he did not sing it).

10. And there were some in the Land of Osh who spoke saying I told you so, but they were the same Oshites who were always saying I told you so, and there were others who breathed a sigh of relief, for they had been the Jeremiahs of Osh who had shouted doom would come to the Land of Osh and to the coffers of Osh in that the Games of Summer and the bucks they would cost the Land of Osh would hurt the people severely in the pocket book.

11. And the Chronicler of Osh saw this thing from afar off, and he shed a tear for Terence of Osh and for the Wayward Beevee and for all those who had turned out in numbers and who had backed up Terence of Osh in his mighty effort.

12. Moreover did he wonder why Johnwhocouldn'tquitpuffing had not seen fit to give unto the Land of Osh that which the Land of Osh should have had. And the Chrinicler sobbed moreover, saying, I have fallen down on the job, and I have not beforehand con-

Karen gets bronze medal in Legion track and field

At Seagram Stadium in Waterloo, Karen McLeese of the Oshawa Legion Track & Field Club maintained her consistently high calibre performance by placing third in the Midget Girls High Jump at 4'10". Karen has cleared 5' a number of times this summer, but the heat of the day was quite oppressive and not conducive to outstanding results. She received the bronze medal which was the only award captured by the Oshawa Club this time.

Mike Engel narrowly missed a third place in the midget boys javelin throw, his personal best of 146'9" was just 3" short of a bronze medal. Both Karen and Mike will be attending O'Neill Collegiate this Fall.

Stan Naczkowski of McLaughlin and John Johnson of Donevan Collegiate have both been with the Oshawa Track Club for two years. They competed in the 100 and 200 metre sprints. Stan was 2nd in the first heats of both races while John placed 4th in each heat. Stan made the finals but was pushed back to 5th place by the more experienced Toronto runners.

Leeta Brown, age 12, entered the 100 metre dash for bantam girls, placed 4th in her heat, which was quite a fast one. This is Leeta's first year on the track and she has a great deal of talent. She will be a big asset to the T.R. McKewan school team, when she starts there in September.

Three other athletes from Oshawa found competition reasonable but they did not perform to the best of their ability. John McFadden from Central Collegiate in the Bantam boys high jump and discus throw. Mary Stewart a Donevan midget girl who throws the discus and shot, and Murray Garrison of O'Neill who ran the 400 metres for midget boys.

The Oshawa Recreation Department rounded out its seven-week summer gymnastic training Friday at Eastdale Collegiate with a gymnastic display. Children from six to 16 years showed off their skills on the trampoline, mats, balance beam, parallel bars

Drug abuse council launches info plan

The Council on Drug Abuse (CODA) is launching its public information program this week by equipping more than 600 pharmacies across Ontario as Drug Information Centres. Crank C. Buckley, CODA president said, "the public will be able to pick up free pamphlets from display racks on drugs most commonly abused.

"Initially, our literature campaign will be centred in drug stores and drug departments of department stores. Later the pamphlets will be given national distribution. The first group of pamphlets to be distributed cover Stimulants, Solvents, Narcotics and a Drug Reference Chart. There are eight different pamphlets in all with Depressants, Drugs and the Law, Hallucinogens and Drug Abuse — A Guide For Parents, to be distributed shortly. We feel that Pharmacists, because of their knowledge of drugs, are a key group to help inaugurate our drug information campagin," Mr. Buckley said.

"A comprehensive promotional campaign will support the pamphlet program", Mr. Buckley said "including TV, radio, transit cards, outdoor billboards, newspaper and magazine advertisements and hang-up posters." Additional display material including "Do You know What You're Doing?" buttons, window banners and easel cards is being made available to pharmacists enrolled in the program.

"Drug Abuse is a growing social phenomenon affecting all levels in the community. The drug scene is surrounded by rumours and half truths. Basic factual information is desperately needed. If we can make people more knowledgeable about drugs and their abuse, then intelligent dialogue can follow", Mr. Buckley said

Water carnival tops off S '70

In the past, Simcoe Hall Boys' Club has offered swimming only as a summer program. This year, in response to changing community needs, "Summer 70" was introduced.

"Summer 70" was planned to provide variety of activities to the youth of Oshawa. The 1200 who registered for the three sessions had a rotation of activity areas to participate in.

Highlights of the program were the special events day when the kids tried their talents at Penny Carnivals, fitness tests, field days, water carnivals and tabloid sports meets.

As a pilot project, the "Summer 70" program served as a guide in setting up a fall schedule that will offer a greater variety of activities. Variety will be only a part of the new look program as the staff hopes to project a new table of objectives into its program planning. New group activities will be offered to a regular schedule and under the direction of a qualified Social Workers, personal and group counselling will be instituted.

Organizers hope the new program will be a reflection of the community needs and that in its implementation the needs will be met

Legionaires win and lose on weekend

What a difference a day makes!

On Saturday at Kinsmen stadium, the Oshawa Senior Legionaires opened their Ontario Baseball Association playoffs against Burlington Cardinals. Gary Carroll took the loss for Oshawa as his teammates booted the ball all over the park and came up on the short side of an 8 to 0 score

The seventh inning told the story of the game when the locals committed 3 errors to aid Cardinals in getting 7 runs Winning pitcher George McDonald remained in control the rest of the way and it was all over for the Oshawa club.

On Sunday, however, it was a different story as Legionaires came up with a fine defensive display to edge Burlington 4 to 3 Darin Bird started for Oshawa and gave up two runs in the first inning Oshawa tied it up in the top of the second, added two more in the fourth, and got an insurance run in the eighth

Going into the bottom of the ninth with a two run lead, Bird immediately got into trouble winding up with one run in, bases loaded, and two out. Garv Carrol was brought in to relieve and the next batter hit a sharp ground ball into the hole at second. Only a great diving stop by Ted Lutton saved the game for the Legionaires

Darin Bird was the winner for Oshawa, while Ken Simons took the loss.

Saturday's winner was George McDonald with Carroll the loser

The final game in this series is slated for Burlington's Nelson Park next Sunday. Game time is 1:00 p.m. The Legionaires begin their series with Port Hope Fidelity Flyers this week for the championship of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association.

SEALS TRAIN

The training camps for the Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League and the Oshawa Generals of the OHA Junior A league will open at Civic Auditorium Sept. 11. The two teams have ice time until Sept. 20 when the Seals will move to the new Harman Park Arena and the Generals will practise in the Noth Oshawa Arena

OSHAWA RECREATION DEPARTMENT

One of the responsibilities of the Oshawa Recreation Department is to search out and help train adequate leadership for the community's leisure time pursuits; not only for the Department's programs, but also as a community resource.

We're probing the Oshawa area for instructors who feel they have the ability to instruct children, youth or adults in recreational leisure oriented activities.

Instructors are required in the following areas: youth programs, sports and physical programs, cultural programs and social programs.

If you are interested, forward a letter detailing previous experience, age and available evening and weekend involvement.

Will there be a "Jim, 2075, August" in my bark?

EDITOR'S NOTE: Much has been said of late about ecology, pollution and man's wastefulness. Some of what has been said is political double-talk that is wordy but shallow. Far more effective, to our way of thinking, is the following story written by June Grace, a stenography student of Durham College's Retraining Division.

By June Grace

I have been here alongside this little creek looking over my small valley for more years than I can say. The year now is 1970 — August. How do I know? A boy named Jim has just carved his name and the date in my bark with his new jack-knife.

He often visits me and my valley. From my tallest branches, I can see his house and barn about a half a mile away. He comes along the path to the creek. Sometimes he swims in the water. The grass is long and turning brown — the water low from the heat. Soon this will change to snow and ice.

I am awakened from my winter sleep with a noise. Louder than I have ever heard before! I can see something shiny beside Jim's house — no, Jim's house is gone.

I watch — houses go up. First, the digging, the framing, the roofs, the bricks all go into place. People come to see them. Then, winter again.

Spring — and more noise; more building. My valley and fields are smaller. I can see houses from my lowest branches now. I see a school. I see children. There is a big house where a lot of people live. I look up at it. The green his is gone. I long for winter sleep and peace.

Again the noise. This time, voices. People are all around. What is happening? Listen. I don't understand what they say. Conservation? Planning? Arterial streets? What does this mean?

I think I know — more houses, apartments, maybe my death. No. I live in a little park now, but my valley and fields are all gone. The creek is muddy and dirty, filled with the cast-offs of work and play, the litter of living.

I lose all track of time. Jim's name in the "1970 - August" are a scar, a piece of my history. How long ago? I don't know.

I was tallest, greenest, fairest. Now I am dirty, alone and small with buildings that take the sun away from my leaves.

The year, 1975 — August. How did I know? A young man named Jim just put his name and the date on my bark. I hear him talk to a friend.

"See up on top of the hill. We lived there before Dad sold the farm. It was all big fields. Now it's in the city limits. We even have a traffic light at the corner where our old barn used to stand.

"The city moved on past. I hear. They bought two farms north of here already to sub-divide. More houses. Where do all the people come from?"

Now I know! This is "Progress and Development". So from 1970 to 1975 Jim grew up, the farm is gone and hundreds of people live in my valley.

I can watch them grow up, move out and move in. The quiet is gone forever. The country is now the city. And what will 2075 bring? Will there be a "Jim, 2075 — August" in my bark?

I wonder. I wonder.

sulted with Johnetcetera, for I would have given unto him a place of honor and a name as a tinkling cymbal, had he given unto the Oshites that which so many of them wanted, and that which would have brought the Land of Osh much glory.

13. And the Chronicler muttered in his sobs the names which he would have given unto Johnetcetera, and they were: John of Ham, the Great John of Ham, the Lord High John of Ham, the Lord High John of Ham and Ott, and mebbee the next Big Chief of all the land of Can.

14. And moreover did the Chronicler mutter, saying, he shall be known henceforth and forever more, yea until the Games of Summer come unto the Land of Osh, as Johnwhocouldn'tquitpuffingnomatter howhardhetried.

High suicide rate due to the pill

A University of Toronto researcher has suggested a sharp increase in the female suicide rate during 1961-68 may be linked to the birth control pill.

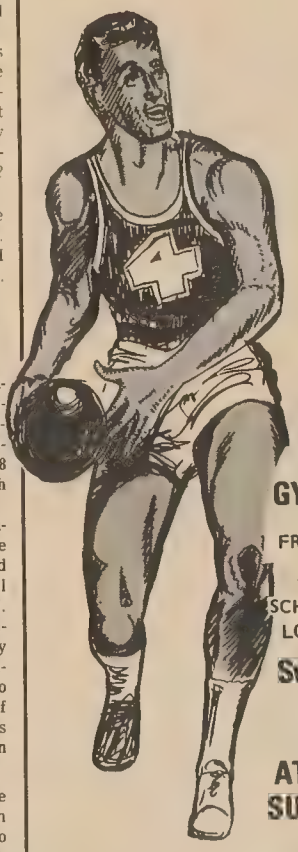
In a study on oral contraceptives and female mortality trends reported by the Canadian Medical Association, Dr. T. W. Anderson, assistant professor of epidemiology and biometrics, investigated suicide rates to measure the effect of depression which was reported to be a common side effect of the pill.

The female suicide rate in Ontario rose from 3.6 per 100,000 in 1961 to 7.2 per 100,000 in 1968, while the male rate rose from 14.3 to only 15.9 during the same period. Although increases in female suicide rates throughout Canada and the U.S. were significantly higher than increases in male rates, English and Welsh rates showed almost no change.

Dr. Anderson noted that further studies were needed

CHAMPIONSHIP

The Eastern Ontario Baseball Association Tyke 'A' championship went to Whitby Knights of Columbus Wednesday when they defeated Cobourg by a score of 15-4. Whitby had won the opening game of the three-game series 13-3, then lost the second by a score of 4-2.



The Oshawa Firefighters took the Lakeshore Novice Lacrosse League semi-final two games straight Wednesday against the Scarborough Saints. The Wednesday encounter saw the firemen defeated Scarborough 8-5.

Novel way to "see Canada first"

First class to west coast at the taxpayer's expense

Wayne Brown and Gary Fredrick would like to thank you, the taxpayer, for a wonderful trip they took last September to the west coast and back.

They started from Oshawa with $65 and a 1964 Chev and came back a few months later with $300 after a spree that saw them live in the best hotels and eat nothing but steak and chicken. Many's the time they bought rounds of drinks for the house along the way.

Whether you like it or not, you paid for their little holiday if what Wayne claims is true. Most of their spending money they got from telling hard-luck stories to welfare agencies across the country.

Wayne and Gary are not their real names. The story itself might even be a little exaggerated because we only heard it over the telephone from Wayne who wanted to protect his identity so we can't vouch for its authenticity. However, we leave it up to the reader to decide for himself.

Fact or fiction, This Week believes the following account of a novel way to 'See Canada First' bears repeating. Let's let Wayne tell it in his own words.

"Gary packed his wife off and picked up a girlfriend who was an excellent shoplifter," said Wayne in a recent telephone call to a This Week reporter. "We got as far as

Steven says he isn't going back

The Grade One teacher at the Queen Elizabeth elementary school on Simcoe Street North may have one less pupil than she expects when school opens Sept. 8.

Steven Smith says he isn't going back. He's going to stay home and look after his mother while his father is at work.

This is the vow the five-year-old Steven made to a This Week reporter Saturday as he sat in a sandpile behind the school. (Ed. Note: Steven or the reporter?)

"I went to school last year and I don't want to go any more," he said. "You gotta stay in and do work and I don't like that."

The reporter tried to reason with Steve by telling him he had to get an education so that he could get a job when he grew up, but he already has that figured out. All he wants to be is a teen-ager so he can stay out after dark.

Whether he likes it or not, Steven will be one of an estimated 33,907 elementary school students under the jurisdiction of the Ontario County Board

GM-UAW NEGOTIATIONS

Offer to Sept. 14

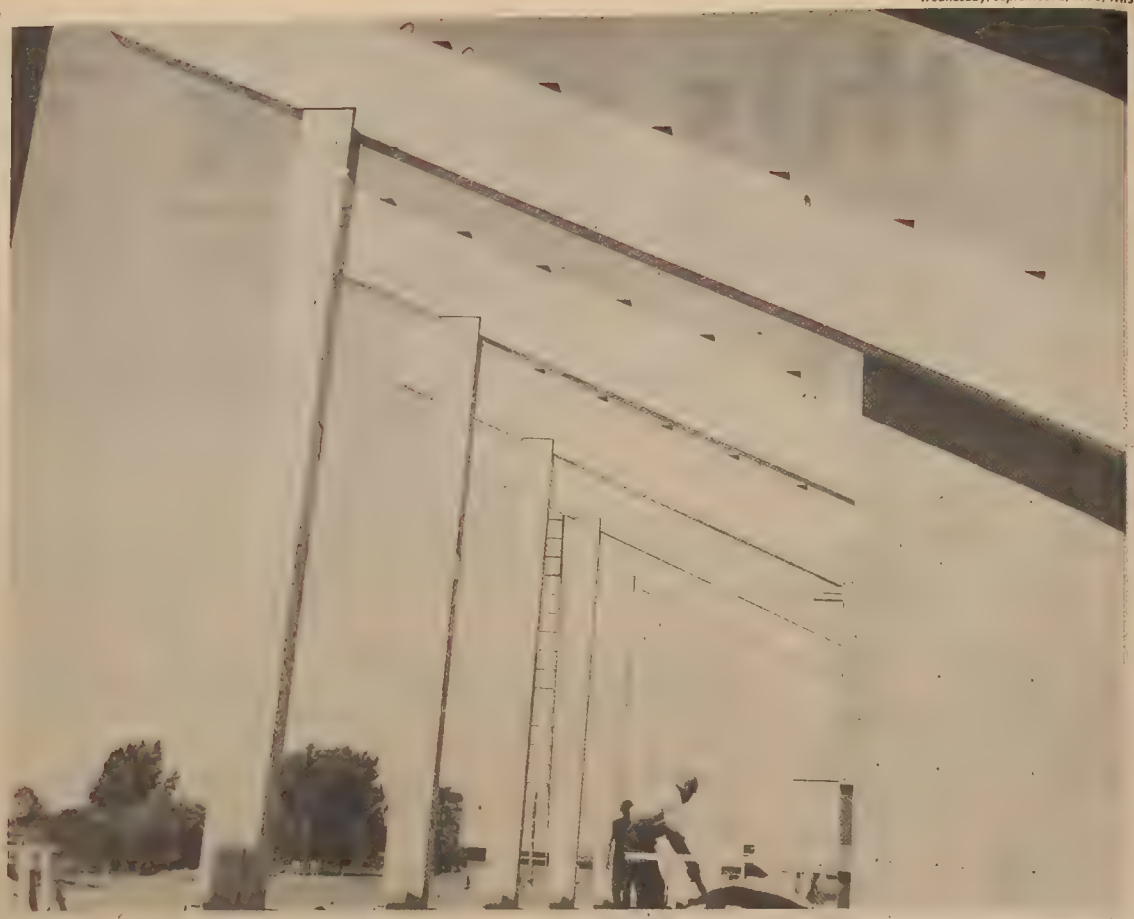
Go from bedroom to your livingroom

People who use Oshawa as their bedroom will find it easier next week to get from the bedroom to the living room.

September 8 marks the beginning of the GO bus service between Oshawa and the Pickering GO station. No longer will Oshawa-based Toronto workers have to fight the morning traffic on Highway 401 to get to work if they don't wish to.



In co-operation with Gray Coach Lines, GO Transit will be providing buses from either the downtown Gray Coach terminal or from the new GO Transit bus terminal off Simcoe Street South

Whitby residents are also being provided with a GO bus terminal and in both cases, there will be free parking for 100 automobiles. Passengers can get service to Ajax as well as to Pickering.

The GO buses are in addition to the regular service offered by Gray Coach Lines

Work on Phase 3 — the grandstand — of the Oshawa Civic Auditorium complex is proceeding on schedule. Concrete slabs to form the base on these arches should be in place by the end of this week.

GM submits offer with September 14 deadline

General Motors of Canada yesterday presented an economic proposal to the UAW, for a new three-year Master Agreement.

The comprehensive proposal would grant a substantial wage increase and, in addition, provides continued cost-of-living protection, significant improvements in pension benefits for both regular and early retirement and a fully paid vacation holiday period from the day before Christmas through New Year's Day in each year of the agreement.

A. G. Stapleton, Director of Personnel, General Motors of Canada, who made the proposal to the UAW, said. "It is a sound and realistic proposal under present economic conditions".

For GM employees who are already among the highest paid group in the country — 36.5 percent above the average for all manufacturing — the proposal provides:

WAGES

- 1970 — a 7½ percent increase in base wage rates, ranging from 26 to 45 cents an hour including the wage increase calculated from the contingent letter to the Union dated March 27, 1968.
- 1971 — an improvement factor general wage increase ranging from 10 to 19 cents; a cost-of-living allowance guaranteed minimum increase of three cents which could, depending upon increases in the Consumer Price Index, be as much as eight cents per hour. This means a minimum increase of from 13 cents to 22 cents per hour and a possible maximum increase of from 18 cents to 27 cents per hour.
- 1972 — an additional improvement factor wage increase of 11 to 20 cents; plus a second cost-of-living allowance guaranteed minimum increase of three cents, and a maximum of eight cents per hour. The minimum increase would be from 14 cents to 23 cents per hour while the maximum would be 19 cents to 28 cents per hour.

BENEFITS

- An increase in the basic pension benefit rate to $6.75, $7.00 and $7.25 from the present $5.50, $5.75 and $6.00, related to wage rates. This amounts to a 23 percent increase in the monthly basic pension benefit for the typical employee (at the car assembler classification rate).
- Increased life insurance ranging from $7,500 to $14,500 (the current range is $7,000 to $13,000); for the car assembler insurance coverage would be $9,000, up from the current $8,000.
- A special problem exists with respect to the GM-UAW Canadian Supplemental Unemployment Benefit Plan. Still in effect is an agreement which related to this problem. Further discussion is needed with the Union before a specific proposal can be made.

By adding one new holiday in the first year of the proposed new agreement and scheduling a "floating" holiday, the proposal would provide a continuous Christmas vacation holiday period from the day before Christmas through New Year's Day in 1970, 1971 and 1972.

The proposal also provides for sharing future increased contributions above the level for September 1970 for hospital, surgical, medical and drug expense coverage and a revised hiring wage rate schedule for new employees.

If yesterday's proposal has not been accepted by 11.59 p.m., September 14, 1970, the Company reserves the right to thereafter withdraw the proposal.

SHORT TAKES

BLOOD

Red Cross officials are hopeful that with summer holidays drawing to a close they will have more luck with their blood donor clinic scheduled for St. Gregory's Auditorium Thursday. The goal of the clinic is 500 pints of blood to offset shortages due to poor turn-outs at earlier clinics. The doors will be open from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and between 6 p m and 9 p m

FATALITY

A second youth in less than 48 hours was killed in a train accident last week in Oshawa. Eugene Kucynski, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Kucynski of 825 Sylvia Street, was struck by a Canadian National train Friday afternoon on Ritson Road. On Wednesday, 12-year-old Daniel Dias was hit by a Canadian Pacific freight train near Harmony Road South.

FAIRS

The Labor Day weekend will see the launching of the Port Perry Fair featuring horse and cattle judging, ball games, midway rides and other entertainment. The Orono area will host the Durham Central Fair Sept. 10-12.

of Education going to school next Tuesday.

As a board spokesman pointed out, this figure can only be an estimate since final figures will not be available until actual enrollment figures have been compiled.

In addition to the above figure, there will be some 807 special education students and 135 trainable retarded pupils enrolling.

The students will come under the tutelage of one of 1,465 regular classroom teachers, 64 special education teachers or 14 teachers of the trainable retarded.

There will be an estimated 14,490 secondary school students sizing up the 890 secondary school teachers in the 14 secondary schools in the county Sept. 8.

The board spokesman said the estimated figures for this year are close to 3,000 higher than last year's enrollment due to an increase in the county's population

"Other areas are expecting a decrease, but it looks as though our enrollment will be increasing for some time to come," he said.

Sudbury when we started getting a little low on cash.

"Him and her went to the welfare office and said they were man and wife heading across Canada and they had some work done on their car which took all their money.

"The welfare guy asked to see the bills but they said they threw them away. He said he couldn't give them any money to go to British Columbia but he'd give them enough to get back to Oshawa. He gave them a meal chit, a hotel room voucher and $45. That took us to North Bay."

Hit 25

Wayne figures that in all, they must have hit 25 agencies on their way to Vancouver. Several times he went into the office, but they turned a deaf ear on him since he was single.

"They couldn't do enough for us when we went in with the girl. Winnipeg was the best. They gave us $80 and a room for the night in the best hotel."

Perhaps because of Mayor Tom Campbell's hard line against freeloaders, the Vancouver welfare office didn't fall for their stories at first.

"Then we sent her in alone and she was terrific. She could start crying just like that. She said she had come out with two boyfriends who had left her and she needed money to get home. They gave her a cheque for $90."

$50 to get lost

Wayne said they figured the girl had outlived her usefulness, so they gave her $50 and told her to get lost. They decided to go to Vancouver Island.

"We went to the Salvation Army with a sob story and they gave us two tickets to walk onto the ferry. Gary then went to the RCMP detachment and gave such a hard-luck story than an officer gave him $5 to take his car across."

"When we got to Nanaimo, the first place we headed was to the welfare office and told them we had jobs waiting in Gold River and they put us up for the night, fed us and gave us enough to get there.

Welfare easier

"When we got to Campbell River, we told them we had just come from Gold River and they gave us $50. By this time, we had about $500 in our pockets. Finally, we got to Gold River and decided to work just for the hell of it. We worked in a logging camp for a couple of weeks and decided it was easier to live off welfare."

Wayne said the two of them headed back for Nanaimo and got meal chits and walking tickets to take the ferry back to Vancouver. Gary went to the RCMP office there and gave them the same story about his wife dying and got money again to take his car across.

"This guy is really terrific. You should see him tell a story. Real tears and everything. And he has five sets of identification including social insurance cards and drivers' licences."

The two men met a couple of nurses in Vancouver and moved in with them for two weeks, taking them for all the money they could. When that petered out, they left to head back east.

"When we got back to Regina, Gary went right back into the same welfare office with another set of ID and got more money."

No in Kenora

The only place Wayne remembers having any trouble with welfare people was in Kenora, Ontario where no matter how hard they tried, they couldn't make the man in charge fall for their story.

"So, we went to the Salvation Army and they gave us train tickets back to Oshawa. They were no good to us so we just threw them away. We finally had to pay our own way. What a hole that place was."

Their next stop was Wawa, Ontario where Wayne believes they got $30, then on to Sault Ste. Marie, where they were given a cheque for $50.

"Fifty dollars seemed to be a nice round figure. That's what most places gave us. When we got back to Oshawa, we had about $300 so we split it and Gary went back to his wife."

Wayne remembers the trip with a great deal of pleasure and pride. He says there were always girls along the way to pay for everything and when there weren't, Gary could con someone into at least paying for the drinks.

"That is, unless we were feeling generous and decided to buy a round for the house. I remember we did that in Winnipeg after talking to a guy who said he made his living the same way. We got pretty juiced up talking to him and decided to buy everybody a drink."

No shame or guilt

Wayne feels no shame or guilt at having bilked people out of money that might have gone to someone else who really needed it.

"It's government money and if someone else really needed it, he'd get it too. Except maybe if he looked like a hippy. It was really sad meeting some of those people. We'd pick them up on the road and they'd be starving.

"The welfare office wouldn't give them anything because they looked grubby with long hair and stuff. We always looked half-decent when we went in. Lots of times we'd give them five bucks because we knew they needed it."

He also feels no shame at having lied to people who would go out of their way to help him.

"Most of them were as cold as ice. They'd treat you like dirt until you came up with a good story, then they couldn't do enough for you. I remember one old lady. Tears came to my eyes from the story I was telling her. I started believing it myself.

"She tooke me home and gave me steak and apple pie. Meanwhile, Gary and the girl were waiting for me to come back with

by peter brouwer

And then there was the lady who called last week and gave Mrs. B. a blast .... wow!

Phone rings.

She picks it up.

"Is your husband home?" (rather demanding).

"Sorry, he's not, but supper is getting colder, much colder than it was 20 minutes ago, so he should be here before too long."

"When will that be?"

"Is it urgent?"

"Of course it is."

"Could I help? May I take a message? Can he perhaps call you the minute he gets in?"

"Well, I wonder. . . ."

"Do tell me."

"Well, I have a beef. For three nights in a row now, my paper has been delivered really late. And I don't like it, and I thought I'd better speak to the editor. Maybe he can do something about it. Every time I call the circulation department they promise help, and nothing happens."

"Three nights in a row?"

"Yes, and that's why I'm calling."

"But our paper comes out on Wednesdays, not three nights in a row or anything like that."

"Look Mrs. Brouwer, tell your husband to do something about my Times."

"But my husband is not the editor of the daily."

"Well then, who is he?"

"He's with the little paper. You know, This Week, you get it every Wednesday."

And then the apologies came, and the chuckles and the laughter, and the advise to try the circulation manager once more and to tell him what happened.

And then I came in and supper by this time really WAS cold.

Of course, if your THIS Week is late three weeks in a row, or even once, do get on the telephone and holler (576-6450) and if that doesn't help, do give me a buzz, even if it has to be while supper is getting colder. I don't like to see anyone miss the fun we're having, even for one week.

And since this is beginning to sound like a "circulation plug", how do you feel about our name now that you've had a chance to get used to it? I notice the name is even catching on in Toronto where the Star is going to put out a magazine called Star Week, and the Telegram is planning to come out this fall with a thing called Toronto Week. All of which makes me wonder whether we should make our Oshweek, which has a beautiful Indian ring to it.

On the other hand I think we had better stick with what we've got. It's still confusing to some people. And, honestly if you find it very difficult, just go on for a while and call us "the little paper." We really don't mind.

Tired of being told by the feminists

Guest editorial by Vicki Mackinnon

Do you ever get the feeling that almost everyone else has a piece of your life — almost everyone else but you?

I do, and I'm tired of it.

I'm tired of being told that I must buy this or that detergent or my wash won't be white. I'm tired of being told I must go to this movie or read that book because somebody else thinks it's great (or not go or not read because somebody else thinks it's rotten). I'm tired of being told I must raise or lower my skirts or start wearing hats because they're in (or stop because they're out).

But most of all — I'm tired of being told what I must think and feel by this new phenomenon of our day — the Feminists.

I've been seeing them on television, reading about them in newspapers and magazines, and talking to them singly and in groups.

And from all these contacts, one thing rings through loud and clear.

They have set themselves up to speak for all women. They have set themselves up to speak for me.

Well, I have news for them. Don't. Just don't, that's all.

They talk at great length about men being the "oppressors." They rant about men "imposing their will on women."

Then, in the next breath, they're saying "Women are unhappy." "Women hate domestic work." "Women are slaves."

These are stated firmly as facts, and, although the word "all" as in "all women" does not necessarily appear, it is certainly intrinsic to the statements.

There was a little three-line ditty that was used to introduce me to my first taste of college logic. It went "All men are mortal. Socrates is a man. Therefore, Socrates is mortal."

To paraphrase this into feminist talk "All women are slaves. Vicki Mackinnon is a woman. Therefore, Vicki Mackinnon is a slave."

Sorry, Feminists. It just isn't true. And no amount of talk on your part is going to make me believe it.

But I'll tell you what I do believe, after listening to you. I believe you are as bent on imposing your will and oppressing me into your way of thinking as you accuse men of doing.

You say our way of life is rotten. No-one with an ounce of sense and sensitivity in his head would suggest that there is not a great deal of rottenness in the world.

I agree there is much that must be changed. One case in point are the laws governing abortion in this country. But don't tell me (as some of you have tried to do) that I must rush around with a great placard attached to my nether frontal portions proclaiming to the world I have a uterus. I don't feel any need to prove this to the world.

Don't tell me because I'm a woman I'm unhappy. Don't tell me because I'm a woman I'm a slave. Don't tell me I don't like housework. And don't tell me because I'm a woman I cannot think.

In short. Don't tell me what to think. Or feel. Or want.

I resent it. Just as I resent the great want of logic in the argument that all men are oppressors. Have you never heard of the matriarchal society — a proven fact in many countries. Have you never even heard of the henpecked husband — also a proven fact — I know a couple.

And don't include me in your great spewing of bitterness about women being held down in jobs and not given equal opportunity. Of course, I'll admit the argument does make a great excuse for those who need to fill the gap between ability and accomplishment.

It seems to me it's power you're seeking. If this is so, don't use me as one of your tools. I don't want your kind of power.

When I see my husband coming home (this husband you keep telling me I'm a slave to) and at just the sight of me his whole being straightens and smiles — that's power, baby.

Let's think about Oshawa's heart

Sit down and think about this.

What does Oshawa need most?

Oshawa needs a heart.

A whole beating, throbbing, vibrant heart.

Now you may say, and correctly so, that this city does have a heart, or at least, the beginnings of one. There is one, right at the Rundle Tower. Right next to the tower is one of the finest small city libraries you could ever browse in and one of the finest small city art galleires you could feed your soul in.

That's a good start. But something more is needed.

One group of dedicated earnest citizens is that of the Oshawa and District Council for the Arts.

The ODCA is dedicated to the furtherance of the cultural and artistic aspects of this municipality and its satellite areas. Among the organizations which are members of the ODCA are the aforementioned McLaughlin Public Library, and Robert McLaughlin Gallery.

Now the ODCA will in the near future be presenting a brief to city council requesting assistance — monetary and moral — (essentially and primarily moral) for its efforts.

Let's figure out what the ODCA and its several members — including the Oshawa Little Theatre the Oshawa Symphony, the Oshawa Historical Society, the Peter Pan Players and so on — are worth to this community.

For those of you who don't give a damn for anything worthwhile (and we presume that makes up less than .1 per cent of our readers) the cultural and artistic aspects of our city probably mean only an additional five to 10 per cent in your pay cheque.

For those of you who do care, you get the advantage of whatever is made available to you in an entertaining and soul-satisfying sense in this city plus that five or 10 per cent addition in your wallet or purse.

If you stop to think that industry and business are attracted to a community which offers all facets, fully developed, of a well-rounded life you can realize the value of backing the ODCA and its member groups.

Just as sports — so well-done and well-supported in our city — have brought people and business, and industry, and money, and resources (in the human sense) to this city, so can an increased investment in the art.

So let's make Oshawa's heart a real big powerful life force.

We support the efforts and aims of the Oshawa and District Council for the Arts. We hope that city council will receive its brief with great enthusiasm and we hope that city council will exceed to the OCDA's modest requests.

We think, in fact, that city council should go a step further. Rundle Tower is located in the heart of the city. It has more than ample unused accommodation for truly worthwhile civic projects. Therefore, why doesn't city council show that it too cares about sustaining a strong beating heart by loaning at least some of this space to the ODCA and its affiliates.

Oshawa has a heart. Let's hope its city council has one too.

Rossland Road

Here we were, two years ago. County of Ontario engineers and workmen were battling frantically with time to complete the new bridge in Rossland Road, just west of Harmony. Eventually they got it finished.

Here we were again, a few months ago, with Rossland Road dug up just west of Wilson, to widen it, with construction finally finished at the end of June.

That was to be the end of it.

But it was not.

Here we are again this week, with Rossland Road broken up at Central Park — the hill just before Wilson Road — closed. This portion was finished late last June.

'Disgusted', age 17, is a girl and she's still disgusted

Sir:

Regarding the enthusiastic response to my opinion of the Hair Kids and the article written about them entitled WHAT THESE KIDS WANT, I have taken it upon myself to answer their individual criticisms. Although, I found their defence was very weak, these writers tended to use the same old arguments ie discrimination, misunderstanding etc.

I would like to inform the N.A.R.K. that I am far from narrow-minded. As one of today's HAIR generation; I, myself, am bestowed with the amiable characteristic of being as open-minded as those who live in Memorial Park.

All my responders have misunderstood and misinterpreted my opinionated message. To begin with; this was not an intentional HATE letter. I would like to make known to these readers, that I have made their park scene, long-hair scene, and love scene as opposed to the "straight scene." I discovered that I personally prefer the "plastic life along with automation. I am in favour of progression not regression!

I am not of the older 1930 generation, green with envy at a few immature, irresposible park sitters. I am one of you — a 17 year old GIRL! I have been called a hippie at one time or another. I have been prejudged by the society because of my long-haired brothers! And oh yes! I have my opinions too!

I did not sign the letter DISGUSTED because I am excercising my freedom — to sign or not to sign! This is the freedom that you so proudly desire. You have it — I use it — now you protest it! I felt it was my privilege to sign or not. However, my name is not as important as my point! If you are so against materialism that how much can by name mean to you? I am sorry that the absence of my name offended you.

WITH REGARDS TO Mr. Hamilton: If reading my innocent commentary letter made you ill, then how were you healthy enough to write back your absurd comparison of the man with the moustache who killed 6,000,000 Jews. This man is not the issue! I am moved that my letter sparked you to make up some fanciful words ie super genocide? Even if you do have short hair but insist on making the Drop-In scene and park scene, you are not clean from the poor reputations of these friends. So you should worry! Your reputation depends on your attitude and friends in the eyes of the society! Kids like yourself are blotting out the silent majority so well with distorted values, that you are making the straight kids hard to find!

WITH REGARDS TO Mr. Barry: Your hippie way of life does not hold any merit for a responsible, mature person, with future ambitions and goals such as myself. Perhaps, my open mind is dwindling since I have seen too many respectable people put their time, money, and understanding into you kids with no results! Kids like the ones in the park are the growing reason for so much trouble in the world today ie campus riots, festivals, drugs, social welfare. I am being real about this situation. Are you? I realize we hold the world's future. Have you seriously considered your tomorrow, or are you too preoccupied feeling sorry for yourself today?

If the N.A.R.K. wants to promote peace and understanding between the young and old then why don't they start by listening to the older people — by this I mean their parents. There are always two sides to a story! Let's face it; if it weren't for them we wouldn't be here! Let's show some respect!

Am I a DREAMER just because I am bored with being marred a HIPPIE? Am I a dreamer because I want to CHANGE things, but in a more mild manner? If this is the case, you are disturbed my friends; not me!

WITH REGARDS TO Mr. Hill: I like to consider myself the more intelligent and receptive member of the established community. I do have morals. I know right from wrong (which is perhaps a weak characteristic of many young people today). My mind is not beyond redemption — I am redeemed!

If you like long hair; keep it! I never once outrightly stated that I am against long hair. Some of my best friends have long hair! But keep it at your own risk and your own reputation. Naturally, you may be continuously condemned because of it; but blame that on your brothers. They spoiled it for you with their childish, rebellious attitudes which led to a nationwide chain reaction — All long hairs are dirty! I am quite aware that this statement is untrue, but if you want to follow their footsteps, you must pay the consequences. This, too, is not a hate sheet, but a friendly opinion.

Dear editor, I answered these letters merely because I felt it was unfair for these persons to accuse me of narrow-mindedness and hatred, just because of a differential opinion! Criticizing me for speaking my mind is hardly in following with their policy of "understanding and individual freedom."

I urge adults, straight kids, or any other mature persons to voice their opinion on this issue or any remotely connected. I am sure Mr. Brouwer, the editor, will be fair in printing your letters without prejudice and with total respect for the opinions of others.

(DISGUSTED),
17 year old Prejudged Hair Girl.

Engineer

Sir:

What a splendid idea you proposed in last week's This Week when you suggested we make the job of chief engineer in this city an elected office.

It's too bad you had to end up making fun of your own idea, instead of suggesting positive ways and means in which this could be accomplished.

John C. Bird.

For more containers and fewer litterbugs

Sir:

I think it's about time that a few people opened their eyes in this and in many other towns and cities. The problem of litter seems to be going quite unnoticed in Oshawa.

As the Conservation Council of Ontario puts it, we belong to the age of the Garbage Makers Does a picture of a family having a picnic in a garbage dump really exaggerate things? I sometimes wonder. Frequently I see children playing in Radio Park. This park is well equipped with 2 baseball diamonds, tennic courts, swings and slides, and a club house. This park, however, has no garbage receptacles whatsoever. After a baseball game or any other local activity the younger children go over to play in the park; they play amongst the empty pop cans, cigarette packets, forgotten or broken bottles and other such refuse.

I think it is surprising that the Parks Department could ignore such unpleasant litter. I have also seen waste and litter completely ignored in other parts of the city. Great amounts of litter can be found on John Street near the bridge. I have often seen men, probably hired by the city, who are responsible for cutting and trimming the grass in this area. They simply mow the litter with the grass, and consequently spread the garbage a little further.

Instances such as these could be remedied either by the installation of garbage receptacles or by the hiring of men to clean up such refuse.

I should point out, however, that the City of Oshawa, and the Parks Department are not entirely to blame. To be honest, most of us are guilty of littering at one time or another. Our supposedly beautiful Memorial Park is often cluttered with litter. Pizza boxes, coke cans, and candy wrappers are constantly left on the ground. With a little effort they could be dropped into one of many garbage cans.

These threats to our environment are vital to us all. It doesn't take that much effort to dispose of garbage and litter in the proper way

MARIJUANA -- YOU CAN BECOME A FOOL

Smoking "Pot, Tea, Grass or Weed," all of them names for Marijuana, creates a feeling of superiority to others. That is its chief attraction to persons with unstable minds, who are unsure of themselves.

Actually Marijuana users find it more difficult to make wise decisions that require clear thinking. Reflexes are affected and driving under the influence of Marijuana is dangerous.

Its physical reactions include a more rapid heart beat, changing blood sugar levels and it stimulates the appetite. Users may become talkative, loud, unsteady or drowsy and the sense of time and distance is distorted.

The next issue of these Public Service messages will discuss the greatest danger to smokers of Marijuana.

Taylor-Pelgrims wedding

The marriage of Mary Rose, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Andrew Taylor, Whitby, to Christian Alex, son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Pelgrims, took place on Saturday, August 1st, in St. John The Evangelist Church, Whitby.

The wedding ceremony was performed by Father Harrington and accompanied by Mrs. Newton on the organ.

Their attendants were, made of honor, and sister of the bride, Patricia Taylor, bridesmaids, Janet Gordon, and Caryl Allan. Best man, and brother of the groom Erwin Pegrims, ushers, Erwin Volche, and Andrew Taylor.

The bride wore a white satin floor length empire gown, with a long train that fell from the waist, the gown had pearl beads patterned around the empire, neck and cuffs. She wore a short beaded veil with a head piece of white lillies and pearl beads, and carried a bouquet of red roses with pink and white carnations.

The groom and best man were dressed in tails, and the ushers wore black tuxedos.

The Maid of honor wore a pink dress and the brides maids wore blue dresses with tierras in their hair, and carried bouquets of white and blue crysanthemums.

The brides mother wore a yellow dress with matching accessories and the grooms mother wore purple with matching accessories.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Amber Room in Whitby. Master of Ceremonies was Fred Waite, long time friend of the bride's family.

For a going away outfit the bride chose a dress and coat ensemble in torquoise blue with white accessories.

The couple will reside in Whitby.

McCaffrey-Holmes

In an evening ceremony at Christ Memorial Church, Catherine Joanne McCaffrey and Peter Edgar Holmes exchanged nuptial vows recently.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Michael McCaffrey of Oshawa and the bridgroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar V. Holmes of Newcastle, Ontario.

The Reverend William July 31 marriage and Mr. Stephen Powell was the organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress of white lace in A-line style, featuring a cowl collar and bell shaped sleeves. The empire waist line was enhanced with a crepe band forming a bow in front of dress.

Her headdress of white nylon organza flowers and leaves accented with crystal beads and tiny seed pearls held her three-tiered shoulder length bouffant veil of nylon organza.

She carried a nosegay of red roses and white carnations, with lace streamers and bells. She wore a cameo necklace belonging to her mother.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Teresa Knight, sister of the bride. Mr. George Holmes, brother of the bridgegroom acted as best man, with Mr. Deen Knight and Mr. Brian Reardon ushering. All are from Oshawa.

The reception was held at the Oshawa Naval Veterans Club.

For the honeymoon to Northern Ontario, the bride wore a dress and coat ensemble of white lace lined with pink satin taffeta, with white accessories, and a corsage of red roses.

The newlyweds live in Oshawa.

Fire at Civic brings cheers

There was a fire at the Oshawa Civic Auditorium Saturday night and people couldn't have been happier.

As the flames leapt towards the ceiling, several hundred people jumped to their feet cheering and clapping. For most of them, the fire signalled the end of close to three years of hard work.

The audience was made up for the most part of members of Branch 43 of the Royal Canadian Legion and their wives. The fire was started by President Luke White with the help of James F. Seaver, past treasurer, and Leonard Mitchell, chairman of the Legion building fund.

The fire, of course, was the burning of the mortgage on Branch 43's new building at 471 Simcoe Street South. The ashes from the mortgage were collected and deposited in an urn in which the charred remains of the mortgage on the old Legion building were deposited in 1940.

The mortgage burning ceremony was under the chairmanship of Alex B. Walker, a member of the branch's executive committee. He got the ceremony underway by introducing President White who thanked the citizens of Oshawa for their assistance in paying off the mortgage.

Greetings from the city were extended by Alderman James H. Potticary, representing Mayor Bruce Mackey who is on vacation away from Oshawa.

Gordon Wakefield brought congratulations from the Ontario Provincial Command of the Royal Canadian Legion, saying that Branch 43 is considered a premier branch in Ontario by the provincial body.

Wakefield is a former president of Ontario Provincial Command and is at present its poppy chairman in charge of the distribution and sale of the artificial flower that has become a symbol of Remembrance Day.

A prayer of thanksgiving was offered by Reverend Alfred Woolcock.

'Fun with a purpose' is aim of youth program at Simcoe Hall

"Fun with a purpose."

That is the aim of the Youth Program at the Simcoe Hall Settlement House, says Cedric Orchard, unit director.

The purpose, he said is a guidance and character building program geared to the total developement of each boy and girl. To make the Club valuable and attractive to boys and girls between the ageof 7-17 years emphasis is put on diversity. The activities include, crafts, model building, woodwork, basketball, floorhockey, weight training, judo, stamp club, and library.

This past summer the Settlement House operated a "Summer Fun Club" program for boys and girls. Each day, Monday thru Friday the members camped out, visited various conservation areas, visited Toronto City Hall, Centre Island, and participated in other outdoor activities. These activities were, Lumbermans day, weiner roasts and sing songs.

The "Fun Club" program was under the direction of Janet Gerrie, Girl's Worker Supervisor, and Mel Currie, Supervisor of the Boys activities. Both people are in the process of evaluating the Summer activities to enable them to provide a bigger and better program next summer.

The Settlement House is under the direction of the Womens Welfare League. In 1935, in a donated residence, the established Settlement House, and here the nucleus of a Boys and Girls Club was formed. Soon there was added to the old Settlement House a boys club building, with a gymnasium, theatre, and club activity room.

The club opens for business, September 14th from there on the club will be open daily Monday thru Saturday, 1:30 to 5:30 and 6:30 to 10 p.m.

"Much has been done to make the club possible, service clubs, and other organizations such as the police department and firemen contribute to make various activities possible. Volunteer instructors share their skills and knowledge with the boys and girls to add challenge and reward their young lives," said Mr. Orchard.

When asked if the club had enough volunteers, Orchard replied," The needs of youth in our increasingly complex society are great and although much is done, much more is needed. The Club needs more volunteer workers. Those now working with the boys and girls are seeing the accomplishments they are doing in the members enthusiasm in the programs.

Orchard said that the club is having a Back To School Dance on Friday September 11th in which there is a live band, and he hopes the boys and girls will use this as the opportunity to get into the new Fall Program. Also registration for the Fall and Winter Program begins on September 1 to 4 from 9 am to 5 pm and September 8 to 14 from 3 to 5 pm and 6:30 to 9 pm.

Anyone wishing to join the club may do so by picking up the registration forms at "Simcoe Hall.. 387 Simcoe St. S. The program begins September 14 for boys and girls from ages 7 to 17.

Call Today
Oshawa 723-5278
Bowmanville 723-2506

by tom douglas

Apparently there is one group of young ladies in town who would like to see my head dangling from the nearest telephone pole. They have taken exception to a remark made here last week that directory assistant operators seem curt when you ask their help

The girls have come back with the explanation that they have only so many seconds to complete such a call and so it is unavoidable that some customers get cut off abruptly

Actually, this abruptness is only one example of a general attitude that we North Americans are adopting and adapting to. It could be described as the-customer-is-always-wrong syndrome.

At the risk of finding cigarette ashes in my next cup of restaurant coffee, allow me to single out one particular breed of waitress as a prime example of this failing

She's the one who first of all brings you a glass of water only after you've asked for it and then delivers it begrudgingly. She then either stands there impatiently while you hurriedly scan the menu or wanders off somewhere for five or 10 minutes before coming back to take your order.

Before she does, she asks rudely: "What do youse want?" and takes down the order incorrectly so that the 'well-done' bacon in your club sandwich arrives so raw you look like a robin pulling a worm out of the ground when you take your first bite.

You have to practically flag her down with your napkin to get a second cup of coffee and then she serves it by reaching in front of your table partner with a scorching hot coffee pot that misses his face by inches.

Please note that I specified a particular breed of waitress that does this. There are many top-notch waitresses in Oshawa, especially two of those who work in the hotel where I have breakfast each morning.

But there are plenty of the other type around and should you become annoyed enough at their sloppy offensive manner to complain to the management, you get the same answer every time.

"I'm very sorry, sir, but you know how hard it is to get good help these days." But this really isn't the problem. The problem is that too many of us are too polite or bashful or something to refuse to put up with shoddy service.

Instead of making our feelings known and taking our business elsewhere, we suffer these abuses and come back for more. No wonder service doesn't improve.

Okay, so a telephone operator only has a few seconds to complete a call, a waitress has a great number of tables to wait on and a sales girl can only serve one customer at a time. I realize this, but don't tell this to me thinking that is reason enough to expect me to put up with poor service.

I am a customer who pays good money for goods and services and I'm not the least bit interested in the problems somebody has trying to provide these. Don't tell me about it, do something about it.

So geared is our society to putting up with mediocrity in our business dealings that this habit of getting away with the least effort expended is becoming a national way of life.

The fellow who does any more than the minimum amount of work is looked down upon by his fellow workers and often warned to take it easy or find himself on a liquid diet until his store-bought teeth are ready.

The automobile mechanic who takes the time to do a thorough job of servicing your car is a rarity and the service station attendant who checks your oil and battery without being asked is seen very infrequently today.

Our students, seeing how their fathers and mothers are able to get away with doing the absolute minimum amount of work, are doing the same at school.

From the first day of classes, they are sizing up the teachers, figuring out what is the least amount of effort they must put into their various assignments to get a passing grade.

We shall have no one but ourselves to blame in a few years when we have to rely on doctors who figure a 50-50 chance of recovery is good enough as he dashes out to the golf course after hurriedly doing his rounds.

It will be our own fault when our lawyer tells us with a yawn that five years in jail is better than 10 as the prison guard leads us away for something we did not do and of which we could have been cleared had our case been better prepared.

The blame will rest entirely on ourselves when the wing falls off the aircraft we're flying in because the maintenance crew took an extended coffee break rather than checking the plan before it took off.

"I have everything, he's got nothing," so Smythe pushes NHL pardon for Oshawa's Billy Taylor

Oshawa's Billy Taylor, a former National Hockey League player given a life suspension for gambling, has had his suspension lifted.

Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, announced Friday that the lifetime suspensions against Taylor and Don Gallinger had been lifted.

The two were expelled on March 9, 1948 for betting on games earlier in the season.

Taylor, who played for the Oshawa Generals before his stint with the NHL, was 29 years old at the time of his suspension. He joined the Toronto Maple Leafs in 1939 and played there until he joined the service in 1943.

He rejoined the NHL in 1946, playing with the Detroit Red Wings and was traded to the Boston Bruins in 1947. He was traded to the New York Rangers just 11 days before his suspension.

The NHL was scandalized by a report in a Detroit paper of Taylor's and Gallinger's involvement with a Detroit bookmaker, James Tamer, whose telephone had been tapped by police.

One of the policemen spilled the story to reporters at the station, then, realizing his mistake since the police were not interested in the hockey players but wanted to nab Tamer, swore the reporters to secrecy.

The promise was good for several hours until the next edition hit the streets. NHL President Campbell launched a three-week investigation and immediately suspended Taylor who confessed his guilt.

Gallinger, a centre with the Bruins, professed his innocence until the death of his father in 1951. He tried unsuccessfully on several occasions to have the suspension lifted.

Conn Smythe, former president of The Toronto Maple Leafs, is credited with influencing the NHL board of governors into lifting the suspensions.

"I was at an Oshawa sports celebrities' banquet in May and I saw Taylor," Smythe recently told a reporter. "I thought: 'My God, I've got everything and he's got nothing. If I can get him reinstated, I'll die easier'."

In his statement Friday, Campbell said: "It is the opinion of the league governors that no useful purpose is being served by the continuance of the penalty and stigma and humiliation that goes with it.

"The original penalty has fully achieved the objective intended by the league bylaw. Both of these players have paid an extremely high price for their violations in both mental anguish and financial loss."

Campbell added however that the lifting of the suspension does not constitute a full pardon.

"This pardon cannot and is not intended to restore them to the positions of eminence in hockey which they once enjoyed, but it may serve to alleviate the effects of the ostracism from the game which their expulsion produced and it may have the effect of brightening their outlook somewhat."

The statement concluded: "This action by the league does not indicate any relaxation in the enforcement of the prohibition against 'gambling'.

"In fact, it is hoped that it may serve to emphasize the league's determination to enforce the bylaw under which the expulsions were ordered

The story of the bell

EDITOR'S NOTE: Where is it, and what is it, we asked in last week's paper with a photo of the Bell in front of the Rundle Tower. Carolyn Whitbread, eight year old grade 3 student of Adelaide McLaughlin School came in with the best overall story to go with the picture.

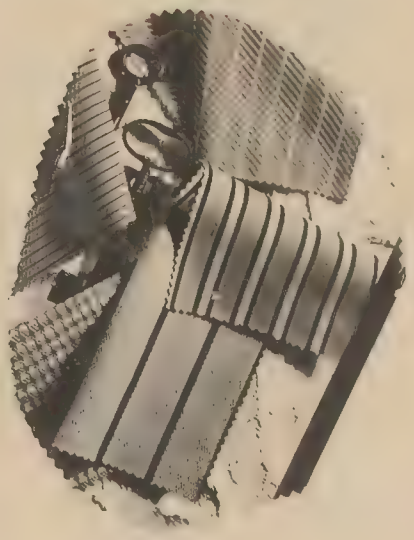
By Carolyn Whitbread

The church bell of Centre Street United Church came from the top of the steeple. In 1967 the church was taken down because of the new city hall. The last church service was held there on April 30, 1967.



On the plaque with the bell it says: "This bell hung in the steeple of the church at this site from 1874 to 1967."

The congregation was first formed in 1831 in Darlington Township as the Christian Church under the leadership of Elder Thomas Henry (he lived in Henry House Museum) and moved to a new small wooden church which was at the corner of Church and Richmond Streets in 1843

It was later remodelled with brick and they put the bell in that church about 1860.

Because this church was getting too small they moved to a new church in 1874 on Centre Street and the bell was brought there and stayed until 1967 when the church was torn down.

The people of Centre Street Church joined with the people of Westmount United Church and they now call it Centennial United Church.

Boost for Glenholme

The Glenholme Training Centre for retarded got another boost this week in its current program of turning a former portable classroom into additional workshop area.

A 125 foot trench was dug, courtesy Bell Telephone, to help provide the necessary power in the classroom-workshop, and the wiring is accomplished free of charge by Elif Anderson and Wayne West, electricians. Pallet repairs and small contract work will be taken on in the new shop, said Andy VanLith, one of the organizers.

The portable classroom was donated to Glenholme by the Board of Education after it took over the Retarded Children's School and it cost $400 to move it to the Wellington Street site of the Glenholme centre.

Some 30 people will be training and retraining at the expanded centre.

Hair kids beautiful, deserving, says volunteer

Sir:

In response to the letter from "Disgusted" — his signature exactly describes the way I felt when I finished reading the letter.

I am one of about 30 Drop-In volunteers who have worked with these kids for varying periods of time in the last few months. I wish Mr. Disgusted would take the time to find out who we are and talk to one or two of us to find out what it is really about. I also wish he would talk to some of the kids, if he could bring himself to be so unsophisticated. He would find out that long hair has very little to do with character, but is merely a social custom as it was in the days of Christ.

And speaking of Christ, he would find out that some of these kids go to religious services of their particular belief twice and sometimes three times a week. Does he go to the midweek prayer service at his church?

If he would talk to these kids, he would find that they are dedicated to keeping the Drop-In Center open, at times against pretty difficult odds; that they are concerned for the place that is theirs and for which they are responsible; that they are concerned for their friends and the state of the world; and that they have very real feelings and very sophisticated ideas, as unsophisticated as they may be otherwise.

The reason they hang out in the park and at the Drop-In is easily explained when you realize that the Manpower Summer Placement Service was only able to place about 1/3 of those who registered. There just weren't any jobs this summer. I don't think the creation of jobs is the responsibility of the kids — that is a problem of the establishment.

The kids of Oshawa don't need a break. They're not asking for one. But they do want to be understood, and loved. And they are not hard to love. I would just like Mr. Disgusted to know that there are educated, responsible adults in this town who are not necessarily the parents of these kids and can be perfectly honest, who think they are beautiful, and deserve all the help they can get in this already miserable enough process of growing up.

Spotlight on a New Canadian

This immigrant's happy except for liquor laws

EDITOR'S NOTE: Oshawa is the adopted home of many people from other lands who have seen Canada as one of the last frontiers. There, a man can make a good living by applying himself so that with a bit of luck and a lot of hard work he can achieve the success he could only dream about in his homeland. From time to time This Week will turn the spotlight on these New Canadians. To get their impressions of their adopted Homeland and to introduce them to their Oshawanians.

There's no mistaking where Jim Hood called home before emigrating to Canada. Exchanging a few brief sentences with him tells you that not too long ago he belonged to Glasgow.

Of all the accents in the British Isles, the thick Glasgow croon is the easiest to distinguish. Maybe not the easiest to understand, but certainly the easiest to distinguish.

Jim, who is 27, has been in Canada 11 months and already is part-owner of Britannica Woodworking, a moderately profitable carpentry firm. He began his carpentry apprenticeship at the age of 15 and was a construction superintendent the last two years in Scotland.

"I was in sole charge of a 19-storey block of flats with about 25 men under me," he said recently. "I took it right from a hole in the ground to completion and got excellent references from my boss. You'd think I'd paid him a million pounds for them."

The high cost and less-than-perfect standard of living in Great Britian got Jim interested in emigrating to Canada. A cautious man, he and his wife came here for a vacation in June, 1969, to size up the situation.

So impressed were they with Canada that as soon as they got back to Scotland they applied to the immigration authorities for permission to emigrate.

"I was called up for my medical in August along with my wife and two kiddies and within a couple of weeks I had a letter saying we could come any time we wanted."

Upon his arrival, last October, Jim registered with the Manpower office and was grateful for the effort they put into trying to find him a position. Things were tight at the time, however, and he had trouble finding something suitable.

"I went to one place where a woman offered me $2 an hour, but I turned it down," he said. "I thought that was a disgraceful wage to pay a carpenter."

Went 50-50

Finally, a relative talked to Alf Sams, a local carpenter, who complained that he had more work then he could handle and was looking for a good carpenter to help him. Jim and Alf got together and before long formed a 50-50 partnership

They both had more work than they could cope with up until January of this year and then sat through a lean February, March and April. Things started to pick up again in May and today are back to a healthy level.

"We get most of our work on referral since our customers are really pleased with our work," he said. "It seems that in Canada one carpenter does only trimming, while another does nothing but cupboards and another does doors."

"Back home, when you do your apprenticeship, you have to be versatile, so Alf (who trained in England) and I can do a good job for less money than a lot of other firms."

Jim enjoys the work and has nothing but praise for Canada, with the possible exception of our out-dated liquor laws

OLT announces directors for upcoming season

A member of the Canadian Armed Forces, a prominent lawyer, and an Oshawa housewife have been chosen to direct the Oshawa Little Theatre productions for the coming season, Pat Patterson OLT President announced. Patterson said he feels the choice of directors will complement the plays announced earlier this month

Art Elliott, a member of the ground staff of the CAF at Trenton and a resident of Oshawa will direct the first play of the season, "Never Too Late". The play is about the unplanned parenthood that befalls a pair of middle-agers and will be seen at Eastdale Theatre on November 18-21 Mr Elliott formerly directed Twelve Angry Men, Picnic and My Three Angels for the Oshawa Little Theatre.

The second play of the season, The Lion in Winter, a story of England's King Henry II and his elegantly brawling family will be directed by Norman Edmonton, Oshawa lawyer and member of the Ontario County Board of Education. Mr. Edmondson who has directed the Crucible, The Glass Menagerie and Marriage Go Round for OLT and who has appeared in leading parts in Picnic, The Lark, Teahouse of the August Moon and Inherit the Wind, will direct the richly-phrased verbal assaults of this circus of intrigues for February 3-6.

You Know I Can't Hear You When The Water's Running, is something else and so is its director Janet Stevenson. Not an ordinary housewife, Mrs. Stevenson who has previously directed Say Who You Are and the Odd Couple, has been handed the task of keeping the mockeries of the four one act plays gushing merrily.

It would be hard to fathom how two such individual talents as Dot and Morris Rainvilles could come together to make such a special duo, but the pairing was a natural. Whether it's Dot caressing a French love song or belting "The Impossible Dream" Morris cutting up through "Those Were The Days" or the two of them swinging through a Beatle's medley, this is a twosome rightfully tagged "The biggest two-piece band in the world". But more important than being the biggest, they are without a doubt the very best.

Dot and Morris will be on stage nitely at 9:00 p.m. at Jim's Stage Door.

ETV starts here this month

Channel 19, Canada's first full time educational television station will go on the air September 27, 1970 via an Ultra High Frequency transmitter that is the first of its kind in North America. In Oshawa it will be seen on Cable TV.

The British designed and built transmitter will be programmed by The Ontario Educational Communications Authority, the new body responsible for educational broadcasting in Ontario and operated for the Authority by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The Channel 19 antenna literally sits atop the CBC tower on Jarvis Street, rising 541 feet in the air. The transmitter itself shares a small one-storey building nearby with the FM transmitter for CBC's new improved FM service.

All programs will originate from OECA's Channel 19 master control centre on Bayview Ave. near Eglinton with the signal travelling by Bell Telephone cable through the CBC master control room and into the UHF transmitter. From there the transmitter, which is designed for unattended operation, will automatically beam sound and picture into a viewing area extending from Oshawa on the east, north to Newmarket and west to Hamilton and St. Catharines.

Workmen have taken down 100 feet of the old tower which must be strengthened to carry an increased load before beginning on the new structure, slated for completion September 1. Test patterns will be broadcast for Channel 19 starting September 14.

The highly sophisticated transmitter equipment was disassembled for shipping in 20-foot containers specially constructed to withstand shock and uncrated on arrival at the permanent site. CBC engineer, Hugh Potter, charged with assembling the equipment again in Toronto was in England to oversee the operation.

"This is only the third transmitter of its type in the world," explains Potter, who has put up TV transmitters across Canada. The other two are in England. "One of the unique things about it is that there are only two tubes, one for picture, one for sound." The tubes, called Klystrons, are six-foot high cylinders, not the kind found in your average television set, yet extremely compact for the job they do. Except for the vapor-cooled tubes, the equipment is all transistorized.

This transmitter was selected as being most appropriate for the job after extensive evaluation of severl makes in the U.S.A. and great Britain.

Channel 19 will be offering programming 13½ hours a day, Monday to Friday and five hours Saturday and Sunday during its first season.

Programs will be directed to five different audience levels: preschool, school and youth, university and college, professional development and adult education for home viewers.

Immediate viewers will be those with UHF receivers or cable

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

During the weekend I had the opportunity to watch some pilots of Beaver aircraft airlift some people around the country side. Landing in cowpastures, the aircraft would discharge the personnel with the engines still running and be back in the air in less than two minutes

It was almost frightening to watch these lumbering planes nearly drop into the temporary landing strip acting more like helicopters. These Canadian built and designed aircraft are an example of the excellence of Canadian engineering and the word Beaver is one of the most respected around the world

But this type of aircraft didn't just come to be

The story of the Beaver is just one of the many stories that will be shown on Cablecast 8 during the next two weeks. The National Film Board has put together three special half hour films telling the history of aviation from McCurdy's early efforts to the present day. With the clever use of actual old films this one and a half hours of history is a good look at the old days of flying

What makes this series so important to all of us is that without the airplane the vast territories of Canada would have never been opened up. All it takes to realize this is to fly from say Toronto to Ottawa and then you will see the vastness of the bushland

Woodview trounces Glen Stewart

Pink shower curtains for the pro dressing room?

By Tom Douglas

Most of us remember girls playing softball the same way we remember the time we decided to surprise the folks and make dinner — disaster

We learned early that girls had a knack for cooking and sewing but were lousy softball players and vice versa. It made life a lot simpler when these guidelines were established

But this is the day of the feminist: the day of 'Anything he can do, I can do better'. Females have invaded every masculine domain from the beer parlor to the pool hall

It was not very surprising therefore to be driving along Stevenson Road North on Saturday and discover young girls belting a softball all over a playing field with form that surpassed that of our youth

Woodview Park was trouncing Glen Stewart Park in a tournament staged by the Neighborhood Association Sports Committee. The girls were fully outfitted with authentic ball uniforms and were choking up on the bat like professionals

Gone apparently is the day when girls swung at a ball with their eyes closed, lunging awkwardly like a bear trying to scoop salmon after eating his fill of fermented blueberries

These girls were swatting the horsehide the way Donny Beamer, the best hitter on our block, used to do so many years ago. One almost expected to see a stream of tobacco juice come squirting out of their mouths as they swaggered up to the plate

Fred Smith, coach of the Woodview Park team, had high praise for his players, who range in age from 11 to 13 years He finds them well-disciplined and ladylike, but not afraid to get their hands dirty or work up a sweat

"Actually, some of the teams we've played have gotten a little carried away and have been anything but ladylike, but that's the result of poor disciplining on the part of the coach," he said between shouts of encouragement to his girls.

And he has a right to refer to several of the players as 'his girls' in more ways than one. The pitcher is his 13-year-old daughter Sandra while her sister Diane, 11, holds down third base.

The girls were responsible for getting Smith out to coach. He had never coached a girls' team before although he has coaching experience with boys' hockey teams. He finds his present task a pleasant change

"They're a wonderful bunch of kids. You wouldn't want a more disciplined and polite group of girls."

Woodview Park's participation in the tournament was a warm-up for their appearance in semi-final playoffs scheduled to begin Monday. That series too is against Glen Stewart Park and the winner of that three-game contest will play for the city championship.

The various parks in the city are split into two areas and each plays its regular series within that area. The games are either seven innings long or last 1¼ hours, whichever comes first.

Just as Smith mentioned this fact, one of his girls, Betty Litner, laced a single into right field and he had to get to the first base coach's position.

The next batter hit a single as well, a Glen Stewart player booted the ball and then overthrew and Betty romped home. This reporter left the field in amazement, thinking it wouldn't be too long before there'd be pink shower curtains in the dressing rooms of the professional baseball teams.

Woodview girls show their winning spirit.

New coach takes over Oshawa Generals

Come September 11, Ed Reigle, the new coach of the Oshawa Generals will blow the whistle to open the 1970-71 General Training Camp of about 55 eager Junior A candidates from across Ontario.

The new coach is a native of Winnipeg but was himself an Oshawa General in the 1942-43 season.

Following a three-year stint in the Canadian Army, he re-joined the Detroit Red Wings organization and for the next few years played his professional hockey with Cleveland, Boston and then finishing in Cleveland.

Next two years Reigle was playing coach of the North Bay Senior A Trappers.

Then came an exciting assignment a three year contract with the Swedish Ice Hockey Federation. Sweden made him coach of its national team and turned direction of ice hockey in Sweden over to him. This involved a reorganization of coaching, training and playing programs at all levels. His success was verified by an offer of a further five year contract, but Reigle decided to seek new areas of experience. Thus for three years he coached teams in West Germany and Switzerland.

Reigle came back to pursue a business career in Canada and next joined the scouting staff of the Boston Bruins.

"To our great joy Ed has accepted the duties of coach and general manager of the Generals," announced president Russel D. Humphreys.

Humphreys adds that Reigle is known in hockey circles as a "fundamentalist". The Generals president says Reigle is "firm but fair, highly respected in international hockey circles, and a person of high principles who believes in instilling these principles in any young hockey player who is fortunate enough to come under his direction."

Jo visits lions on the loose

By Jo Aldwinckle
Women's editor

Lions? Live Lions? Loose in Ontario?

That's right. Lions, over 40 of them are alive and well and roaming at will in a 450-acre preserve not too far from Oshawa. The game farm is also home to 100 or more baboons as well as sea lions, penguins, llamas, wallabies, peacocks and farm animals.

The African Lion Safari which was inaugurated one year ago, is located near Rockton, south of Galt. I found the easiest way to get there was by following the Dundas Highway (No. 5) west, past Clappison's Corners, until No. 8 crosses. Take No. 8 north for six miles or so, past the village of Rockton and watch for the sign "African Lion Safari" on the right-hand side. Turn in there and follow the signs. The preserve is 97 miles from Oshawa

Admission is $4 per car, irrespective of the number of passengers. No convertibles are permitted and family pets must be kennelled.

Once inside the high steel mesh gates you drive along marked trails. You are warned by loudspeakers to keep doors and windows closed, It gets hot inside the car and you can rent an air-conditioned model for $2.50. Wardens patrol the reserve continuously should you require assistance. Just sound your horn and wait. Help will come. DO NOT get out of the car.

Remember young Albert?

The first sign carries a warning, "Trespassers will be Eaten". No fooling; there they are, — great, handsome beasts that appear docile They're not.

When I arrived they were knawing their lunch. Each had a 10-12 lb joint, so my skinny elbow held no attraction. I rolled the window down to get a quick picture and a voice boomed from a watchtower to please roll it up. I did, hastily

The lions in the park have formed themselves into definite groups, each with its own leader and a definite order of subordinates. Each group has its own territory, jealously guarded

Animals to watch for particularly as you drive through the reserve are "Hercules", "Emperor" and "Caesar" all large males and obvious leaders of their respective prides

Each pride is provided with a draft-free "house" into which they are herded every evening by the game wardens. The lions are released again the next morning after the necessary park clean-up and maintenance has been completed

The daily meat supply is approximately 500 lbs of beef. No hamburg Meat on the bone is more beneficial to their health as it takes longer to tear the meat from the bone and so avoids their swallowing large lumps which might cause digestive upsets

They have adapted to the southern Ontario climate; grew thick coats in the winter and played in the snow. Four cubs were born December 30 and they are in the Pets' Corner

The baboons live in a large colony in a special 12-acre enclosure. They are inquisitive and fearless. Drive carefully because they dart across the road. It's quite an experience to have one land on the car hood or roof

You find yourself strongly tempted to feed them. Don't try it. They have unpredictable tempers and they bite before you can say "You little monkey"

There is a pleasant picnic area, safe from predators and a cafeteria

The preserve is open every day of the year from 10 a.m. to 6.30 p.m (approximately) and I recommend a weekday visit

Jim found out the hard way about the strange liquor laws we put up with here. He was drinking on a Saturday night at a local cocktail lounge and asked the waiter at closing time to wrap him up a bottle to take home

"He looked at me like I was daft and told me I could drink there but I couldn't take any home with me. You would think it would be the other way around. If a man wants to get drunk, it's better to let him do it at home where he can fall into bed than at a hotel where he has to drive home."

After a parched Sunday the next day, Jim learned his lesson and stocks up ahead of time although he finds it a nuisance that there are only two liquor outlets in a city the size of Oshawa.

HOW MUCH

What quantity of paint is necessary to cover the exterior of your wood home? Just remember these easy rules of thumb, says the Canadian Paint Manufacturers Association. Finish coats of house paint will normally cover about 500 square feet of surface per gallon. Primer will generally cover about 450 square feet per gallon. But remember — always check your paint can label for an exact estimate of coverage for the paint selected.

STRIKE IS JUVENILE

Oshawa has big dogs, little dogs, black dogs, white dogs, skinny dogs, fat dogs, long dogs, short dogs and one laughing dog, like good old Blackie who lives near the corner of Rossland and Harmony an editorial

While we do not admire the way Treasury Board Chairman Charles Drury bungled the postal dispute, the same gentleman came through loud and clear last Friday when he said that our present system of collective bargaining and strikes are anachronism unsuitable to modern society.

"I am rapidly coming to the point of saying our present system just doesn't work," Drury said in an interview, adding that the "pressure is on the government to find a more sensible and civilized way than this relic of the trial by combat."

For Drury, as for an increasing number of legislators across the country, the obvious answer is to ban strikes, at least in essential public services, and send the disputants to an impartial arbitrator, who could hand down a binding settlement.

According to Drury, North America is a free enterprise society that has allowed monopolies only in one area — the trade union monopoly over jobs — but will not tolerate abuse of that monopoly power.

Arguing that public opinion is swinging against the freedom now granted trade unions, he points to recent moves by the governments of British Columbia, Quebec and Saskatchewan to limit the strike right in essential services, apparently with the approval of the electorate

"Arbitration is the answer," he says.

Drury is coming through loud and clear.'

Perhaps in these days of "pre-strike" or "strike or no strike" and "how long", he has a special message for Oshawa and some of the other municipalities where large contingents of workers are wondering anxiously what their union leaders will decide on their behalf at the bargaining table.

When we have a fight with our neighbor about a tree we take the issue to court. An impartial judge or jury settles things according to the law which all of us in the end, must abide by, or change. Such is the

SHORT TAKES

QUOTA REACHED
The Red Cross Blood Donor clinic last Thursday was the first successful clinic of the season. A total of 515 pints of blood were donated by local residents. The quota for the day long clinic was 500 pints

TAX HOLD-UP
City residents will not be penalized for late payment of municipal taxes if their tax bills were delayed by recent postal difficulties. Final installments were due Friday, but Tax Collector Clarence Cox assured taxpayers that the city will take the postal situation into account when deciding on penalties for late payments

LAST CONCERT
The 30th annual season of concerts by the Oshawa Civic Band came to a close Thursday evening before a capacity crowd at the McLaughlin Bandshell. Also on hand for the final concert were the Whitby County and Town Singers

NEW PLAZA
A two-storey apartment building and a three-store shopping plaza are planned for the Nonquon Ritson Road area of the city. This was revealed last week when the board of control approved payment of $200 to Ludian Investments Limited for a small parcel of property in the area. The property will become part of a cul-de-sac when the city closes Nonquon from Simcoe to Mary Streets later this year

RECALL
General Motors has asked the owners of 50 light-duty 1970 trucks to return them to the factory for a check of possible bolt defects in the front suspension. GM says the possibility exists of loss of control under certain driving conditions due to breakage of the brittle bolts.

ACCESS ROAD
A further delay has occurred in attempts by the city's industrial development commission to obtain a suitable access road for a 20,000 square foot industrial mall in Farewell Industrial Park. Lack of a quorum at Thursday's board of control meeting prevented the commission from gaining approval for their plans.

PLAYGROUNDS
With the end of the summer holidays, the 33 play areas in Oshawa have terminated activities for another year. A variety of activities saw thousands of Oshawa youngsters spend an enjoyable summer, thanks to the Oshawa Recreation Department's parks and playgrounds program.

PERSONNEL MAN
City Personnel Director Terrence Stevens has announced the appointment of a new personnel officer for Oshawa. He is Brian Gough, a graduate of the University of Maine with a bachelor of science degree in business administration. He also holds a diploma in business administration from the St. John Institute of Technology

SILVER
A surprise party arranged by their children marked the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Tullock of Courtice recently. The couple was married Sept 1, 1945 in Bowmanville They have five children

GOLDEN
Mr. and Mrs. John C. Kemp of Garrard Street in Whitby recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Kemp were married Aug. 28, 1920 in Manchester, England and came to Canada in 1926. Messages of congratulations were sent by Prime Minister Trudeau, Governor General Michener and Premier John Robarts of Ontario.

LINE HALTS
General Motors, B assembly line was closed down Friday due to a shortage of parts. Some 2,800 workers were affected by the shutdown. GM officials said the shortage occurred with floor panels and doors.

UNEMPLOYMENT
The local Canada Manpower office reports that 1,525 men and 1,008 women were unemployed during the month of August in the Oshawa area. Job opportunities with the department, however, showed an improvement during the month.

90TH BIRTHDAY
Mrs. Amy Sargent, who came to Oshawa in 1920, celebrated her 90th birthday last Friday. Married in Peterborough in 1906 after emigrating from England, Mrs. Sargent has four daughters and three sons living in the Oshawa area, 20 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

That's Simcoe Hall

People helping people

The baby's crying but there isn't any milk.

The youthful transient is hitchhiking to North Bay and he's hungry, but he's broke.

The unwed expectant mother is on welfare but it only covers her rent, no food

All or any of these problems may come to the door of Simcoe Hall 387 Simcoe Street in any given day or week. They are typical of the 459 families and individuals who received material help in 1969 from the Women's Welfare League. The problems are all different, and yet basically all the same in terms of human need and human response.

At Simcoe Hall that response is willing and immediate.

A grocery voucher for the milk, a meal ticket for the hitchiker, groceries for the unwed mother, all are supplied in the shortest possible time without red tape to unravel, or forms to fill out.

This area

"We have to be flexible", says Harold Fuller, administrator of the Women's Welfare League. "Simcoe Hall is here to meet the needs of the people in the immediate area".

The Women's Welfare League was formed in the thirties to do just that. Since that time, Simcoe Hall Settlement House has handled public health work, family court cases and related social work in the city, and today the Women's Welfare League has a membership of approximately 85, representing all walks of life in the city.

The League is the corporate body under whose aegis the Settlement House and its welfare department, the Boys' Club (Eastview) and the Crippled Children's Centre function independently, and each of the three has its own Unit Committee.

Then there is a Personnel Committee, Welfare Committee, Ways and Means, Clubs and Programs, Property and Maintenance and all the other committees necessary to keep the multi-faceted program of the Women's Welfare League functioning.

There's a Medical Advisory Board for the Crippled' Children's Centre as well as an over-all Advisory Board, plus, of course the conventional slate of officers of the League itself, president, vice-presidents secretary etc.

Concept remains

The organizations have changed with changing times but the basic concept of people helping people remains. The busy welfare department continues to operate because the need is still urgent. Simcoe Hall can move quickly to give help where City Welfare by its nature may have to take longer.

Then too, there are some who don't fit any city welfare category. The lady who had to have a dress to wear and was forced to spend her grocery money. The mother with three children, hungry because father didn't come home with the paycheck.

They are people in need and Simcoe Hall supplies help whether it's money for rent, moving costs, hydro, fuel oil or prescriptions.

Last year 587 families and individuals applied for an received clothing from the used clothing depot behind the main building. Almost 30,000 articles were handled there in 1969 all of them donations brought in by members, church groups, scouts, guides, schools and friends of Simcoe Hall.

Invaluable too is the work of the Golden Age

There's something really novel going on in the way Oshawa is promoted to new industry and commerce. And I'll bet very few readers — and even city officials — are aware of it.

Exactly how it works I don't know, and just where the industrial commish gets the power I can't figure out either, but here's how it works:

At 9 a.m. the commissioner sits at his big desk to scan the appointments for the day. He's got a good spot up there in the Rundle Tower. Even from his desk chair he can see his whole empire.

There's a delegation of people-looking-for-a-good-site coming in at 10 a.m. for a tour in the area of the harbor and the industrial subdivision, and at 2 p.m. there's a group that has been here before but wants to tour some of the residential sections.

Somehow, at 8.30 the big city street washing machine has left the Ritson Road yard to make a grand sweep of the roads leading to the industrial area-for-sale. Come 10 a.m. the whole block to be visited by the commish and his delegation looks fresh as a daisy. No dust, no junk. Everything has been swept — and not under the rug.

From the industrial area the big broom somehow moves to Beau Valley and a few other choice spots. For the 2 p.m. tour by the guys who have already seen the industrial area, everything looks spic and span.

Now the industrial commissioner tells me he really does not have control over the comings and goings of the "big broom". I have to believe him. But, Mr. Commissioner, you do have some powerful friends in the works yard.

Which brings up this detour thing once again. Not remembering the big schemozzle on Simcoe Street at 401 where big gaping holes have been dug and things are being covered and uncovered, I ventured out to Simcoe Street South, Friday night, planning to turn east on the freeway.

There were no signs that I noticed until I got going west bound on Bloor Street to make my turn. A U.S. visitor's stationwagon was just behind me, obviously planning the same strategy. Well, suddenly the turnoff was not there. But there's a big parking lot nearby, designed, it seems, for U turns. We turned, to go east on Bloor to Ritson. But just east of Simcoe, Bloor Street comes to a halt too. After another detour we headed south on Simcoe, turned left on Wentworth, to eventually get back on Bloor Street.

And then Highway 401 was plugged with traffic. So I told my friend behind me, to stick close, and we'd miss all that slow-going traffic. So we crossed 401, with the idea of following Bloor Street east on the south side of the highway.

But there's another detour which I believe has something to do with the new Holiday Inn.

Eventually, through umpteen more backroads, I got back on 401. Somewhere along the line my U.S. friend had stopped, however, made a U-turn and probably went back to the Niagara Falls border, disgusted.

Col. Sam enters his 100th year

A message expressing the deep appreciation of the people at General Motors of Canada "for your continuing contribution to the success of our company" was delivered yesterday to board chairman R. Samuel McLaughlin who celebrated his 99th birthday

The message was signed by President Roland S. Withers on behalf of 30,000 GM people in Canada. It read: "As you enter your 100th year it is my great pleasure to combine hearty birthday greetings with the best wishes and warm affection of the directors, officers and the thousands of people who make up General Motors of Canada We congratulate you on your birthday and take this occasion to remind you of our deep appreciation for your continuing contribution to the success of our company. We hope your recovery will soon be complete so that we can welcome you back to your office. Meantime, please be assured of our highest regard for you as founder of this company and as a man with whom we all are proud to be associated. God bless you and keep you."

Mr. McLaughlin who is making a good recovery from the surgery he underwent earlier this year celebrated the day quietly with family and close friends at his home, Parkwood

General Motors of Canada grew out of the McLaughlin Carriage Company — in its day the largest such enterprise in the British Empire — which was found by Robert McLaughlin, father of R. S. McLaughlin, in 1867.

Plant to RS from ROM

To mark his 99th birthday, yesterday, Colonel R. S. McLaughlin received a century plant from the Royal Ontario Museum

Col. McLaughlin recently was elected a patron of the ROM by the Board of Trustees in recognition of his many contributions to it, notably the $2¼ million McLaughlin Planetarium and financial support for the restuarant complex now being constructed on Museum grounds

In his note to Col McLaughlin, Peter C Swann, Director of the Royal Ontario Musum wrote: "We hope that the Century Plant will gladden the days of your 100th year — a splendid lifetime which has inspired and enriched this Canada

According to legend, the Century Plant grows for 100 years before flowering, but in actuality it blooms after 30 or 40 years. When it does, it provides a spectacular sight. Known to botanists as Agave Americana, it is a native of American deserts. When it is ready to bloom, a flower spike begins to grow up from the centre, reaching almost 20 feet. Hundreds of pale flowers, each the size of a single rose, grow along the spike. Shortly after blooming and just before it dies, the plant produces hundreds of plantlets which are eventually pushed off and fall to the ground.

The plant presented to Col. McLaughlin is 4 years old and measures 2½ feet wide and 15 inches high. It was obtained from the Botany Department of the University of Toronto. Staff members of the Royal Ontario Museum said that they hoped Colonel McLaughlin might be induced to live at least another 30 or 40 years to see it bloom

1941 When gasoline rationing was imposed during the war Mr MCLaughlin set a gas-saving example by driving to work in a fine carriage democractic process. It's a reasonable, civilized way to settle things.

And this reasonable, civilized way to settle will bring about a better world.

The strike as a weapon is juvenile. It's undemocratic when you think about it in terms of the thousands of "outside" people who are affected by a strike such as one in the auto industry.

Settling disputes by force, however applied, is no better in the final analysis, than holding a gun to your neighbor's head and saying "do as I say or I'll kill you."

Accordingly, the strike gun is a pretty final tool if in the process of triggering it, you kill of your antagonist. Now we are not saying that a strike would come anywhere near killing GM. However, lesser companies have gone under after a prolonged strike, which points up the futility of taking a strike to its logical conclusion.

Far better than, that both sides take their causes to court — a court of arbitration. The ground rules for going to court are well known to us all. The judge's decision is accepted and respected by both parties, but if through human error a glaring miscarriage of justice is perpetuated, then the injured party may resort to a higher court of appeal. This system of justice has been carried on for many hundreds of years throughout the world and it has been found the best method of resolving a dispute, short of face to face antagonism.

Why then, we ask, does an otherwise rational and law abiding body of people, namely a union, in a dispute with an employer suddenly decide to virtually take the law into its own hands — and to the same extent this applies to management since it takes two to quarrel — in resorting to strike or lockout action in order to pursue their own objectives. What is so special about conditions of employment, offered or asked, which would make a settlement impossible through a court of arbitration?

What is there to be gained, and by whom, from not going to arbitration?

The rank and file unionists might show management that they mean what they say, if their wage demands are not met, but for every day they are out they will lose a considerable sum of money.

And what about management? What does it have to lose? There's production, and therefore presumably profits, and a sales force that would be idle throughout the country. On the face of it, it would seem it is not in their best interest to have a strike. So what has anyone to gain?

Well, what about the personnel from the company whose raison d'etre is to be united in their efforts to screw the union at all times, and more important, to be seen to be doing it for the benefit of fat cat shareholders? And what about their opposite numbers on the other side — the union people whose expertise and re-electability is in direct proportion to their apparent aggressiveness towards management?

In short, if you're going to keep the natives happy, you've got to stage a good production to show that the battle is being won by both sides simultaneously and you've got to make it look like a hard and gruelling fight and thereby justify your fancy salaries and expenses and your continuing to hold your respective positions as negotiators.

Let's face it, resorting to arbitration without the passion and the hostility of a good old fashioned strike with picketlines and tire burnings and a few rock throwings would be tame stuff indeed, with no opportunity to let off a bit of steam and no opportunity to show the rank and file of both sides what brilliant people their respective negotiators are.

Of course, we would like to think this is not the case, but we do wish someone would prove it to us. And if this is in fact not the reason, can anyone in this union-conscious city give our readers the real reason, from union or management, for not settling the present and future labor disputes by binding arbitration?

Both sides owe an explanation to the public.

PREJUDICE - have we ever got it here!

Oshawanians, like most Canadians, probably pride themselves on the fact that racial prejudice does not exist here.

Most of us read of acts of prejudice against the Negro in the United States and shake our heads in disbelief and disgust. We honestly believe this would never happen in Canada.

Well, we're kidding ourselves. Prejudice does exist here and the only reason we aren't aware of it is because the number of Negroes in Canada is proportionately smaller than in the United States.

Many people right here in Oshawa, whether or not they want to believe it, are decidely prejudiced. How do we know? It only took a few telephone calls.

No, This Week did not call up local residents and ask them point blank if they were prejudiced. In most cases, the reply would have been a prompt 'No'. Instead, one of our reporters recently took the Rooms for Rent advertisement from the Oshawa Times and called the numbers listed.

"Yes, I have a room for rent for one gentleman," was the typical reply. "It's $15 a week and I serve breakfast. Yes, you can move in on Monday, but I have to have a week's rent in advance."

And so on. In about a dozen cases over several days, the conversation got that far before the reporter dropped his bombshell.

"There's only one thing I had better tell you before we go any further," he would say. "I'm a Negro. Does that make any difference?"

The reactions to this statement ranged from a rude slamming of the telephone in his ear in one case to a polite refusal to rent the room after all. Most just hesitated.

Well, I don't know," said one woman. "I'd have to ask my husband when he gets home from work. Could you call back then?"

Only one potential landlady out of the dozen who were about to rent a room to the reporter said without hesitation that it did not matter.

So, when confronted with the problem, it seems we are prejudiced after all. Even those who hesitated showed a certain amount of prejudice. If the color of a person's skin doesn't matter, why hesitate at all?

A black American football star playing for a Canadian team a few years back reserved his most bitter remarks on the subject for those Canadians who at a cocktail party would come up to him and say: "We treat you pretty good up here don't we Cookie?"

"Why shouldn't you?" he would reply. "What's so different about me that you have to single me out with a remark like that?"

The well-meaning but tactless Canadian would then become flustered, down the rest of his drink and slink over to the other side of the room.

The next time we read of racial riots in the United States, perhaps we had better not be too smug about it.

She doesn't buy the feminist movement either

Sir:

After reading last week's guest editorial by Vicki MacKinnon I felt compelled to commend her.

I agree completely with her anti-feminist views; and she expressed herself forcefully.

As Vicki stated, the woman — the housewife, does have a brain. Though only a few hot-headed females are voicing their opinions, what about the silent MAJORITY? The ones that are too busy playing housewife and mother, and at the same time are enjoying it! What about those women who love their children and husbands and are proving it by staying where they are needed most — the home! These women don't have time to parade up and down the street with crude signs plastered on different portions of their bodies. They don't have to wear signs to show that they are female as the feminists do!

The decision should be made by these women — to be a feminist or to be a wife. This feminist movement should be left to the younger, single girls not the married women! If you choose to be a wife, then you must realize that this is a twenty-four hour job! Not part time!

A women can be free without being a feminist. The female has special God-given characteristics that make her different from the male and she can use her charm and beauty to her desires. A woman can hold the world. It's sad that there are few females today to measure up to the word WOMAN. Perhaps, it is that they are too busy trying to be liberated.

And don't forget the thousands of hen-pecked husbands around today. Maybe the husbands should be liberated first!

Instead of rebelling these women should be thanking God for their homes and families and most of all thanking God for being a WOMAN.

Well written Vicki!

Susan Shetler.

He hit the Yorkville scene, but recovered

Sir:

For the past few months I have been reading your "issues and answers" section with great inner disappointment. The readers who have written sofar are extremely plastic and followers of self-love. They put themselves on the stand, preaching this and exclaiming that and then go to their homes doing the opposite of what they're supposed to believe.

People of the drop-in should take a look at such modern-day hippies as Billy Graham or Pope Paul. They don't sit around parks giving peace signs or complaining about the establishment. They know complaining and crying will not help, so they go to work and I mean helpful work. They don't go around screwing up their mind with acid. They keep their mind in check to be able to promote peace in the best possible

Now, after many months of exhausting renovations and preparations, we are opening the doors to Harleigh's of Green Street. We are not completely finished - our Picadilly Circus Room will not be ready for a few more weeks and our office is not finished, but what is ready is, we hope, your introduction to an entirely new and more personal way of choosing your home decorating requirements. As you will see, we have made an honest attempt to decorate our own premises with a feeling of complete relaxation and low-key display. It is our purpose to offer you well known and discreetly selected furniture names such as Barrymore, Gibbard, Sebastian de Lorenzis, and many others, with the plus factor that when you have acquired the item, you have the knowledge that we have done our utmost to provide the perfect piece to fulfill your explicit needs. In other words - we want to work with you. When you visit our shop you will find only the exquisite craftsmanship of the Gibbard Furniture Shops (on display you will see the "Canadian Legacy" 9 pc. solid mahogany dining room suite - a magnificent indulgence at just $1,790.00), the extra ordinary perfection of fine upholstered pieces by Barrymore (to invite your perusal, we have several occasional chairs appointed in brocades, florals, and vistram) - also we will be showing a large selection of the world famous Stiffel lamps (unfortunetly we will not have these for you until late September), and with these lines we have the extremely high quality but moderately priced Flexsteel upholstered pieces (in our salon is a traditional chesterfield and chair suite done in a mild aqua and coin gold brocade, both pieces priced at just $469.00). Rather than bore you with the many, many items we have on display, please come in at your convenience and just brouse. We promise you it will be a delight. Our hours are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, 9:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Thursday and Friday 9:30 a.m. until 9:00 p.m. Saturday 9:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. By the way - we hate to bring up anything as mundane as a sale but from our opening date until the end of September, we are offering a 25% reduction on all drapery fabrics (lining excepted) and making charges. All of our many thousands of fabrics are included and it is an excellent opportunity to make great savings on high quality merchandise.

You cannot go around plugging society full of holes unless you really have a desire to help; to get up off your fat behind and promote peace, instead of just faking it

Most of you people are just following a fad. The only reason you say you are concerned about the world' problems is because John Lennon is, or those who follow Yippie Rubin or Hoffman, and who says the U.S. needs a revolution along with Canada

Wake up man. Use your own head, not someone else's. Be your own leader and not a sucker for such organizations as the Mafia, because that's what you're doing. Drugs are direct Mafia sales whether you believe it or not. You're killing yourselves with the trips while the damn Cosa Nostra laughs at you idiots. You are making world peace even worse because the communists are all excited about the work you're doing for them

Are you really worried about Viet Nam or is it because that's the thing to do?

I hit the Yorkville scene with the hopes of being a hippieland freak, waving peace signs and screaming I wanted to end war, hate and prejudice. After a long stay I ended up in the hospital with blood poisoning, underweight, sickness and mental hurts, because blowing your mind with acid and cranking speed to "bring inner peace", as was said to me by a commune head in the village, does not work. He was wrong Dead wrong. Two of my friends from the village are in jail and one is dead. I could have died also if I hadn't got to hospital in time, because we did what you speed freaks are doing.

I am now 20 and healthy, after much suffering. And I get damn mad seeing you people go the way we did. My letter is only to the loud extremists who talk about a lot of things they know nothing about. I know a few of the guys at the Oshawa Drop-in are going to end up dead.

Yours in peace.

Ahab.

Whitby reader is browned off with city hall

Sir:

I have no doubt this letter will not be printed, but maybe I will feel better for writing it

We live in the town of Whitby; we pay high taxes, but can get no satisfaction for that Tax money.

We have a son who is a chronic asthmatic. The field across from us, has never had the weeds cut this year. Both my neighbour and myself have phoned the works dept., the week inspector, and finally I phoned the Mayor. Of course when you phone him his secretary says he isn't in, but she will have him call you. Well, he never calls.

We have tried to get our ditch fixed. It is one awful mess, but apparently this end of town is very unimportant, because nothing can ever be fixed. The town did agree two years ago they needed to be fixed, but two years later we are still waiting.

We are a corner lot, and the sidewalk on Bowman Ave., just drops off when it gets to Johnson Ave.

If you want to go along Johnson, you have to go through a very deep ditch, or along the front of our house. We would like to put up a hedge, but how long would it last, when people have to walk there with carriages, and trikes and what not. The town said they would put a sidewalk there if we paid half. Why should we apy half to put a sidewalk on town property, that we already pay taxes on?

It is too bad that the middle class man is considered so unimportant. People like our Mayor seem to care only about the big shot like themselves.

Soldiers knew war, peace

Sir:

I happen to agree, whole-heartedly with DISGUSTED. I think that the whole idea of her letter was completely justified!

Do you not think that sitting around for hours on end, is just another way to waste your life! If this is life to some of these hair kids; then Heaven help the generation to come!

These kids talk about love and peace, but do they know the real meanings behind these power-

Drug Abuse News No. 9

TO HAVE, GIVE, OR SELL MARIJUANA IS A CRIME.

"Smoking Pot" is a serious crime that may affect your entire life. Prison and, or, large fines can be imposed. Convictions can prevent you from entering a profession or ruin a business career. Government jobs are almost impossible to obtain.

Statements reporting that Marijuana is medically safe are not supported by present facts. It is true that it is not addictive. There are no physically painful withdrawal symptoms. You can stop if you have the willpower.

But exposure to the illicit drug pushers, who sell Marijuana, influences users to try the narcotic drugs. A 1967 study of city narcotic addicts showed that more than 80% had first used Marijuana. And, narcotic addicts, who are "hooked," call it a "living hell."

The next issue of Drug Abuse News will discuss Narcotic Addiction, "The Refuge of the Damned."

by tom douglas

There has been a lot of talk of late about equality of the sexes. I'm all for it. As a matter of fact, I'm pretty upset about how shabbily one sex has treated the other over the years and I'm going to do something about it

It's time we men stood up for our rights. We have been dominated from birth. No sooner do we cut the apron strings than we're pressed to the bosom of the public school teacher. Once out of her clutches, we begin going steady, become engaged, get married and go to our graves with the nagging comments of countless women ringing in our ears

To fight against this, I have formed an organization for men's rights called Suffergents. It is our aim to see that men are given their birthright — equality with women

We feel we had the right to be taken out on a date; to be wined and dined without spending a cent and then be driven home by a fawning date who is grateful that we allowed her to blow a whole week's salary on us

We would like the privilege of taking a couple of days off work each month without having to explain why to our boss. He'll just have to take our word for it that it was that time of the month and we just couldn't show up

We want to be afforded the right to expect a woman to stop her car on the highway and help us change a flat tire so that we won't get our pretty little hands dirty

We would like to give up our places in line to women during wartime when the draft board has sent us a letter telling us to report for a medical.

We're going to do all in our power to change the code of the sea so that at the first sign of trouble the captain will shout into his megaphone: "Men and children first."

We feel we have every bit as much right to win an argument when all else has failed by bursting into tears and bawling that our better half just doesn't love us anymore

After a hot day at the office when our feet are killing us and we wonder if we're going to be able to make it home, we would like to see a woman get up and offer us her seat on the bus.

We think we deserve equal rights in being able to feign shock when women come out with a few salty expressions and slap their faces for being unladylike

Just once, I'd like to hear the boss say: "Just a minute, Douglas. That carton is too heavy for you to lift. Let's let Miss Manly here handle it."

We feel we have earned the right to sit at home during the day watching television while all the electronic gadgets do the housework

We want the right to faint at the sight of blood or in other emergencies rather than having to be the ones who are expected to take charge.

And we figure we have as much right as anyone to have the entire board of directors rise to their feet when we enter the room.

We feel we have been under the yoke of oppression for long enough and we intend to fight with all the weapons we have at hand to achieve our goals.

Next Monday we're having an athletic supporter-burning ceremony at City Hall. On Wednesday, we are going to refuse to take out the garbage. On Friday, we are going to refuse to help with the dishes.

Anyone interested in joining our organization can get in touch with me by telephoning 576-8481 any evening. But if a woman answers, for heaven's sake, hang up and call back later

"Welfare trip" makes it difficult for deserving needy

Sir:

I find it rather difficult to see the significance of the article which appears on the front page of This Week — September 2. It can hardly be classified as 'news' because daily we read of cases of fraud in every newspaper.

Surely there is no need to glorify the practice of deception such as your article did. There was nothing commendable in the conduct of the two young men. Such actions make it rather difficult for deserving individuals to receive needful assistance.

Having ministered for more than 24 years in cities — Hamilton, Ottawa, and now Oshawa, I have had many requests for assistance (as have other ministers). Frequently, after having given assistance, I have discovered that I was 'taken in'. Such experiences have a tendency to make you want to turn down every appeal.

Please do not make the work of welfare agencies, churches etc more difficult in their desire to help deserving people by repeating more articles of a similar nature.

Owning my own home, as I do, I'm one of those taxpayers who was 'taken for a ride' by two persons, who by the practice of deceit, or to use their own words —LYING, — saw Canada at the expense of more deserving people.

Rev. E. K. Smith

ful words? Wasn't it written in the Bible to LOVE THY ENEMY? DISGUSTED may not have been an enemy to Lu (who previously wrote) or N.A.R.K. or Mr. Hamilton; but do you notice their backs arching when DISGUSTED's views were published. PEACE.

Well, I suppose laying around in the park all day would be very quiet and peaceful; but let's keep in mind, the name of this place — MEMORIAL Park, in memoriam of servicemen and honest soldiers! These men really knew what WAR and PEACE were all about; that's certainly more than I can say for you, hair kids!

That's Simcoe Hall

Club, a Senior Citizens' group who gather at Simcoe Hall every Thursday afternoon and evening to enjoy the sociability of working together. They turn out knitted baby outfits and complete layettes. They also make diapers for the Children's Aid Society using flannelette supplied by the C.A.S. The Club itself is 17 years old but one of its members is 94!

Then there are Mr. and Mrs. Claus, and who says there's nothing in a name? Although the given name is Vern, not Santa, the couple spend countless hours looking after the repairing of toys and dolls for children at Christmas time. Last year 100 families had a happier Christmas because of the beautifully restored toys.

New articles are often donated by individuals or groups and last year Simcoe Hall had 40 brand new gifts to hand out. Mrs. Doris Nash, a welfare worker who has been with Simcoe Hall in various capacities for 15 years recalls how being able to come up with Christmas gifts quickly may have averted a family tragedy. A patient home from a mental hospital for the holiday became distraught when he found his wife hadn't been able to buy gifts for the children. As the man became more violent his wife placed a call to Simcoe Hall and within the hour new and appropriate gifts were delivered and all was well. Mrs. Nash also takes on the annual job of co-ordinating food hampers for families referred by district health nurses and social workers and keeps a check list to ensure that nobody is forgotten.

Meal tickets

Also in '69, 121 meal tickets were issued to the police station for the use of needy transients.

The pattern seems to be changing says Mr. Fuller. Often they are asked for help by people not on welfare, people who have run into difficulties because of the squeeze between low income and high cost of living. Sometimes these even pay back the money when they can . . . a rather unusual happening.

Supplying the material needs of the community is important, but the League has recognized from the beginning that the total person must be served. That's why they supply programs for members of the community from three and four up to 94, gearing activities to suit the demand. There are three professional program people on staff, but they bend over backwards to keep events as free and unstructured as may be. That's why the gym which is booked solidly from noon till midnight and often used unofficially from 9 a.m. on sees fashion shows, rummage sales, Senior Citizens' meetings and young people's dances as well as the basketball, volleyball, and floor hockey usually associated with gymnasiums.

Even judo has been added to the program. Cedric Orchard co-ordinates all this activity, working about 70 hours a week instead of the forty he's paid for. Volunteer workers game 1309 hours to settlement house activities last year.

Drugs discussion

The drug problem is bound to arise in almost any area where youth are involved and in the past year a speaker from the Drug Addiction Foundation came to talk with a group. At first the young people were wary but the expertise of the speaker soon won them over and Mr. Fuller recalls the experience as a great success.

If flexibility is required in the welfare department it's even more necessary in programming. "If a boy wants to talk about something, and you say 'come back tomorrow', you've lost him", says Mr. Fuller. Boys and girls are encouraged to come to staff members for advice and help but this is never urged on them. For those who seek it out, personal guidance and counselling in groups is always available. The help may take the form of making an appearance in family or juvenile court, but the kids always know whose side the Simcoe Hall people are on. "They have to trust us, if we're to help", says Mr. Fuller, "and I think they do. They keep coming back, and they're not afraid to discuss their problems with us". He added that the boys and girls are proud of the house and gym and would be very hard on one of their number who damaged the property.

Outdoor fun

Sometimes the unstructured activity leads to developments nobody anticipated. At the request of Mr. John Liptay, principal of Holy Cross School next door; several of his students came over voluntarily for conversation and counselling. Later, hearing that Simcoe Hall needed a place to hold a day camp for older youth, Mr. Liptay offered some property he owns in Hampton. The only problem was transportation. The young people solved this themselves by volunteering to pay for buses from money made at their twice-monthly dances. So a group of boys and girls, about 20 each day travelled the country for six weeks of supervised sport and outdoor activity.

Younger children aged four to 12 come to the Settlement House each day for seven weeks in the summer, from 9 to 11.30 a.m. and 1.30 to 4.00 p.m. About 100 each day enjoy the swings and slides and planned activities, all well supervised by volunteers.

During the school year there's a nursery school for four year olds with room for 30, though the League tries to keep space available for referrals from public health workers and social workers. The school is open two and a half hours each morning five days a week with a licensed nursery school teacher and an assistant. Fees are very low and in some cases may be waived entirely. In the same spirit, piano lessons are offered on Saturday morning taught by high school students at a very modest fee.

Appeal money

For the most part activities at Simcoe Hall are completely free and the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal is its chief source of funds.

Harold Fuller who has been at Simcoe Hall since March 1970 after wide experience with YMCA's and the West Scarboro Boys' Club remarks that he is still amazed at how far the League can stretch a dollar. When necessary renovating is done things like wall panelling and carpeting are obtained at almost cost, and every dollar is made to do the work of two or three.

Of the young people he deals with, Mr. Fuller smiles: "It's a challenge for change. . .planned, orderly change based on the changing needs of young people". He's optimistic about them. "They're so bright, sometimes it's hard even to keep up with them. There's need for constant upgrading of our staff if we're to do any good". He points out that children entering kindergarten this year will finish schools and go into jobs that haven't even been thought of yet.

"How do you train them for work that doesn't even exist today?"

It's a challenge, but if anyone can find an answer it will doubtless be the involved and dedicated workers at Simcoe Hall Settlement House.

MARRIAGE

Mr. and Mrs. James Arthur Henry Hobbs wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Christine Pearl to Edwin Howard King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard King, all of Oshawa. The wedding is planned for St. George's Anglican Church at 3 p.m. September 26.

College saves taxpayer thousands by using new approach

Durham College is saving the taxpayer thousands of dollars a year and itself a number of headaches by taking a different approach to several aspects of its operation.

Caretaking, building and ground maintenance, security and cafeteria services are contracted out rather than the college hiring a full-time staff to do the work.

Reg Smith, college secretary-treasurer and Keith Fletcher, manager of plant, stated in a recent interview that this procedure cuts costs by more than 50 percent.

"Particularly in the field of maintenance, we could never begin to hire the number of people required to look after all the facilities," said Smith. "Nor could we afford to invest the thousands and thousands of dollars in basic equipment."

Under the contracting system, the workers are on the job for only the number of hours the work requires. With its own staff, Durham would have to pay wages 12 months of the year, even in slack periods.

Also, where Durham would have expensive equipment sitting around when not needed, the contractor can use it on other jobs.

No overtime

"With a contractor, we can have the staff scheduled to do work when it's required and when it's most advantageous," said Smith. "We have no worries about overtime and we get the best men in the business.

"If we don't feel the workers are adequate, we merely have to tell the contractor and he has to do something about it."

The Durham spokesman said the contract plan also guarantees the most modern methods and equipment at a low price.

"It's up to the contractor to keep abreast of changes in his field so that he can remain competitive when we tender for services."

"And if we had our own staff, we'd have to be sending them away, sometimes every couple of months, to keep abreast of changes in the field," added Fletcher.

Money is saved here as well as in not having to purchase new equipment to replace that which is obsolete.

Hire outside

The men added that where Durham would have to hire one man to look after the maintenance of gas heating equipment, another to maintain electrical equipment and another for air conditioning, these men can be hired from outside when the need arises.

"We tender for snow plowing and grounds maintenance every year," said Fletcher. "We get as many as a dozen bids and we can pick the lowest. With carpentry work and the like, we give business to local firms as the need arises."

Another advantage is that the contractor can buy materials in volume and get a better price than Durham could on its own. This saving is passed on when the contractor bids the job.

The human relations problems that invariably crop up with one's own staff are also done away with in the contracting system

"We don't have the headache of negotiating with the various unions that would be representing our own employees," said Fletcher. "Not that I have anything against unions, but there are always a number of problems that have to be faced at contract time and we don't have to face them."

"And we can get jobs done with less problems than with your own staff because we don't have to natter across a desk with someone," said Smith. "If the job isn't suitable, we let the contractor know and he has to fix it up."

When Durham opened its doors three years ago, there were 17,500 square feet of building space to be looked after. At present, this stands at 83,000 square feet and in a few months when the new building opens, there will be 250,000 square feet

"The Contract system was economical from day one and continues to be as we get bigger," said Smith. "We fully intend to continue this policy when we move into the new building."

Watch for Open House

Y sports new look

Kimchi the unofficial mascot of the Oshawa YWCA, is a symbol of the new look the Y will be presenting during Open House September 14, 15 and 16

Kimchi is a poodle, the 'with it' pet of the modern generation and has become the favorite of the staff and members of the Y

The poodle is owned by Barbara Copp, the new executive director of the Y. The one-year-old canine gets his name from the national dish of Korea consisting of fermented cabbage and turnips laced with red pepper

Miss Copp acquired a taste for the food while teaching English and Religious Studies at a university in Seoul, capital of South Korea, under the auspices of the United Church of Canada

She went to Korea for three years following undergraduate work at Mount Allison University in New Brunswick and the acquisition of her bachelor of religious education degree from the University of Toronto

Miss Copp returned to North America in 1967 for a further year of studies in Rochester, New York She joined the Y two years ago and this June took over from Miss Ruth Higgins who retired after 17 years

One of the new programs being undertaken by the Y this year is a travel club where members will meet once a month to talk about travelling and to hear addresses by professionals in the field.

"Hopefully, there will be overseas trips to go along with our day-long outings and those of a few days," said Miss Copp recently. "Registration is $3 for Y members."

The staff will be signing up members for the travel club at the Open House. At that time, there will be displays of all the various aspects of the Y's activities plus a montage of photographs commemorating the Centennial of the YWCA in Canada and the 25th anniversary of the Oshawa YWCA

There will be a sale of buttons, decals, matches and slices from a gigantic birthday cake. Proceeds will go into the centennial fund for world service in 52 countries

Other activities to be launched this fall include a bowling league for women in the afternoons, a slimnastics program, a craft course, reupholstering, a conditioning course for skiers and assistance in the Cardiac Rehabilitation program

In all, there are about 1200 members in the Oshawa Y, 300 of whom are men. There are also 180 youth members and another 100 young people who take part in the Y's drop-in program but are not members.

The focus of late has been on youth through the drop-in project and other activities. The young people can drop into the Y at noon hour and in the evenings when they can dance, play cards or engage in pingpong and basketball games.

"Our drop-in program is not structured; we let them do what they want," said Miss Copp "We have put a lot of emphasis and money on this. There is no revenue from it

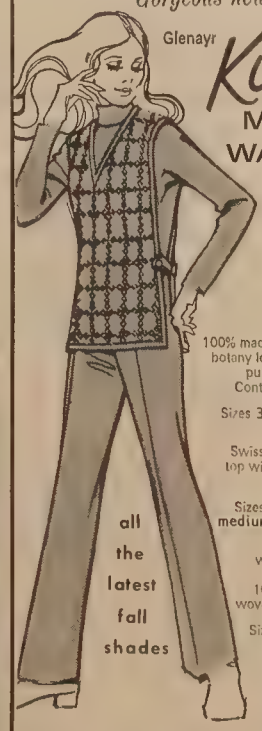
"Our philosophy is to try to serve the youth of the community in a constructive way. I think our image in the community is changing. Three years ago, the youth of the community weren't in the Y

Miss Copp said the focus is on service programs rather than recreational ones. There is an attempt to be of help to the young mother who finds it difficult to pay for courses but can come in to play bridge or to take advantage of the baby-sitting service.

Other new programs to be developed in the future will be the responsibility primarily of Ruth Bennett, a recent graduate of Ryerson with a social service degree.

Ian Gamble, the youth worker in Oshawa with Project Youth, will also spend some of his time at the Y working with local young people. Judy Sommerville, a recent college graduate in social service, will be the new residence supervisor, responsible for facilities for 36 women and girls

Throw away the camera



A disposable camera which will sell for about $1 with film is about to come on the market, reports Canadian Photography magazine.

This will be a "total package" deal which includes a plastic camera, film cartridge and return processing mailer. You buy the film with camera attached, take the pictures, mail the film for processing in an attached envelope, throw the camera away, and wait for the postman to deliver your prints.

College to open doors to 563 students

Some 563 students are expected to turn up for regular classes when Durham College opens its doors next Monday.

After a four-month holiday in its Applied Arts, Business and Technology Divisions, Durham will be operating a full schedule and will be open for about 15 hours per day.

Aside from the regular daytime classes, the college's Retraining Division will be operating until 10:30 each evening. Within a few weeks, there will also be night-time extension courses from the various divisions.

The college operated all summer with the Retraining students using the classrooms in the daytime. They went back on their evening schedule September 8 in preparation for Monday's return to regular classes.

The Retraining Division will eventually take over the present facilities when the other divisions move into the new $4.8-million building under construction west of the present site.

The Applied Arts Division is expected to move into the new building over the Christmas holidays while the other two divisions will be moved in by this time next year.

Several new courses are being offered this year and Herb Kirkconnell, registrar, has indicated that there is still space available in many of the programs.

Interested potential students are asked to call the college at 576-0210 for further information. Twelve new faculty members have been hired to teach the new courses and to replace five members of faculty who left over the summer.

A breakdown of the costs of the new building is as follows: Building and Services — $3,949,000; Equipment — $630,000; and Site Preparation — $175,000.

Some 212 technology students are expected to enrol by next Monday. This compares with 173 last year, 129 in 1968 and 83 in 1967, the first year the college operated.

There should be 245 business students attending the college this year while 222 enrolled in 1969. This figure stood at 199 in 1968 and 122 in 1967.

The Applied Arts division did not get into operation until 1968 when 51 students took courses in its program. In 1969, this figure rose to 86, while this year 106 students are anticipated.

As well as students entering the college for the first time on Monday, Durham expects some 228 registrants in the second or third year levels of the programs offered.

Construction is in full swing for the permanent Durham College campus, Simcoe Street North.

CONCERT

Another Oshawa Recreation Department sponsored concert is scheduled for 8 p.m., Friday at the McLaughlin Public Library Auditorium with Edward Philip Oscapella the lead artist. Oscapella will be joined by Hillar Liitoja and Charlene Biggs, pianists, and there's Bach and Beethoven on the menu. Admission is free.

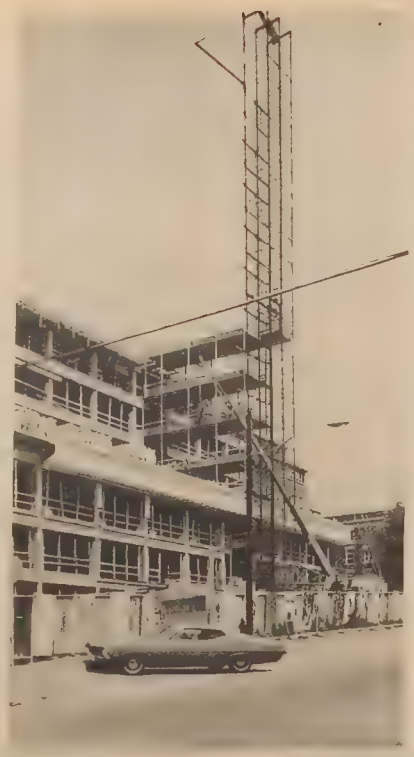
New hospital up to 9th floor



If you're sidewalk-superintending the construction at the Oshawa General, you may not notice much change from day to day. Don't worry, the work is going ahead all right, but the area of the building is so large that the progress upwards may seem slow.

Nevertheless, men are now working on the ninth floor and have all the wood framing up and half the reinforcing steel. On the lower floors the mechanical work is completed up as far as the third floor. This work takes time because of the intricacies of the arrangement of pipes and ducts and connections and so forth that will eventually form the plumbing and heating system of the huge building.

A new boiler has arrived and one of the old ones has been converted from oil to gas and is in operation. Two more will be converted shortly. Two transformers have arrived and been put in place.

For an added thrill in your construction-viewing, take a while to watch the men at work laying bricks at the 125 foot level of the new smokestack.

Occupancy dates for the new building have been decided for several departments. Among the first to move will be the laundry and it should be in its new location by January 4, 1971. The present laundry area will be taken over by the Maintenance Department.

Not just a wing, it's a whole new concept

"Don't think of the hospital construction as just a new wing being added", says David Home, Assistant Administrator of the Oshawa General Hospital. "It's part of a whole new concept of delivering medical and nursing care to our patients".

While much time has been spent planning the physical structure and furnishings and equipment of the new building, so has thought and planning been concentrated on the most important ingredient of all — people. Care for people is, or should be, the prime function of any hospital. The staff of the Oshawa General has been working on a Management Development Program to

Conqueror now taken for granted

The long deadly snout of the tank gun points menacingly at a woman with a small child as she burries down the street. She pays it no attention.

A shabbily-dressed old man with bleary eyes wanders up to the massive machine and looks at it wistfully for a moment. He gives a little half-salute and then shuffles on.

Two small boys come rushing up the street, their fingers blasting imaginary death at each other, and they scramble up the treads of the silent vehicle.

Conqueror, the tank that sits in front of the Ontario Regiment Armouries on Simcoe Street, has become a plaything for Oshawa children and a usually taken for granted landmark for their parents.

But 31 years ago this month, tanks not much different from this one marked the beginning of six years of terror and bloodshed for most of the world.

On September 1, 1939, the people of Poland woke up to the scream of shells from tanks, airplanes and artillery pieces as Hitler's army began the rape of their country.

But it would be unfair to refer to Conqueror as a symbol of tyranny. It is an Allied tank, and besides, it never engaged in battles during the Second World War.

"This is a diesel-powered later model of the M4 Shermans that we used in the Second World War," said Nick Hall, commanding officer of the Ontario Regiment, in a recent interview. "Actually, this tank was used in Korea. There were no Second World War models available when we wanted to put up a monument."

But Conqueror IS a symbol. It was named after a tank knocked out in Italy in the Second World War It is a symbol of courage shown by those Canadians who made use of similar vehicles to defeat the Axis powers.

But more than that, Conqueror is a symbol of Canada's emergence as an independent nation Thirty-one years ago tomorrow, Canada declared war against Germany

The significance of this is that Great Britain had already done so days beforehand. In the First World War, when Great Britain declared war, it was automatically assumed that Canada, her colony, was also at war.

But in 1939, William Lyon Mackenzie King and his cabinet held off until September 10 Thus, Canada was telling the world that she was a nation on her own, ready to make her own decisions and ready to fight for wh/t she herself believed in.

ensure that ideas, practices and systems are based on a unified approach to which all staff feel committed.

Total involvement of staff at all levels is the objective with the focus at all times on providing the necessary care to the patients.

Hospital policies and operational procedures have to be related to staff development to ensure that the hospital's potential for total service will be realized.

Jackasses and council join Jaycees in ball

Just because the summer holidays are up and for most people it's back to normal doesn't mean it's the end of the frivolity for Oshawa City Council.

The city fathers — and one mother, Margaret Shaw — are promising an evening of fun this Saturday when they take on the Oshawa Jaycees in a baseball game at Alexandra Park.

The game starts at 7.30 and Mayor Bruce Mackey - we're not sure whether he's the pitcher or what - says he expects his team to score a resounding victory over the Jaycees. Mackey's team is adding additional strength from the rank and file at city hall. The team line-up at press time was as follows: The mayor, Controller Shaw, Controller McIlveen, Aldermen Humphreys, Pilkey and Potticary, Chief Jenkins of Oshawa Police, Shiel Dhawan, Cec Lundy, Ron Teel, Bill Crompton and Murdoch Robertson, all of the city hall staff. Pat McDaniel is listed as a substitute

And, oh yes, each will be riding a jackass. The game has been billed as "Donkey Baseball."

BACK SEAT DRIVER

A little black box which warns a driver whenever he deviates from his driving norm promises to become an important factor in highway safety, reports Canadian Automotive Trade business publication. The robot gadget beeps a drowsing motorist into wakefulness and flashes an amber caution light when he drives recklessly.

How does it work? The developer of the unit found each driver has a definite pattern of steering wheel reversals as personal as a fingerprint. The reversals slow down when you drowse and speed up considerably when you're tense. The pattern is so distinct, drivers tend to adjust their speeds according to their rate of wheel reversals rather than the other way around.

The robot simply picks up a pattern during the first few minutes of operation, stores it, then measures up the rest of your driving against it.

Restyled Olds announced by GM

The new 1971 Oldsmobiles are most extensively restyled and incorporate more important engineering advancements than any models in the division's modern history, John B. Beltz, general manager, has announced.

He explained that "the sporty appearance of Oldsmobile's Cutlass models has been enhanced, the full-size 88's and 98's are completely new, and the Toronado — which is changed in both styling and concept — becomes a car of unique and unmistakable elegance.

"While retaining all the advantages of front wheel drive," Beltz continued, "the Toronado is also designed to be the most beautiful, the most striking automobile in America. I believe it will have great impact on the luxury, personal car market."

The Toronado wheelbase of 122 inches is three inches longer than previous models. It is a roomier automobile, particularly in front and rear seat shoulder room where measurements are increased over five inches.

Exclusive to the new Toronado are high level auxiliary signal lamps built into the rear of the car to more effectively signal stops and turns to following drivers.

Beltz also revealed that Oldsmobile in 1971 will offer one of the widest selections of station wagons in the industry.

"For the first time since 1964," Beltz added, "Oldsmobile will market a full-size wagon, the Custom Cruiser. With its addition, our fleet of wagons is expanded to five models. They include the Cutlass Cruiser, the highly popular Vista Cruiser, and the new Custom Cruiser. The latter two are available in 2- or 3-seat versions, with the third seat forward facing."

He described the new Custom Cruiser wagon as a beautiful and extremely practical vehicle, having the largest cargo space ever offered in an Oldsmobile wagon. The unique loading area features a power-operated back glass that recedes into the roof, and a retractable tailgate that disappears into the lower body. Wheelbase measures 127 inches.

"The 88's and 98's for 1971 are built with new bodies on a new chassis," Beltz said. "Their sleek new shape is accented by increased curve of the body side surface. Flush mounted side glass further contributes to this sleek appearance. Front pillars are slimmer, offering less obstruction for better visibility."

Beltz also said that the new 88 and 98 bodies include a very important advancement in instrument panel design

Beltz told of a new steering wheel design for the 88's and 98's in which the entire center pad area becomes the horn button.

Oldsmobile's 1971 line-up of full-size cars and intermediate models have been smartly redesigned. The 'Toronado', 98, and Delta series are completely new in appearance and the intermediate models bearing nameplates F-85, Cutlass, Cutlass 'S', Cutlass Supreme and 4-4-2 have been restyled to enhance their sporty appearance. Shown here is the 1971 Oldsmobile Toronado.

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

One year ago sports fans in Oshawa watched an almost annual event called the Minto Cup The Lacrosse Team under the leadership of that winningest coach Jim Bishop seemed to have a carte blanche when it came to becoming the Canadian Junior Lacrosse champions. It became almost a tradition to see the Green Gaels bring the cup back to Oshawa and faint rumblings were heard to the effect that for once they would like to see some challenger come along who would put some excitement into the game

This year the challengers rolled in by the score and lacrosse became an exciting sport, if for no other reason that that the final outcome of each game was in doubt

So it was quite a surprise when a call came through from the esteemed director of the sports David-laughing boy-Stewart saying that we had just got the go-ahead to the Minto Cup series and the first game was in 24 hours

While I was overjoyed at the prospects of working the long weekend, a thought came to light. It was the long weekend and no one was around to give me a hand. About 20 telephone calls later a mobile van was promised to motor down and be at the Port Credit arena two hours before the game

One more frantic call and a part time cameraman was lined up along with the time and it was set

Or at least, I thought it was set, until the van became lost somewhere in the wilds of southern Ontario and the power supply at the arena seemed to disappear into the crowd

15 Minutes after the start of the game, the van limped in with no oil in the engine and water pouring from the rad

The rest was easy, except Port Credit must have a shortage of light bulbs. It was so dark in the arena, I was tempted to ask for a flashlight to see the equipment

In spite of the many problems the complete series of the Minto cup will be shown with the first game going on Tuesday, and follow-up games Wednesday, and Thursday

The John Howard Society

Its 'angle' is making a new man of convict

The man on the other side of the desk was young, belligerent and fresh out of Kingston Penitentiary.

"What's your angle in this?" he asked the John Howard Society member "One thing they told us at K.P. everyone's got an angle, so what's yours?"

It took some time to persuade the youth that the John Howard Society in Oshawa or any other place doesn't have an "angle" except to help men released from prison find their way back into normal society.

The Oshawa Whitby Branch of the John Howard Society consists of 15 volunteer directors. Far from having a paid staff, members dig into their own pockets for incidental expenses such as stamps and stationery. An ex-convict, however, needing money for rent or clothes or train fare can count on help from the slim budget of the local society.

Nowhere to go

Men who have been in prison several years will have a small amount of money saved from their tiny (25 to 30 cents per day) wages. Others have nothing, and nowhere to turn except to the John Howard Society.

Their names are sent by the prison that releases them to the parent Society in Toronto which forwards them to the branch in the best position to help. No man in need of help is ever rejected or refused, no matter what his race, colour, religion or crime. John Howard members take a "there but for the grace of God go I" attitude.

The group of 15 that meets once a month includes lawyers, ministers, a priest and several businessmen. At the meetings when names of prisoners soon to be released are brought forward members volunteer to take on the newcomers. They will talk with him, advise him, help him to find a job and a place to live and gradually readjust to the world.

Because of the strict routine and regimentation in prison, men coming out at first are very dependent, scarcely able to think or make decisions for themselves. John Howard members are taught to lend a hand when needed to encourage the men to stand on their own feet as quickly as they can.

Getting a job is important because a job and money spell self-respect. If an ex-prisoner has an alcoholic problem, he may be encouraged to join Alcoholics Anonymous.

If he needs clothing to apply for a job a society member will take him to a local store and buy them for him, and explain to his prospective employer that he is hiring a man who has been in prison. Some firms are understanding about this, others flatly refuse to take a man with a record. The Oshawa - Whitby branch is fortunate in having a director who works with Manpower who can be of help in finding employment.

Standing rule

A standing rule is that members do not themselves hire the men they are helping. The result would be a too-personal involvement. "How could one of us fire a man if he didn't work out?" asks one director. "It would reflect badly on the John Howard Society."

Members are well aware that some of the men they try to help are quite capable of trying to outwit their benefactors. In the society's early days it was discovered at a monthly meeting that one man had approached three of the directors with a hard luck story and got $25 from each one of them! Now all requests for money come to the treasurer and there is no duplication.

Eight years

The local branch of the society was established about eight years ago through the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McNeill who in their work at Simcoe Hall saw the need for assistance to released prisoners. Now somewhere between 50 and 75 men each year receive help. . .anything from trainfare to a new job to payment of a few days' room rent.

Sometimes a man from another area will ask to come to Oshawa thinking to find work in industry. If jobs are scarce he's

Legionaires win Wade Trophy

By Jim Bishop

Labour Day was the highlight of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association year. The Oshawa Legionaires topped off the season with a hard-fought 7 to 6 win over Port Hope Fidelity Flyers to take the series three games to one

The winning pitcher was Gary Carroll, who relieved starter Dave Whitely. The loser for Port Hope was reliefer Keith Jay

Oshawa scored two runs in the first inning, added two more in the third on Butch Dowe's towering home run over the left field fence. They added one more in the fifth, before Port Hope came alive in the seventh to go ahead 6-5

In the top of the eighth, Bob Reid and Ted Whitely scored to put the locals in front to stay

This win capped a perfect week for Oshawa as they got their second win over Port Hope Wednesday and eliminated Burlington Cadinals, the previous Sunday from the All-Ontario Championship.

Oshawa now goes against the winner of the series between Welland and Sarnia and the team hopes to bring Sarnia only the third OBA crown in 15 years

The Legionaires were presented with the Arnold Wade Trophy, emblematic of EOBA championships. Oshawa is the first winner of this trophy which was donated by the league in memory of one of the hardest working men in baseball in this area. The award was made jointly by Mr. Wade's widow and his son Grant.

encouraged to try elsewhere rather than have to apply for welfare. It's better for his own morale and for the local welfare agencies.

Often though, a man who finds work and new friends settles into a productive life and continues to keep in touch with the director who helped him. One director himself has been in contact with a man for more than six years. Sometimes advice or just conversation with a person who knows his history is a parolee's deepest need. For this reason, a society member going on vacation will often ask another member to look after his charge while he's gone should an emergency arise.

Appeal money

The United Appeal is almost the sole source of support for the John Howard Society. A percentage of the money received from the appeal is sent to Toronto to the national society and under the "fair share" system the amount needed for operating expenses is sent back. . .often much more than was contributed.

And, in spite of what they say in Kingston Pen, there's no angle. Just a wish to help another human being in trouble.

Three cheers for the gals of Glen Stewart Park

Sir,

Generally speaking I have found your paper to be fairly accurate in reporting, but the exception is in your paper dated Sept. 2/70

Under the heading, "Pink Shower curtains for the Pro dressing room," was one of the most one-sided stories I have ever heard

As a member of the Glen Stewart Park Neighbourhood Association, I feel that Mr. Douglas should be transferred over to Classified Ads as he apparently does not think enough of reporting to get all the facts before he writes his column

The only mention of our team was that one girl booted the ball, that is, besides being trounced

For Mr. Douglas' information, here are some facts of our team and the tournament under discussion

1. The Glen Stewart Girls had played two games before they met Woodview and had won them by scores of 37-8 and 10-4 while Woodview had only played one game.
2. Our girls won the Eastern Division "D" series held at Alexander Park a month ago but were defeated by Scarboro's Bridlewood Girls by one run in the Ontario finals.
3. The Glen Stewart Girls have played all year without publicity, that is without headlines proclaiming (Trouncing, smashing etc) with scores in their favour of 37-14, 37-8, 25-12, 18-6, 20-12 and 17-11 just to mention a few.

Not only are the majority of girls in the minor league polite and courteous but many of them are better ball players than boys of comparable age.

I have seen a girl pitching the last inning of a game with a nose bleed, refusing to give up the game (score 15-15) and her team went on to win.

The one thing, I do not wish to do is to take any credit away from the Woodview girls, Mr. Smith or Mr. Whiting. They are, as reported, one of the most courteous and polite teams we have played.

Since your story was printed we have met Woodview in the playoffs and they have defeated us to move up to the finals.

Just remember, next time, you need two teams to make up a game.

While most of Oshawa sleeps, a Beaver is busy building this huge dam under an Oshawa bridge, and before long we may expect a certain stretch of road near the Beaver's creek to be flooded. The man who tipped off This Week's photographer insisted we do not reveal the location of the dam for fear of vandalism. On the other hand, public works crews will probably find it soon. One expert has it that the only way to destroy a Beaver dam effectively is by dynamiting

Board of Education, employees, to arbitration

Artist at work. Here's a scene last week at the Robert McLaughlin Art Gallery where art students are having a field day practicing.

The major issues in dispute between The Ontario County Board of Education and its office employees are severance pay, wages and fringe benefit premium payments

In the area of severance pay, the Board currently pays a lump sum to employees, when they retire, who have sick leave credits accumulated to the date of retirement. The Union is requesting that anyone leaving employment for any reason, including change of employment, after 10 years' service receive this same sick payment allowance in cash

Because the Board set up a sick pay plan to protect the employees earnings when they were, in fact, ill, the Board does not feel it should, in any case, be used as a bonus system for those fortunate enough to have enjoyed good health throughout their employment. In the area of welfare benefits, the Board has proposed to the Union the sharing of costs at 50% which is the same arrangement with all teachers employed in the County. The Union has stated it requires 2/3's of the premium cost to be paid by the Board

Finally, the Union has asked for revisions in the current wage scale and adjustments to individual job rates which could cost approximately 6% immediately

The Board has agreed to certain of these changes in job rates but cannot agree to the major changes in the schedule which are nothing more than a general wage increase in another form In addition to the 6% increase required to implement the Union's wage scale, the Union has asked for an across-the-board increase of 10% in the first year, and 10% in the second year of a two-year agreement.

The Board has offered to the Union a 7% increase in the first year and a 6½% increase in the second year. In addition to the wage offer, the Board has agreed to eliminate the 10% wage differential by the end of the first year of the contract so that all employees in the County would be brought up to the same wage levels

On Thursday, September 3, the Department of Labour notified both parties that a Mediator has been appointed and that a meeting with both parties has been called for Thursday, September 10 (tomorrow)

Before adjourning the last meeting, the Union promised the Board's representatives that they would officially inform the Board of the date of any strike action.

the $8.89 brake reline is here!

Brakes seldom wear out evenly. When the front brakes are worn, there's usually plenty of safe mileage on the rear. That's why we think our 8.99 brake reline is big news. That's all it cost to reline the front, or rear set (drum type). You save, and you're safe.

But maybe you think it's a little risky trusting a "Discount Store" when it comes to car repairs. Maybe you think a high price means a better job. If you do, then maybe you're paying too much for car service.

We specialize in "Most Needed" car services. Our men are experts and we use only name brand parts. We can save you money, safely. Try us. We're open every night until 10.00 p.m. — and you don't need an appointment.

HIGH PRICE LOW SKIRT

Out of all the confusion surrounding minis, maxis and midis, Style, the business publication for women's and children's wear, says there is an almost direct correlation between the price range of a store and how many longer garments it has purchased. Figure given to Style by Toronto and Montreal stores prove that the higher the generl price range of the store, the more "below the knee" outfits are to be found.

Several chic metropolitan stores' stock contains up to 90 per cent longer garments, while mass merchandisers are sticking to short dresses and skirts almost exclusively.

NATURAL GAS CARS

Tests are being carried out in Canada and the U. S. on the use of compressed natural gas as an automotive fuel, report Oilweek magazine. Dual fuel systems are being installed in various car and truck units so that engines can be switched at any time from gasoline to compressed natural gas. Initial tests carried out by one research project indicated exhaust pollutants were cut by 90 per cent using natural gas, while spark plugs and engine life were more than doubled. Cost was about 40 per cent less per mile than with gasoline. Problems arising from the system at present are that most of the trunk space is filled with compressed gas tank and refilling stations are few and far between.

BOOZER CRUISERS CAUSE TROUBLE

The social drinker, says Ed Belitzky, editor of Canadian Automotive Trade, isn't the one who causes problems on the highways. "It's the hardcore, dedicated drunk," he says. CAT recently reported a study of 1,000 drunken driving convictions which showed that 25 per cent had a previous criminal record, 37.5 per cent had a record of previous arrests for public drunkenness, and 25 per cent were driving while their licence was suspended or who didn't even have a licence.

Handyman's corner

It's almost inevitable that your car is going to get a few "scrapes" when it is constantly threatened with scratches from passing bumpers, nicks from flying gravel, or gouges from another car door in a crowded parking lot?

With some quick attention, your car's painted finish can be easily repaired, preventing corrosion and devaluation of this costly investment.

A car's metal is safe as long as it is protected by one of today's excellent automotive finishes. Once bare metal is exposed, rust begains almost immediately. If allowed to continue, it spreads under the painted areas around the scratch causing the paint to flake away. More metal is then exposed, and the corrosion cycle continues.

Touch-up painting is an easy, effective way to stop corrosion, and special paint to match the color and chemical formula of your car's present finish is available from your car dealer or automotive shop.

Proper preparation is important. New paint adheres much better to metal or old paint if the surface is lightly sanded. Make sure rough edges around nicks are sanded smooth and all loose paint is removed.

Remember, new paint will not adhere to a dirty or greasy surface, so wash thoroughly and use the proper cleaning agents to remove road tar, grease or oil. Before painting, it is wise to put your car in a garage or protected place where there is very little dust. Dust can ruin new paint.

Bare metal should be given a light coat of metal primer before you apply the top coat. Check with your dealer for the correct primer to use. Let the primer dry overnight, and sand lightly before you apply the top coat.

Touch-up paint with a small brush applicator should be used for small nicks and scratches. spray cans of touch-up paint are also available for larger damaged areas. Don't try to paint a large area such as a deck or door. This type of work requires the skill of a professional car painer. When using a spray applicator, it is easy to spray too much or cover a larger area than you intended to cover, so practice ahead of time. Mask areas you do not want to paint, with newspapers and masking tape.

When applying top coat enamel, remember that several thin coats are better than one heavy coat. Sand lightly between each coat. The paint should be completely dry before sanding and recoating. After the enamel has dried for several days, it can be polished with a buffing compound to make it blend with the original finish.

By taking over easy and inexpensive touch-up painting on your car, you can save yourself many repair bills and own a car you're proud to drive!

Green peppers glorify burgers

In the mood for a no-fuss menu? Deliciously handsome hamburgers are yours for the making and they never had it so good! Plump, shiny-fresh green peppers jazz up one of your top favorites and you come through as the burger chef of distinction. Dress the hamburger up with a topping of cheese, crisp pepper rings, tomato slices. Crown each with a stuffed olive!

Spoon homemade potato salad generously into lettuce cups to complete the supper plate. Beverage? What more refreshing choice than icy cold lemonade?

1 pound ground beef chuck
1/4 cup finely chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon minced fresh onion
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chili powder (optional)

Lightly blend together all ingredients. Shape into 4 patties. Broil in preheated broiler about 3 inches from heat source 10 minutes, turning once, for medium doneness. Serve on buns

Some school dropouts are brightest students

High school dropouts are not unmotivated young people nor do they necessarily lack the intelligence to finish Grade 12 or 13, contrary to much public opinion.

This is a conclusion of a recently completed study by the Calgary Family Service Bureau, reported in School Progress magazine. Bert Marcuse, executive director of the bureau, launched the survey because he became concerned about the stereotyped opinions of students who drop out, which label them as "no good, unmotivated people."

His interviews disclosed that two-thirds of the dropouts were taking other courses or special training elsewhere. Boredom causes many students to quit school, he found. Another cause is the fact that many older students who have left school and come back to try again, just can't face it — "they feel left out, isolated and uncomfortable," says Marcuse.

Poverty is also blamed for poor academic performance, he points out, but adds: "It is not true that children from deprived areas are not motivated. They may have different values, but they are not unaware of the value of education. They just don't have the expectation of being able to go to university."

University is still not available to most lower income students, even less so in Canada than the U.S., says Marcuse. "But economically deprived children often know that if they finish Grade 11 or 12, they will have to contribute to their family's upkeep, or their own," he adds.

Hey Kids!!

THE STRIKE

COLOR IT GRAY

Color the General Motors strike gray for apathetic.

A This Week survey yesterday morning found that contrary to the usual reaction of panic and gloom normally felt by those affected by a major work stoppage, no one seems to be in that much of a flap in Oshawa over the current situation.

A GM spokesman when contacted, replied "What more can we say, but here we are?" He added that he was under the impression negotiations would be going on during the day but had just heard on the radio that nothing would get going until today.

The pickets at GM's south plant were being anything but militant yesterday morning as they joked with office workers who were allowed to cross picketlines to report for work.

One of the strikers, when asked how the strike would affect him financially, shrugged his shoulders and said he had salted away a fair amount of savings and wasn't really worried.

"It will mean that I might not get my new snowmobile this winter, but that can wait," he said

The GM spokesman expresssed surprise at the lack of picket signs Tuesday morning. "I thought they'd have them already to go. They seem pretty disorganized about it all "

One Oshawa merchant said that while a long drawn out strike would hurt everyone, the city is big enough now that the drastic strike effects of a few years ago have been watered down. "We have people coming in from Cobourg, Sunderland, Bay Ridges and other

Get Involved

GET INVOLVED is the urgent message this week of the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal, launched officially Monday night in a rally at Oshawa Civic Square.

With buttons and pins and thousands of men, women and teenagers and children involved, campaign organizers hope to make this the first ever total involvement campaign in Oshawa and Whitby.

Campaign Chairman Dick McLaughlin and President Terry Kelly of the United Appeal urge all This Week readers to get involved. They call it "becoming a 100 percenter."

The campaign objective is $456,589. And every week for the duration of the campaign there will be a progress report in This Week. Thermometers are being erected in both communities to keep everyone posted on the results todate.

"Theme of the campaign is total involvement", said Mr. Kelly. "We hope everyone in both communities will become involved in the campaign, either through volunteer canvassing or through financial support, no matter how small."

"Get involved" posters and stickers will be distributed throughout the two communities to encourage citizens support of the campaign.

Much of the preliminary work in the campaign has been under way for some time. The canvass of business organizations has been nearly completed and the payroll canvass got under way last week.

In keeping with the total involvement theme, 2,400 canvassers will be making a house to house canvass for the first time. Chairman is Mrs. Phyllis Clarke, wife of Lloyd Clarke, editor of "Oshaworker", the United Auto Workers publication.

A youth committee has been established of students from a number of high schools in Oshawa and Whitby. They will announce their campaign plans in the near future.

A spread inside this week's This Week tells the campaign story.

More reflections on the weekend's antique car rally are on page 3.

DOCTORATES

A former Oshawa man and his wife have received their doctorates from the University of Montana. Jack McClarty and his wife Wilma of Keene, Texas, received their degrees in music and English respectively Dr. McClarty lived in Oshawa in 1964 and 1965 as band director of the Kingsway College Band.

DELEGATES

Oshawa alderman Ruth Bestwich and John Goodwin, deputy reeve of Whitby, are representing the Central Lake Ontario Conservation Authority today at the 12th Biennial Conference of Ontario Conservation Authorities in Sudbury. A panel discussion on pollution control is being moderated by Judge D.B. Dodds of Oshawa, chairman of the CLOCA.

COURSES PAY

Young drivers who have taken driver training courses will have their insurance rated reduced it was announced recently by the Canadian Underwriters' Association A 16-year-old boy now purchasing auto insurance in Oshawa would pay $382 but after October 1, he would pay $325 if he has taken driver training.

AWARD

Beverly Boys, Oshawa's 20-year-old diving champion has been awarded a $2,000 grant by the federal government to assist her education. She is one of 37 athletes the government feels should be aided in raising funds for education since they spend so much of their time in training and competitions and might have difficulty raising the necessary funds.

RATE FIGHT

The Ontario Municipal Association and the Ontario Association of Mayors and Reeves plans to ask Oshawa's board of control this week for some $425 to help fight a proposed rate increase by Bell Canada. The two associations hope to raise $12,000 in their fight to stop a raise in telephone rates.

SUDBURY AID

The Oshawa board of control has decided the provincial and federal governments should be asked to provide the necessary relief funds for Sudbury's recent storm disaster. The board made this motion following a decision not to provide funds from Oshawa coffers.

communities not affected by the strike. We even have professional people from Scarborough who prefer the personal service of a smaller centre like Oshawa."

The merchant added that during a strike people generally are more thrifty and buy quality clothing that will last for a long time.

"I had one of the strikers in here this morning, buying a $95 sports jacket."

Optimistic

Mayor Bruce Mackey expressed guarded optimism about the outcome of the present labor difficulties affecting GM's 11,000 hourly rated and 3,000 salaried employees.

"I believe that the local labor leaders as well as the local executive members of General Motors have always acted responsibly in the past, so I am sure that good sense will prevail, and things will return to normal very shortly," he said.

"Everybody in Oshawa suffers when there is a prolonged strike, so I sincerely hope that an early settlement can be arrived at that will be considered just and honorable by both management and labor."

Regional government issue

Words put in his mouth, consultant

The central figure in the current stormy issue over regional government in Oshawa has taken issue with The Oshawa Times for its reporting of an interview with him

Jim Paxton, a Durham College teacher and a consultant to the city this summer on regional government, told This Week that the Times articles had expanded on implications to put words in his mouth

"I'm very disappointed in the way they handled their interview with me," he said. "One thing they neglected to mention, for instance, is that I was speaking as a private citizen, not as a consultant to the city. My employment with the city ended on September 1."

Mr. Paxton's views as a private citizen are that regional government is an attempted remedy by Queen's Park of two of its ills — Metro Toronto Sprawl and the erosion of Conservative strength in the province

He said the implementation of regional government in the province would effectively box in Metro Toronto and check metro sprawl, which he termed a physical 'no-no'.

"Regional studies were launched partly out of a fear by provincial authorities of the power that Metropolitan Toronto was acquiring and the threat Metro posed politically," he said. "If it got much bigger, it could have equalled the power of the provincial government."

Thus, he said, Queen's Park decided to create regional governments to control Metro politically by containing it and to aid the rural areas in their development.

"The continued growth of Metro, if it had been allowed to expand and gobble up other, smaller municipalities, would have likely meant more power for the NDP and Liberal voters of Metro and would have meant a serious threat to — maybe even the end of — the Conservative Party as the provincial government."

Mr. Paxton said he is not against Queen's Park, the Conservative Party or regional government. The reason he decided to speak out on the

by peter brouwer

The first part of this column will have to go the question and answer route. I have always wanted to write a Dear Doris or Dear Boris or Ann or Herbie Landers or something column, but my problem has been so far that I can find the questions but not the answers. Not in a million years, and certainly not in the fine style of these pastmasters at the advice column.

Anyway, here is this question that came in.

Dear Peter:

Last Saturday evening, and after a constant series of telephone calls, I finally gave in to public pressure to appear at Alexandra Park, with a whole lot of grown men, including the mayor of our city, there to partake in a game of baseball. Needless to say certain members of the city hall team didn't get to first base. (Which can probably be attributed to the fact that they failed to hire consultants first, to consult with, after paying a fat fee for something we could have found ourselves anyway in our overstaffed departments.)

Anyway, there I was, putting my best foot forward, and flashing my television smile and my blue eyes at the spectators gathered at Alexandra Park to partake in this event.

The Jaycees — the men who organized this event — were great. These are a fine group of young men. Some of those who turned up from our side were great too.

Now even before the game got underway, it seemed a little strange to me that there would be animals involved in this game called baseball. I have taken part in a number of baseball games, but this was certainly not the way we used to play it.

To make a long story short, Dear Peter, that Jackass, upon which I was enthroned to the delight of some members of the electorate — they could have covered the game on Cable TV — somehow was an uncontrollable device. He was much like expenditures at city hall, and the plans of some for the various extravagant proposals.

Anyway, that Jackass threw me off.

And now my shoulder hurts, and I'm resting in bed.

And I've got to keep my arm in a sling for the next three weeks.

Of course, as a controller, I am used to taking my lumps, but I am also used to getting in my two cents worth. What I object to is that this Jackass wouldn't let me.

M.S.

Now that's what I call a fine letter.

As for the reply:

Dear M.S.

We all love you, really, and that Jackass should forthwith be suspended, and he should be done unto as is done unto overstaffed departments.

Meanwhile, give that shoulder plenty of rest, drink plenty of fluids, and in no time you will feel your old self again. And don't be shy to show up in the midst of you adversaries with your arm in a sling. There are among them some who envy you for it.

Museum to move?

Negotiations are presently underway to relocate the Canadian Automotive Museum Oshawa Chamber of Commerce complex from its present Simcoe Street South site.

This Week learned recently that the Oshawa Chamber is discussing the possibility of setting up operations in conjunction with the new Holiday Inn being built on Bloor Street near Harmony Road

The relocation will depend on the chamber's success in selling its present site worth an estimated one-quarter million dollars. Negotiations are also underway at present in this regard.

Chrome plated beauties return to Motor City

All the glorious chrome and nickel of the 20's and 30's came to Oshawa on the weekend for the first annual antique auto rally of the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce. Fred Twist of Whitby won best-in-class for his 1930 Pierce Arrow and Allan Essery of Oshawa won the same prize with his 1931 Model A Ford. The rally brought participants from an area between London and Trenton, with the Canadian Automotive Museum the focal point. Here are some reflections from the show held at Lakeview Park.

And the strike is still juvenile

These are difficult days for an editor in the City of Oshawa. No, he's not on strike, or facing a strike even, or hanging in there, wondering how it will all end, and when . . .

But he sits there behind his little typewriter and expounds on complicated issues which on the surface appear quite simple, but which to those on the inside appear to be as complicated as a formula used to compute an intricate part of a trip to the moon.

A number of readers have taken the time to come to our little office on Simcoe Street North to tell us that our observations last week about the stupidity and the futility of strikes in general were a way off base. There were even two who telephoned to say they agreed.

Nothing is worse for an editor, or a whole newspaper as a matter of fact, than to be greeted by a deadly cold silence only. So, we're not complaining.

And we do not wish to waste your time and repeat some of the things said in this space last week, except that after what has happened in Oshawa during the past few days we feel even stronger about the subject of strikes and how we MUST find a better way to deal with our disputes between labor and management.

A number of questions arise:

Why are negotiations between both parties started at such a late date; so close to the run-out date of the existing contract. When management of a large industry has plans that involve millions of dollars of investment and additional expense, does it not take due time, so a decision can be reached in an unhurried and reasonable way without anyone being under the gun constantly?

Why then is the complex issue of a new contract for thousands of workers, involving millions of dollars, left to be settled in only a few weeks, or else . . .

Is the union sincere, when it says that a few hundred people just walk off their jobs in the truck plant, in a wildcat strike, unexpectedly and without the union chiefs' stamp of approval. These tactics smack of the thing commonly known as a threat.

And again we get back to this idea of arguing with our neighbor about a tree in our backyard. We don't threaten him either. We go to court, or, at least, we wait until we have somehow tried everything else that is legal and reasonable and that allows us to still be good neighbors, to get our disagreement settled.

Certainly, there are a number of rabble rousers who cannot wait for some "real action." Some tire burnings, a few fistfights and other patriotic union manouvres appear to give some workers the once-every-few-years opportunity to vent their pent up frustrations. Certainly also, these are few. The large majority of the workers are family men, with kids in elementary and high school, and little girls in kindergarten, and wives who work part time in the store or in the hospital or in an office. But they get drawn into the fight of the union fanatic. He who shouts the loudest appears to win, every time. He is heard. And we don't see that in just the union-strike movement. We're up against it everywhere today, this year, last year. It has been coming for some years.

We are sick of this business of the small minority imposing itself on all of us. Youth movements do it, men's movements, women's movements, hippie movements, you name it, there's a pressure group for just the cause.

Yet another observation — the general tone of the union's public statements. Even when we're far removed from negotiation month in Oshawa, there's the UAW newspaper, the Oshaworker, coming out swinging in a way that makes "the company" (whichever company it is) the enemy against whose legions the union man must be constantly on guard, and against whom he must constantly dig a new trench and set up a new secret missile base.

Still another observation that should be made here, since we are on the subject, and since we're speaking out openly and honestly, is that with U.S. controlled unions has come U.S. controlled bargaining.

Where is it decided which auto manufacturer is going to be struck? In the U.S.

Where is it decided even what kind of cars and trucks are going to be made in Oshawa? In the U.S.

Where is the future of thousands of Oshawa men and women decided? In the U.S.

We realize that the auto industry is not unique in this regard. There are strong feelings on this subject and in our country there is shaping up a situation of pro or contra, with the two poles growing farther and farther apart.

What is lacking in all of it is something I heard one very simple but straightforward Oshawa preacher say on Sunday. He talked about our material grabbing race to have things for ourselves. Now you can be a church goer or an atheist or a Jew or a Roman Catholic or a Hindu, who cares what, but life becomes very dull and dreary indeed when all we can really get excited about are our rights to have two cars and a boat and a fancy house, and enough money to go on a fine holiday . . . .

There's a little story Jesus Christ told one day, probably not too far away from where they blew up the jets on the weekend. It was about a rich man who had land which bore good crops. He began to think to himself, "I don't have a place to store all my crops. What can I do?' This is what I will do, he told himself; 'I will tear my barns down and build bigger ones, where I will store the grain and all my other goods. Then I will say to myself: Lucky Man! You have all the good things you need for many years. Take life easy, eat, drink and enjoy yourself!' But God said to him, 'You fool! This very night you will have to give up your life; then who will get all these things you have kept for yourself?'

A little more thought on this subject would really change the whole world, you know! And it could start right here in Oshawa!

Let's get the girls on parking

Every time the issue of parking tickets and parking meters comes to the fore, we hear suggestions of meter maids. Over the past couple of years there has been talk of mini-skirted meter maids in Oshawa. And a private mini-skirted meter maid supplier made a bid for the "service" now supplied by the police. Our police chief is on record as being in favor of handing over the parking meter control to another agency.

It has been suggested that the city's traffic department get involved somehow, so that the handing out of parking tickets remains under the control of the municipality.

Pretty soon we may expect a suggestion for midiskirted meter maids, and this proposal may receive a little more support. However, we guarantee it'll bog down once more. And for many more years we'll see city police officers wasting their valuable time sticking little yellow slips of paper under windshield wipers. And we'll keep getting the citizenry all worked up over it. The two losses incurred are: The citizen's tax money is wasted in that a grown man is paid to do a job that does not command the salary he's receiving, and the police officer in question is losing another battle in his long war to gain the citizen's trust and respect and cooperation.

The men who are now wasting their time patrolling parking meters can be put on a number of duties. Police Chief Jenkins has mentioned some of them in the past. Even if they did nothing else but go around and promote good public relations for The Police their time would be well spent, and the taxpayer's money would be well-spent.

But it's wishful thinking, isn't it?

Cash customer balks at store's attitude

Sir:

Have we come so far that if you do not have a credit-card, you are not an acceptable customer?

Last week we did some shopping in the Oshawa Shopping Centre. On the payment of the merchandise I wrote a cheque and gave the saleslady my social insurance card as identification, which I have done for as long as the store has been there. However, this time the girl replied that this was not enough, I would have to show something with my address on, it seems there had been trouble with too many bad cheques, needless to say my cheque already had the address and the name printed on the front. That wasn't proof enough, and since I do not have a drivers-license, I did not at the time have anything on me with my address.

They decided to accept the cheque this time. What it all narrows down to, from my point of view, is that the store implies, that I could have picked up the cheque and even the social insurance card some place. Suppose I did pick up somebody's wallet, isn't it possible this wallet could have contained a drivers-license too, which I could have presented, what would that have proved?

This is the second time this year, in the same store, that I have felt discriminated because I do not have a credit-card (we do not believe in them except for the car). If you have one, you can get by the cashier in a few minutes, if not, you're lucky if you make it in less than 10, providing there is a signature in sight and no other complications.

I am getting a little bit fed up. How can a credit-card be proof of who you are, couldn't that be in wrong hands? And who would ever know till the right owner get his bill?

Thank you for letting me speak my mind.

Very unsatisfied cash customer

Mrs. L. Andersen,

Prejudice

Sir:

I'm not black, but your editorial last week about prejudice is so true of Oshawa.

I'm an Indian, and I had one helluva time to find a boarding house too.

Joseph.

Wildcat hinders

Sir:

You are right. The strike is juvenile.

It is high time this city — and this whole country — woke up and took stock of its idiotic ways of handling labor disputes.

While negotiators were still trying to settle things with GM a bunch of hotheads decided to walk off their jobs in the truck plant. This kind of thing is intolerable, and if these people think such actions help settle labor disputes, they should take a basic course in human relations. Wildcats hinder labor-management relations.

Jack Davies.

Then there's the barker

Sir:

In your paper last week you mentioned every kind of dog in Oshawa except one, and that is a BARKING DOG.

I'm surrounded with them and I timed one the other day — a solid three hours without a stop

I'm sick of them and these inconsiderate people

Mrs. L. Sagar,
345 Colborne East.

Summer down the drain

Sir

Credible laws and even-handed administration of same are the surest means of ensuring public tolerance of law enforcement when it is needed — and public respect for the law-enforcers, the police

Few elements of Canadian criminal law have been more unjust and discriminatory than excessive reliance on pretrial detention and extravagant bail. Apart from sanctioning punishment before conviction, a system which penalizes citizens who cannot raise bail money creates an intolerable distinction between rich and poor in the administration of justice

The well-to-do individual can usually raise the money, but the citizen of limited means often remains in custody — sometimes for inordinately long periods — even though he may subsequently be acquitted in court.

That's how most of my summer went down the drain.

Durham student.

Get thee organized

Sir:

Your comments last week in regard to the maze of detours and the way these are confusing the motoring public were much appreciated

We had friends over from out-of-town. Their comment: "Why don't you people get yourselves organized."

Jim Ricketts.

Discrimination, snooping

Sir:

We read of your version of prejudice

We would like to know what you think of discrimination and snooping. is discrimination stubborness or foolishness and snooping on other people? Are the snoopers weak-minded or haven't they enough of their own business to attend to, or are they well paid for snooping? Also, do they think, they are smart? We would like to suggest that those kind of people should be watched

We think that snooping is a low selfish way to carry on their lives. Is it any wonder that there is so much trouble in the world? Do those people think that they are superior to others?

We are sorry that space won't permit more explanation, but you can judge what we are refering to

Your, "THIS WEEK," is wonderful, so keep up the good work

Dark ages

Sir

If you want to stay in business in this city, just keep doing what you did in last week's editorial piece when you condemned the working man's right to strike. It's the only weapon the working man has.

The middle-aged housewife stands in front of the judge's bench, sobbing uncontrollably. On several occasions, she has to be steadied by a stern-faced police matron.

"Madge Frump, you have been found guilty of owning the baking tins in which a cake containing a lethal does of arsenic was baked which led to the death of Harold Mortimer," intones the judge.

"Do you have anything to say before I pass sentence?" he asks gruffly.

"Your honor," sniffles the distraught housewife, "the Mortimers were our next-door neighbours and when Sally asked to borrow my cake tin to bake Harold a cake, I had no idea she was going to poison him."

The judge heaved a deep sigh: "Ignorance of the law is no excuse. Your baking tins were used in the commission of the crime and therefore, it is the finding of this court that you, not Mrs. Mortimer, are guilty of murder.

"And so, Madge Frump, I sentence you to life imprisonment for the murder of Harold Mortimer," says the judge.

The housewife collapses and is carried to a waiting police van by two burly court attendants. Inside the vehicle are a young man, a teen-ager and a small boy.

When Madge has regained consciousness, she looks around the interior of the van and asks its other occupants what crimes they have committed

"I've been given five years on a charge of manslaughter," says the young man. "My dad shot a friend of his with my rifle on a hunting trip."

The teen-ager reveals that he is going to prison on an indecent assault charge

"A friend of mine borrowed a pair of my gloves and dragged a girl off into the bushes with them on," he says. "They were my gloves, so I guess I'm guilty."

The little boy bursts out crying at this point and is comforted by the others. Between sniffles, he tells them that he is going to prison for armed robbery.

"My mommy threw out my Hallowe'en mask and the garbageman found it and wore it when he robbed a bank," sobs the youngster.

Is regional government a political ploy, asks Oshawa teacher issue was that he takes exception to recommendations made in a preliminary report on an Oshawa-Whitby-Ajax regional study.

"The consultant, perhaps to make the idea of regional government palatable to the rural areas, gives them more than their share of representation in a regional government set-up than they warrant by population

"The rural areas have roughly 10 per cent of the population and yet the report suggests they be given approximately 25 per cent of regional representation. Countering this, just Oshawa alone has approximately 45 per cent of the regional population and the report recommends it be given 36 per cent representation."

Rep by pop

"Representation if at all possible should be by population. The one man, one vote concept has a lot going for it and it is an ideal that in a democracy we should strive for.

"I think there would have to be a tremendous amount of political justification for violating this."

He said that should the recommendations of the preliminary report be adopted, Queen's Park will have found the solution to a political hot potato, the elimination of local councils.

"In effect, that's what they'd be doing since 90 per cent of the major decisions will be made at the regional council level while local councils will handle minor functions.

"This would mean, at least for the immediate future, a loss of the people's direct access to government since for thee years anyway the regional council will be appointed, not elected."

Mr. Paxton said he personally questions whether Oshawa needs regional government at all while realizing that regional government in the area desperately needs Oshawa.

"People throughout the area look to Oshawa as a focal point. We dominate the area as an employer, as a source of hospital and professional services and as the shopping area for the region.

"I would think it would make much more economic sense to make Oshawa stronger rather than dilute its power by sharing it amongst the region."

He said he is hopeful that other citizens who share his views will appear before the public hearings on regional government scheduled for the Oshawa area in October.

"It's still not too late to persuade Queen's Park to change courses, to adopt alternatives. That's what these hearings are all about."

lice chiefs in Canada had his way, something just as outrageous could take place in our country

Awhile back, he was quoted as saying that car owners, not the drivers, should be made responsible for infractions involving a vehicle registered in their name

He said that legislation to this effect would help traffic law enforcement and traffic safety in general.

The police chief would apparently hold the owner responsible should someone else run a red light, leave the scene of an accident or run over somebody while driving his car.

Sure, it would make traffic law enforcement easier if the investigating officer had only to ascertain the owner of the vehicle involved and charge him even if he were innocent of the crime.

And it follows that it would make other law enforcement easier if the investigating officer had only to ascertain the owner of other articles used in the commission of a crime and charge him.

Every time the police want to bring in laws to restrict our freedom, they say it would make their job a lot easier, which, I suppose, no one can blame them for.

But why beat around the bush? Why not make the death penalty mandatory for all those who commit a crime and then don't turn themselves in but make the police go to all the trouble of uncovering the guilty party?

Crippled children's school

Real goal: lead a normal life

Marylou is in Grade 1 this year. She has just passed her seventh birthday and many children reach Grade 1 by age six, but few of them have overcome Marylou's handicaps to get there.

Born prematurely, she suffered brain damage causing spasticity in all four limbs but particularly in her legs. When she was two she could sit alone, but her balance was poor. She could not stand by herself and because of the condition of her legs, she stood on tiptoe. Her means of locomotion was crawling.

Then the family doctor referred her to the Simcoe Hall Crippled Children's School and Treatment Centre. She was enrolled in the nursery school so she could learn to play with other children and enjoy activities without her mother, on whom she had become very dependent.

First physiotherapy

The Centre provided physiotherapy to improve her crawling, train her normal balance reactions, strengthen her legs and prevent deformities from unused muscles. The occupational therapist at the Centre taught her to dress herself and at the same time showed the family ways to make Marylou more independent. When she was three doctors at the Centre recommended surgery to lengthen her heelcords so she could place her feet flat on the floor. With this operation successfully behind her, there was no holding her back. Marylou learned to balance herself while standing, to walk with support, then with a pusher, and finally with crutches.

Now enrolled in a regular day school, Marylou has to cross a busy street by herself, climb a flight of stairs (both crutches in one hand and the other hand on the rail), hang her own coat and hat and even tie her shoes. She doesn't want help. She's very proud of her accomplishments and the fact that she's now ready to take part in the things other children do.

She will return weekly to the Centre for out-patient treatment to maintain and improve her physical condition, as many other "graduates" from the Crippled Children's School do.

For other children whose physical condition doesn't yet allow them to attend an outside day school, classes are provided at the Centre. Junior Kindergarten through Grade Eight classes are taught by qualified teachers while a staff of professional physiotherapists, occupational therapists and speech therapists work on the children's physical handicaps.

A child is accepted at the Centre only if staff believe they can help his problem. In making this assessment they work closely with parents or guardians, interviewing them and discussing the child's progress. Willing co-operation at home can be an important addition to the school training program. Sometimes a home situation may aggravate the child's problem (loss of speech and language can often be traced to poor home environment) and in extreme cases a child may become a ward of the Children's Aid Society and move to a foster home.

Every Level

But children come to the Centre from families of every income level. The only criterion is whether or not they can be helped. There are no fees as the School receives grants from the Ontario Hospital Commission as well as the Board of Education. These grants cover most operating costs during the

BEWARE OF HEROIN ADDICTION. IT CAN RUIN YOUR LIFE!

Heroin is the most used of all the addictive narcotics. When first taken it relieves pain, reduces tension, eases fears and relieves tension and worry. But, at the same time, it depresses the brain, reduces hunger, thirst and the sex drive.

Heroin users require repeated and larger doses to get their effects. Soon they are addicted or "hooked." Then they must take increasingly regular and larger doses or suffer agonizing pains. They may sweat, shake, get chills, diarrhea, nausea, leg cramps and abdominal pains.

A Heroin habit costs about $100 a day to obtain the drug. Most often prostitution or other crimes are the only way to get this money. The addiction is so powerful that a heroin user will do anything to get relief. Otherwise he suffers continuously unbearable torture.

The next issue of these Public Service messages will discuss "mainlining," the most dangerous method of taking illicit drugs.

school year, but not for the summer. "If it weren't for the money we receive from the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal", says unit co-ordinator Mrs. Catherine Findlay, "we would just have to close down in the summer". Closing the school would mean that children would miss their therapy for two months, a serious break in their programs, and many would miss the benefit of socialization with other children

Day camp

As it is, the Centre holds a summer day camp lasting for seven weeks which accommodates 60 children each day. The only expense to the child is a small charge for bus services. Buses go as far west as Whitby and to the northernmost city limits of Oshawa to pick up children. There is also a special school bus from Bowmanville Any child is welcome to attend the school but the expense of transportation can be a stumbling block. Volunteer drivers to bring handicapped children from the Ajax and Pickering areas would be welcomed and drivers are also needed to transport the kindergarteners who attend only half days and so don't fit the bus schedules.

Summer day camp, held in and about the school and using its pool, craft rooms and play yard is run by six counsellors, all students, mostly from university.

Volunteers

The counsellors are assisted by 75 high school students — volunteers who have been very faithful in attendance through the long hot summer They divide the children into age groups about ten to a group, and go about their various activities One group splashes in the therapeutic pool which is kept at 96 degrees and has a whirlpool attachment Another circle of eager faces gathers round their drama teacher, intently rehearsing a play. Others sit on the floor of the airy crafts room and work at finger painting. Lunchboxes are stacked in the hall and at the noon break milk is supplied, with a juice and cookie interlude in mid-morning

During the regular school term, ten to twelve adult volunteers come daily to help the teachers and therapists and a part time aide is on duty to help the children with toiletting and physical needs Clinics are held regularly four times yearly with two paediatricians and two surgeons seeing all the children, and a regular dental and opthalmological clinic are held 35 children registered to begin classes in September and another 80 to 100 will come in for weekly therapy after attending a public day school elsewhere At all times a close contact is maintained with the children's homes and parents are encouraged to bring their problems to the school for discussion.

Catherine Findlay, a registered nurse who graduated from the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal brings a warm personal interest in the children to her job as co-ordinator along with many years of professional experience

She has high praise for the teachers, therapists and volunteer workers and the imaginative programs they have developed for the children year round. Last year there were outings to McLaughlin Planetarium, the library, station, post office, fire hall, and a visit to Santa Claus In school, play productions and puppet theatre prove constantly popular. The Centre even has its own Cub pack and Brownie pack

"Above all, we don't want to overprotect them," says Mrs Findlay Other organizations may measure their success by their numbers, but at the Crippled Childrens' School the goal is to have the children move on to regular day school as Marylou has done, just as soon as they can cope with it "Our real goal is to have them lead as normal lives as possible", the Centre co-ordinator sums up

Above you can see a set of Mr. & Mrs. Chairs by Barrymore. They are done in a random antique gold and tomato coloured stripe - an unusual combination isn't it - but quite lovely. They say a picture is worth a thousand words but we say a visit is worth a thousand pictures - you really must see them. We would like to mention one thing in closing. Some of our customers have found our entrance door a little forbidding - sort of private looking. Well, we admit, it is a two hundred pound, solid cedar door but our intention is psychological - we want you to have the feeling of solidarity and security. So please open it - it opens like a dream. And when you are inside, the dream is fulfilled. You will have entered our attempt to offer you the most pleasant, relaxing, and unusual interiors shop anywhere. Oh, one more thing. Our 25% reduction sale on all draperies and making charges is still on. Come and see us soon.

Thanks.

Impatient, yelling at children

Crossing guards blast drivers

Impatient and unthinking Oshawa motorists are running the risk of ruining the lives of local families, their own included.

School crossing guards in the city told This Week in interviews that drivers in a hurry sometimes race by the guards taking children across the street.

"They can do this if they want; we have no authority on the street," said Mrs. Helen Scott, a guard on Simcoe Street North. "I don't understand why we're not given this authority. They are in other places."

Mrs. Scott said just before school ended in June, she had to pull three children out of the path of a car to prevent their deaths.

"I'm not exaggerating. The woman driving the car missed them by inches. She was pretty shook up about it, let me tell you."

Mary Sharpe, another guard, has similar stories to tell. She herself has been narrowly missed by cars while trying to get children safely across the street

"The odd driver will come speeding along the outside lane even though the driver in the centre lane has stopped," she said. "I can't understand why they do it."

Both guards have found that many of the impatient drivers, while they do stop, will yell at the children to hurry up, sometimes using less than perfect language.

"I haven't found this happening so much this year though," said Mrs. Sharpe. "I think they're beginning to realize we're out here for a purpose."

While neither woman is bothered by the dangers involved in the job, their spouses are a different matter.

Husband figures "I've been hit"

"Every time my husband hears brakes squeal out here, he figures I've been hit," said Mrs. Scott.

What would make these housewives give up 35 minutes in the morning when they could be having a second cup of coffee, an hour and five minutes at noon and another 35 minutes in the afternoon to act as targets for careless motorists?

"I enjoy dealing with the children every day," said Mrs. Scott. "I really love it and I wouldn't change it for the world."

Mrs. Sharpe agreed with this and added that with just she and her husband at home, the $100 a month comes in handy as spending money and gives her something to do with her time.

"Of course, if you have any major projects on at home, they have to be planned around the time you're on duty. It certainly can interfere with the routine of your day."

The occupational hazard of rude, dangerous drivers was pointed out graphically to This Week's reporter as he talked to one of the guards. A car failed to stop for the sign held in her outstretched hand, but came barrelling through, his horn honking.

This was offset, however, by the cheerful exchange between the guard and one small boy hurrying to get to school on time. Late as he was, he had to stop to talk to the guard.

"Know what, Mrs. Sharpe," he said proudly. "Our cat had kittens last night."

This is the view Oshawa drivers get as they are brought to a halt by school crossing guard Mrs. Mary Sharpe on Simcoe Street North.

OUR DIAMONDS ARE NEVER DULL

Dull diamonds do exist. They have no fire because they're badly cut or of poor color. A small well-cut diamond can flash brilliantly across a room. You'll never get a dull diamond from us. Because we insist on value and quality and brilliance. We'd be a dull, unsuccessful store if we didn't.

Judge Dodds to moderate panel on pollution

Judge D. B. Dodds of Oshawa, Chairman of the Central Lake Ontario Conservation Authority, will be the moderator of a panel discussion on "Pollution Control in the Nickel Industry" at the forthcoming 12th Biennial Conference of Ontario Conservation Authorities in Sudbury, this weekend. The panel will consist of specialists from the Nickel Industries operating in the Sudbury area.

Also attending the Conference as representatives of the Central Lake Ontario Conservation Authority will be Alderman Ruth Bestwick of the City of Oshawa and Deputy Reeve J. G. Goodwin of the Town of Whitby. "Conservation in the '70's" will be the theme of this year's Conference.

The Central Lake Ontario Conservation Authority includes the municipalities of the City of Oshawa, Town of Whitby, Town of Bowmanville, the Townships of East Whitby and Darlington and sections of the Townships of Reach, Clarke and Pickering, and has the responsibility for the conservation of natural resources in the above area.

House tour on next Wednesday

Another house tour by the Women's Auxiliary of Oshawa General Hospital is planned for next Wednesday, 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., with tea from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Kinsmen Hall.

Ticketholders supply their own transportation to the homes and each home will be staffed by members of the Evening Chapter to act as guides.

Proceeds from the project go to the Auxiliary's playroom fund.

Tickets, at $2, are available from Scott and Eastview Pharmacies, the Bo-Peep Restaurant or from ticket convenor Mrs. Andrew Chrisomalis, 744 Westdale Street.

There are seven homes on the program.

Jaycee Week is fun and games

The Oshawa Jaycess kicked off JAYCEE WEEK in Oshawa by playing members of city council in a game of Donkey Baseball Saturday at Alexandra Park

Other activities during JAYCEE WEEK include a Jaycette sponsored picnic, a Jaycee Executive meeting and an introduction night for new members. Also, on September 18, Canada Jaycee President George deRappard of Edmonton will be at the Skyline Hotel (5 to 7 p.m.) as part of his weekend Cross Canada Tour

To end JAYCEE WEEK the Oshawa Jaycees have a golf tournament, family bar-be-que, and a party.

The Oshawa Jaycees are involved in the following projects:

"Everything Under the Sun": This is a swashbuckling musical comedy adventure sponsored by The Canada Jaycees in aid of the Canadian 1972 Olympic Team. The show is at Maple Leaf Gardens, September 28, 1970. (For more information and tickets contact Dale Foran at 723-8045).

Past-president and old Jaycee Night to be held October 5, 1970 at the Carousel Inn.

Sports and entertainment nights with the boys at the Pine Ridge Training School, Bowmanville.

Outstanding Young Man project to honor a well deserving community man. Past winners include: Terry Kelly, Bruce Affleck, and Ron Guiltinan.

A Christmas Show sponsored by The Oshawa Jaycees for handicapped and underpriveledged children. (For information contact John Mink at 576-6942.)

A continuation of the donation of trophies for excellence in Public Speaking at the High Schools in Oshawa.

In November the Oshawa Jaycees will also be running a political forum prior to the Oshawa Civic elections.

PARKING

Houses from 38-40 King West and at 42 King West will be demolished shortly and the land used temporarily for parking. The demolition work will begin as soon as the low bidder for the work, Seaway Demolition of Oshawa, has finalized insurance and workmen's compensation arrangements.

Getting even - that's initiation

Bill Judd, a Grade 9 student at Central Collegiate, shines the shoes of Judy Pitre, a Grade 12 student, while Judy's sister Gloria looks on during Initiation activities Friday.

Oshawa residents in all parts of the city were noticed turning their heads sharply in surprise and bewilderment last Friday.

Young men were walking around the streets in short skirts and nylons and girls were sporting moustaches and derby hats

This was all part of Initiation Day at Central Collegiate where the Grade 9 students are forced to undergo all sorts of humiliation to 'welcome' them into high school.

Most students find it 'heavy' enough just having to go back to school for another year, but at least they don't have to spend one day their first week pushing rolls of toilet paper with their nose or washing cars with a toothbrush.

These were some of the tasks dreamed up for the Grade 9 newcomers by the seniors in Grades 12 and 13 at Central

One of the slave-drivers appeared to be anything but as she talked to a This Week reporter She was a pretty blonde sixteen-year-old, Judy Pitre, a Grade 12 student at Central

But underneath those good looks beat a heart of stone. She was forcing Bill Judd, 14, to shine her shoes and had her own sister, Gloria, 14, helping.

"This is our way of getting even for the things we had to do when we started Grade 9," said Judy with a wicked gleam in her eye. "We've got all sorts of things for them to do today like rolling through a sprinkler and peeling potatoes at a restaurant"

About 250 grade 9 students at Central were subjected to these initiation rites on Friday and those who refused to take part were penalized at a wind-up dance at the school.

Judy had just imparted this bit of information when she got a brainstorm for another diabilical trick to play on her two slaves and began herding them down the street. As Gloria left, she was asked what she would do the Grade Niners when she got to be a senior

"We'll kill them," she said.

College student could face fine of $300

Students at Durham College face the possibility of fines as high as $300

No, this penalty would not be for destroying computers, lynching the dean or stealing a set of final examinations. Would you believe a parking violation?

Each student wishing to bring a car to the college must register his licence number with the administrative office. He is then handed a pamphlet on parking regulations.

The pamphlet informs him that a fine of not more than $300 could be imposed if parking regulations are not obeyed. It reads as follows:

"The first offence may be a warning of the violation. A traffic ticket will be issued to the vehicle involved and the recipient must check with the security guard upon receipt of this ticket.

"All other offences and in some cases the first offence may be subject to the security guard issuing a violation notice from the township of East Whitby.

"In this case, a fine of $5 must be paid to the township office in Columbus within four days of the date of the notice. If voluntary payment of the $5 is not made in the prescribed time, the procedure of the Summary Convictions Act and the procedure and penalties provided in Bylaw 2091 shall apply

"Any person violating Bylaw 2091 shall also be liable to a penalty of not more than $300 exclusive of costs for each offence and his vehicle may be towed away and impounded with all costs being charged to the owner."

Sex is fattening

Sex is fattening.

This thought-provoking statement greets the Toronto commuter as he walks onto the platform on Simcoe Street South to catch the bus for the GO train.

It doesn't take graffiti writers long to sharpen their pencils once a new bus terminal is erected. Just the bare walls of the GO station have been put up and already such statements are scrawled on the cement.

The commuter bus which takes passengers to the GO train station at Pickering is beginning to increase in popularity after one week's operation, according to a GO official.

This Week sent a reporter to the station on Friday to watch several dozen bleary-eyed individuals climb the steps of the shiny new bus and slump into its comfortable seats.

Inadvertently, the commuter service has formed a new catchy slogan for itself. A traffic sign and the GO symbol have been put up one above the other on a post near the parking facilities. A casual glance at the two finds you reading: "No stopping any time — GO".

Beauty on the picket line might be the title of this photograph of striking secretaries outside the offices of the Ontario County Board of Education.

Education secretaries on strike

By Tom Douglas

"Who was it that loaned me this rain hat this morning?"

"I've got my elastic stockings on. It really helps when you have to be on your feet for three hours."

"Then you pre-heat the oven to 450 and bake for about 20 minutes or until the top gets golden brown."

Believe it or not, these are conversations overheard this week on a picket line in Oshawa. John L. Sullivan, long-time labor chieftain in the United States, would perhaps roll over in his grave if he heard them

Or would he? He might actually smile with pride as he looked down from that big union hall in the sky to see some 160 women with picket signs over their shoulders stopping burly truck drivers from crossing their picket lines.

This is what is happening this week as the secretaries of the Ontario County Board of Education are out on strike to back up wage demands in a new two-year contract.

The women walked off their jobs last Wednesday and set up picket lines at the board's administrative office and Central and O'Neill Collegiates. They have received support from maintenance staffs, construction workers and even the students of Central Collegiate.

But the women individually are finding picket duty a lot less glamorous than sitting behind a desk all day

"We're beginning to dread the 7 a.m. to 10 a.m. shift and the 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. shift," said one shivering picketer. "It's getting so cold these days."

Another striker said that with her husband expecting to go on strike at General Motors (she was still uncertain at the time of the interview) they'd begin feeling the pinch rather quickly.

"Actually what it means is that we won't be getting our recreation room this year," she said. "We have money set aside for it, but we delayed building it because we figured a strike was coming. That will keep us going for awhile."

Welfare

She added that some of her friends are planning to apply for welfare even though they have a tidy sum of money put away.

"We're too proud to do that. I suppose if I could change my name I'd do it, but I know too many people that work there and I'd be too proud to ask for help."

Mrs. Hazel Holt, the vice-president of the section of Local 251, Canadian Union of Public Employees which handles board of education secretaries, said she was hopeful the board would be approaching them soon with an offer to talk.

"We had meetings with them and a mediator from the department of labor in Toronto Thursday and Friday, but we told them we weren't prepared to go back to our girls with their offer, so we called it quits."

Mrs. Holt said the board has offered the secretaries a 7½ per cent increase the first year and a seven per cent hike the second year. The women want 10 per cent each year.

"Why should we have to fight tooth and nail when workers all over the province get at least nine per cent every year?" she asked. "At one point, they wanted to give us 4½ per cent and we learned that the cost of living went up by four per cent last year alone."

She said the starting rate for a secretary under the old contract.

which expired June 30 was $3,585. After three years, the employee would get $5,000

Mrs. Holt said the board was given Local 251's proposals on May 31 and unsuccessful meetings were held June 17 and 30 and July 8

"They then took us to conciliation and the conciliation officer told us he would be submitting a no board report." (Under Ontario labor statutes, this gives the union the legal right to strike after a certain time period has elapsed.)

"We met again August 27 and September 1, but we got offered nowhere near what we wanted. We could have legally gone on strike last Tuesday but we waited until Wednesday

"The board asked us to hold off because we were going to mediation Thursday, but we figured they could have settled this thing a long time ago, so we went ahead with our plans"

Mrs. Holt said she believes the picket lines are having some effect because truckers have refused to bring in shipments and a lot of people who would normally do business with the board aren't crossing the lines

'Administrative people are going in, but they get delayed by us using the tactic of moving back and forth across the entrances," she said.

At this point, one person who is capitalizing on the strike, a local coffee vendor, pulled up in his truck and the women lined up to purchase some of the hot liquid to fortify them for the rest of their shift

CHANNEL 19 FOR ENTERTAINING EDUCATION

On September 28, television in Ontario changes dramatically. Channel 19, Canada's first station fully devoted to entertaining education, begins broadcasting. For the viewer, it means a new age of learning 'with your feet up.'

Channel 19 is programmed by The Ontario Educational Communications Authority. That is, more than 200 educators, producers, writers, and technicians whose specialty is to make learning a rewarding and enjoyable experience.

Adult education on Channel 19 means a wide range of stimulating programs. For instance, 'Man in Society', 'The Creative Person,' or 'The Great War.' 'Suivez la Piste' is a 25-episode thriller in clear, simple French for those who'd like to brush up on their second language. And if French means cooking to you, you'll enjoy 'The French Chef'. Many of these programs will offer books or pamphlets.

Channel 19's broadcast area is bordered by Oshawa, Hamilton, Newmarket, and St. Catharines.

Two sculpture shows at McLaughlin

By Paul Bennett, Director

The Fall exhibition season opened last week at the Robert McLaughlin Gallery with the presentation of two sculpture exhibitions. "This Season of Man" and "Medals", both prepared by the Sculptors' Society of Canada.

The main exhibition, "This Season of Man" has just been organized and is having its first viewing in Oshawa. There are forty-nine works in the show ranging from table sized sculptures to free standing floor sized pieces made in a variety of materials including aluminum, bronze, polyester, granite, welded steel, copper, lead, soapstone, wood and marble. There are also thirty-nine drawings and prints with the show done by the sculptors, through these one is able to see the gradual development of an idea before it reaches the finished stage of the works on display in the gallery.

The exhibition "Medals", is in the small gallery. The works are made of bronze and silver and are displayed in four large trays. The making of medals is a subject of renewed interest with artists these days. There is a small group of sculptors in Canada that has been gaining an international reputation in this field. These works, by such artists as Dora De Pedery Hunt, Julius Marosan, August Kopmanis and Andrew Boszin, are in a variety of subjects. Many make a tremendous artistic statement within the small size of the medal.

This year the McLaughlin Gallery is presenting sculpture exhibitions on two separate occasions.

ROM TRUSTEE

The minister of university affairs, Hon. William Davis, announced this week the reappointment of Hugh Pryce-Jones of Whitby to a three year term on the board of trustees of the Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto. Mr. Pryce-Jones has served as a trustee since 1968.

HEARING

A public hearing will be held on an application to rezone industrial land at the southwest corner of Somerville Street and Taunton Road West for development of a shopping centre. The Oshawa planning board made this decision after application was made by developer John Ihnat.

Guide to eating out

What and where is Brassbound's Gallery? What does one do at Nepentha? And who is H. Salt, Esq.?

You'll find the answers in the second edition of "The Guide to Eating Out in Ontario," published by the Canadian Restaurant Association. The 96-page booklet will be available, free of charge, to the public next week.

The Guide lists almost 1,000 CRA member restaurants, hotel/motel dining rooms and drive-ins in over 130 Ontario communities.

Listings include type of food served, price ranges, availability of liquor, wines or beer and credit cards accepted. For the family dining-out or travelling, restaurants with specially priced children's menus are noted down.

The 1970 Guide to Eating Out in Ontario is available at Tourist Information Centres, border crossing points and CRA branches.

Automated bacon comes to breakfast

Newest electric appliance alongside the toaster and the percolator at the breakfast table, according to Hardware Merchandising magazine, is one designed to make frying bacon as easy as making toast — clean, automatic and done to individual taste.

Canadian Westinghouse says its new "Baconer" eliminates spattering or accumulation of hot grease. The bacon slices, up to seven or eight per frying, are draped over the Teflon non-stick cooking surface of the gadget and cook automatically to any desired crispness — determined by pre-setting an automatic dial. The bacon fat drains off into a separate grease tray. When your bacon is done, the appliance shuts off automatically.

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

During the early days of the war I can clearly remember my uncle from the States motoring up from the booming Metropolis of New York to visit and go fishing. Arriving in what was at that time a snazzy straight eight Buick he typified the rich American or at least the well equipped Yank who was bulging with all the modern comforts of the early forties. Of all the luxury items he had packed in the car the most fascinating to me was a large black box with a shiny tube poking out a glassy eye

This mystifying black box was an Eastman Kodak movie camera and it weighed close to 10 pounds. And every where he went Uncle Gene would produce the mechanical marvel and with shirrs and clicks record the events. But since these were the war years the films are in black and white only

To this day those 30 year old films still come out on a Saturday night when the family gets together and prancing along in 16 mm is none other than yours truly with long flowing golden locks. Not only do I get a big kick out of this flick by my own offspring howl with delight everytime they see it.

Of course in the forties the expensive 16mm movie film was about the only thing around, after the war 8mm came out for home movies and now its super 8. What is lacking in home movies is sound, many film fanciers have expressed a longing to not only catch junior on the bear skin in a photo image but to get all the thrilling goo, goo's and other assorted noises that the tiny people emit. It can be done on movie film but it's complicated and expensive, a small tape recorder must be syncronized to the lip movements of the film being shown.

"If only," the home movie fan would say, "we could have a simple method of putting sound on those home movies without fuss or bother."

Well it can be done and very easily. Both the Sony Corporation and Ampex, large manufacturers of video equipment have come up with the solution that should fill the bill. It's a small hand held camera and portable video tape recorder that records both picture and sound. Both of these units weigh under 12 pounds and can film continuously for 30 minutes and what's really unique is instant play back. A simple connecting cable lets you watch this on the home tv set complete with sound. I tried one of these units out the other day and with the zoom lens and built in microphone I picked up a helicopter two miles away very clearly and the sound was excellent. The Sony is a reel to reel recorder while the Ampex uses a cartridge. Each machine is fully automated and adjusts sound and picture levels almost perfectly

St. John Ambulance

Jerusalem Mosport have something in common

You'll find them wherever the action is. . .wherever a sports event, parade or fair is likely to draw a large crowd.

A good number of them attended the recent rock festival "Strawberry Fields" at Mosport.

Swingers?

No, members of the old and honorable St. John Ambulance Brigade, on hand not for their own entertainment but to provide first aid and emergency medical assistance wherever required.

The organization traces kinship to the Knights Hospitalers of the 11th Century who established a hospital for ill or infirm pilgrims in Jerusalem. Because physical protection was necessary, the Hospitalers, sometimes called Knights of St. John, became known equally for their military prowess as their hospital work. Though the order suffered severe harrassment in many countries of the world during the intervening nine centuries, some of the military influence as well as the charitable medical work has survived.

LIKE MILITARY

"That's partly why they like to involve military people", says Steve Wotton, former Commanding Officer of the Ontario Regiment, now Emergency Measures Co-ordinator for Ontario County as well as Chairman of the Oshawa Branch of St. John Ambulance. And that is why you'll find a number of military men among the society's administration. Lieutenant Colonel Wotton has been involved in the work for the past 20 years.

"The Brigade needs accommodation and equipment similar to that of an army field hospital", he says, and a further bond is the fact that the army relies on the St. John Ambulance Society for their first-aid instruction. In the event of a serious emergency, the Brigade would be prepared to co-operate with army personnel to the fullest extent.

But the St. John Ambulance Society doesn't sit around waiting for a major disaster to happen. They are constantly being requested for duty somewhere in the area, at the Centennial Pool where the Central Ontario Amateur Swim Competition was recently held, at picnics, fairs, Miles for Millions (where they supplied great quantities of free ointment for sore feet)

"Our people are on duty round the clock", says Lieutenant-Colonel Wotton. They maintain a permanent first aid room at the Oshawa Auditorium and are always on hand for hockey games, no matter how odd the hour when ice time is available.

TRAINING

Members of the Brigade are thoroughly trained in first-aid and home-nursing by qualified doctors and nurses many of them from among their own ranks. Their duty in the field is to make first contact with the ill or injured, apply necessary emergency first-aid and move them to a place where they can receive professional help.

At the Mosport Rock Festival their job was chiefly acting as casualty collecting units, bringing to the medical tents drug victims and young people suffering from sunstroke or other injuries.

The uniformed, active duty group of the Society contains four divisions, one ambulance, one nursing, one cadet ambulance and one cadet nursing with a total of 77 volunteers. The administration branch which handles general administration and public education is made up of 30 local businessmen who give their time freely to the association.

AT SCHOOLS

Public education receives particular emphasis with professional instruction available to anyone who asks for it at a very nominal charge. In recent years the Society has offered first-aid classes at night school and to enrichment classes in day school while training classes have always been in demand for Boy Scouts and Girl Guides. The Society advertises its educational services in the papers and through Board of Education publications. Anyone wishing youth instruction has only to contact the St. John Ambulance Society. Last year 198 adults were trained in first-aid and home nursing, and 129 youth in first-aid.

Both Oshawa and Whitby Associations are assisted by the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal, but money is a constant problem.

Uniforms must be purchased for brigade members as it would be asking too much of volunteers to pay for their own when they are already giving many hours of valuable time. General Motors generously helped out last year by providing replacements for worn out tunics and trousers.

SNOWMOBILE

Other expenses arise as patterns of recreation change and the Society must meet new requirements. For instance, last year a snowmobile and trailer were equipped for treating and transporting injury victims in remote areas. This meant that the operators and attendants with the vehicle must be properly geared in snowsuits, helmets, mittens and special boots if they are to function efficiently in the cold.

The great interest in snowmobiles and snowmobile racing has made it necessary to plan for a mobile treatment centre. The traditional tent which used to serve as a field hospital just isn't good enough in winter weather when the victim is likely to be suffering from shock and require a warm atmosphere. A properly equipped and insulated mobile treatment centre will be very expensive, and at present nobody is quite certain how the money can be raised. . .but the need is there.

Wotton says the Brigade tries to cover all events where Oshawa people may be present, even if they take place outside of Oshawa. An example of this is the horse racing at Orono and the Santa Claus parade in Bowmanville.

Whitby's Society co-operates in covering such events and on occasion lends its ambulance to supplement the two owned by the Oshawa branch. Sometimes the organization sponsoring an event will present a cheque for the services of the Brigade and these are always appreciated.

INVESTMENT

"Donations to the St. John Ambulance are an excellent dollars and cents investment for the community", says Wotton in a masterpiece of understatement. In to assist the agencies supported by the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal. You may not have time to do volunteer work but you can let your dollars work instead. Give generously when the United Appeal canvasser calls on you.

Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal, Who needs it?

Everybody, that's who!
Because United Appeal benefits everybody, no matter what their economic level.

Take Health. Multiple Sclerosis can strike even a wealthy person. Arthritis and Rheumatism research benefits those who can afford expensive treatment as much as those on Welfare.

Think about Family and Child Care. Mental Retardation or crippling illnesses can affect any family.

Youth Training, Y.W.C.A. Navy League? They're for everybody, regardless of race, creed, colour or size of pocket book.
Welfare? The need for assistance for the less fortunate grows greater every year.

SO WHO NEEDS UNITED APPEAL?
YOU DO!

Even if you never need a specific agency, mabey you need the emotional exercise of reaching out to help someone else. Try it.

GET INVOLVED

Total involvement

Total Involvement is the theme of the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal this year. That means we need the help of everybody to reach our objective of $456,589.00 for 1971. For the first time in the Oshawa-Whitby area a residential door-to-door United Appeal canvass will be carried out, as well as the usual canvass of businesses and industry. Please don't say: "We give at work". Give something at home too, no matter how little. Total involvement means everyone caring and sharing. Get involved.

My husband gives at work!

Isn't that fine. Aren't you lucky to have a husband with a job. Isn't it great that he can afford to be generous and help someone else?

But how about you? Wouldn't you feel a little more involved if you made a gift of your own? It doesn't have to be a lot. Pennies, nickles and dimes add up if everybody gives.

Think about it. Wouldn't you LIKE to give something on your own because you're thankful for a husband with a job, for never having to depend on a welfare cheque, for not having to send your child to the Crippled Children's Centre?

So your husband gives at work? Great?
What are YOU going to give, at home, when the canvasser calls?

ORGANIZATION

1. Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal is an incorporated Charitable Company, operating under a Charter granted by the Government of the Province of Ontario.
2. Management of the Company is the responsibility of a Board of Directors.
3. By terms of our Charter there are 16 Directors. These Directors are elected for a term of three years on a rotating basis at the Annual Meeting.
4. Each Director serves on a voluntary basis and under the terms of our Charter is not permitted to receive any compensation for his services rendered to the United Appeal.
5. The Headquarters of the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal is located at 52 Simcoe St. South, Oshawa.

STAFF

1. There are three employees located in the Headquarters office, one volunteer Typist, plus one Secretary and one Manager who receive compensation.
2. Total compensation paid for 1969 amounted to $14,575.00.
3. Total estimated cost of maintaining Headquarters office including rent, heat, telephone, stationery, postage, printing, etc. $5,000.00.

CAMPAIGN COSTS

1. Estimated cost of 1970 Campaign including promotional material, publicity, postage, films, slides, etc., $5,000.00.

UNITED

Have you Heard the rumor?

Directors and volunteers of the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal are well rewarded for the meetings they attend and the work they do! It's true!

They're rewarded by the nice warm feeling of satisfaction that comes from knowing they're helping improve our community's Family and Child Care, Health, Welfare, Youth Training and Development. . That's all!

Only satisfaction. No money . . . it all goes to the United Appeal. No expensive entertainment. Just the knowledge that they're involved with their community, making Oshawa and Whitby better and happier places to live.

SPREAD THE RUMOUR! GET INVOLVED!

Oshawa NASC

More ice time brings hockey, ringette expansion

This weekend, the Oshawa Neighbourhood Associations' Sports Committee will hold its registration night and day for all boys and girls in Oshawa, who want to play ringette or hockey during the 1970-71 winter season

Registration periods for all boys and girls will be Friday, between 7 and 9 p.m. and Saturday, between 10 a.m. and 12 noon at all Neighbourhood Park clubhouses. There will be no registration fee for either ringette or hockey.

The Oshawa Neighbourhood Associations' Sports Committee or the "Oshawa NASC" as it is commonly known is a year-round minor sports organization, which programs softball, soccer, hockey and ringette throughout the year for well over 3000 children. The organization has countless number of dedicated volunteer workers who devote thousands of hours of volunteer work to bring minor sports to an ever increasing number of boys and girls. It is one of the oldest minor sport organizations in the city.

Oshawa has been systematically divided into over 22 Neighbourhood Park areas, out of which areas, minor teams are formed to entered into each various NASC minor sport activity. Within each area of the City volunteers come forth on each minor team, organized in that area. Each Neighbourhood Park has an elected Sports Chairman, who directs with the help of his fellow volunteer workers, the minor sports teams to see that these are organized for entry into the NASC minor sports programs.

Each Neighbourhood Park has an elected Sports Chairman, who directs, with the help of his fellow volunteer workers, the minor sports teams to see that these are organized for entry into the NASC minor sports programs

The Oshawa Neighbourhood Associations' Sports Committee consists of the 22 or more elected Sports Chairmen from the Neighbourhood Parks in the City of Oshawa executive to co-ordinate the various minor league activities throughout the year.

The Oshawa NASC is involved throughout the year with a large number of youngsters, and once again, although the minor softball and soccer programs are not yet completed, the Oshawa NASC is now organizing its winter programs for both hockey and ringette.

Last year the NASC had 69 hockey teams with well over 1200 boys playing hockey in three different age classifications: in addition there were a dozen girls' ringette teams with close to 200 girls participating in the ringette league

This year, the Oshawa Neighbourhood Associations' Sports Committee foresees a tremendous expansion in both its hockey and ringette activities, as registration day approaches

For the past number of years, both the hockey and ringette have suffered as a result of lack of ice time In its efforts to provide as much recreation as possible for all boys and girls living in the City of Oshawa, the NASC has had to secure ice time outside the City, because it had only 22 hours of ice time in which

Nine hundred years ago some public-minded person saw the need for free emergency medical services, and the need still exists. Pilgrims to Jerusalem and hippies heading for the Strawberry Fields have in common the need for a helping hand when injury or illness occurs. The "Most Venerable Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem", better known as the St. John Ambulance Association is still in there, doing the job.

to program its activities in the City of Oshawa for well over 1000 hockey and ringette players. Also in the past few years, the youngest hockey age classification league "Mite" played its league games on half-ice to economize on the ice time

A major rule for hockey players is "that all hockey players must play for one team and one league only. "This rule was instituted three years ago by the Oshawa NASC. As a result of this more hockey is created for more boys. A great many youngsters who may not have had chance to play hockey, because some boys, who participate on two or three different teams have been given a chance to play hockey

The Oshawa NASC now has accumulated a total of 60 hours of ice time in Oshawa with which it hopes to bring to an end the trips to out-of-town arenas for hockey and ringette league games.

As a direct result of the added ice time, the hockey and definitely the ringette program, which have held back their expansion due to the lack of ice time may now expand.

The Oshawa NASC 1969-70 hockey leagues saw a large expansion in the 10 and under age groupings with a total 47 teams, and thus it is likely, that this expansion will continue into the other age categories. Also, for the forth-coming 1970-71 hockey seasons, the Oshawa NASC hockey program will see the expansion into "BANTAM" hockey for boys 14 years and under as of December 31st, 1970.

For this weekend's registration no fee is required, however, proof of age will be required from all boys and girls, who have not played in an Oshawa NASC minor league before.

For further information on NASC 1970-71 hockey or ringette registration contact the Oshawa Recreation Department at 725-1111.

Any adults, who wish to volunteer as coaches or game officials may do so at any Neighbourhood Park clubhouse this weekend.

Legionaires get split on weekend

It just doesn't pay to get ahead of Oshawa's Senior Legionaires. They took it on the chin Saturday night from Welland Santo's by a score of 9 to 4; down in the Canal City. Sunday at home, they weathered a first inning nightmare before coming back to win by an 8 to 4 count.

The locals came rather flat Saturday, at Welland's Burgar Park in the opener of their Ontario Baseball Association Intermediate "A Major" finals. Starting southpaw Dave Hecimovitch appeared to have the Oshawa batters mesmerized as his control was near letter perfect. Although he allowed eight scattered hits throughout the contest, Oshawa could not get enough together for the big rally.

The story of the ball game was the seven walks issued to Welland by starting pitcher John Fair. The young righthander who has had only three starts this season, had control problems throughout the contest and was replaced by Dave Whitely in the sixth with the score 8-1. Oshawa came back with three in the seventh, but it was just not enough

It looked like the same thing at Kinsmen on Sunday. The Legion boys gave up three runs on two hits, two errors and a walk in the first inning and it was the bottom of the third before they finally put a man on base.

Welland picked up their final run of the day in the top of the fourth and the rest of the way it was all Oshawa. The homesters cut Welland's margin to 4-2 in the bottom of the fourth, went ahead in the sixth and added three insurance runs in the seventh.

After a shaky start Legionaire's tough young righthander, Gary Carroll took control and handled the Welland crew with ease the rest of the game.

Ted "Preem" Whitely had a good weekend, having five solid hits in the two games while Ken Toffan had three. Bob Reid, Tony Jones, Ted Lutton and Pat Watters all hit key blows over the weekend.

The series now moves back to Welland for the third game next Saturday night and the fourth will be played Sunday at Kinsmen Stadium at 1:00 p.m. Oshawa won the toss for the fifth and deciding game, which if necessary, will be played here in the Motor City.

Quality Fuels edge out Brockville

Oshawa Quality Fuels' Don Calder hooked up with Brockville's Roger Hodgkinson in a 3 game pitcher's duel which produced only three runs in 32 innings. This series was the quarter-finals of the O.A.S.A. "Industrial A" playdowns

The Fuelmen won 1 to 0 in the opener at home in 13 innings as Calder fanned 28 Brockville batters while Hodgkinson sent 21 men down swinging. The second game in Brockville was just the reverse as the easterners got the lone run with big Hodgkinson striking out 26 batters to Calders' 15.

The stage was set for last Thursday's final game in the eastern city, and again it was a one-run ballgame. Oshawa's Calder got the win as he and Hodgkinson claimed 17 strikeouts apiece.

Quality Fuels now go against a Toronto team, still unnamed at press time but are assured of a home game Thursday evening. Game time will be 8:15 pm at Alexander Park Manager Gary Dodsworth and coach Bob McClimond have put together a strong aggregation of local softball talent and should have an excellent chance of bringing home another O.A.S.A. title to the city.

Ziebart now guarantees your car won't rust for 10 years, no matter how many miles you drive it.

How's that for being sure of ourselves?

We're that sure of ourselves because we're the biggest and the first Ziebart type rustproofing business in 1953. Although we've acquired a lot of imitators we're still the only ones that keep our promise to protect your car from rust.

Our guarantee only has one condition. You must have your car Ziebartized when it's new, before it's driven 3,000 miles.

By getting to a car when it's still new Ziebart's patented compound and process can begin protecting your car before rust begins to eat away at the metal.

We know that rust starts on the inside of your car, in hidden seams and crevices. So we protect these critical areas, as well as the obvious places.

I love you, but I bought a new car or are thinking of it could remember Ziebart.

We guarantee your time will be worth it. About ten years worth of it.

A big tip of the cap should be in line for members of the Royal Canadian Legion Sports Committee, and to the hard-working executive of the Oshawa Baseball Association.

Legion Branch 43 now directly sponsors 24 baseball teams in Oshawa, with age range going from Tyke (8-10) right through Junior (under 21 years of age) and the Oshawa Senior Legionaires (over 21)

Jim Lutton is president of the Association, which is responsible for all 24 clubs. A conservative estimate of the cost of this programme would probably be between four and six thousand dollars. According to Jim Lutton, co-operation between his executive and the legion is nothing short of fantastic.

Baseball folks in the Motor City are looking to the Senior Legionaires to bring home the Ontario Baseball Association championship of their division this year

Baseball has made a tremendous resurgence in popularity of late, in the province. This upswing may be due to the great success of the amazing Montreal Expos. In fact, right here in Oshawa, plans are being made to improve the caliber of the sport. Local baseball men feel that since no provision was made at the Civic Auditorium Complex for baseball, Kinsmen Stadium should be turned into a strictly Baseball Park. At the moment, the city and district soccer teams have use of the park four nights a week and facilities at Alexander Park are bad

How rapidly the sports seasons change! We now have hockey overlapping ball and lacrosse in the spring AND the fall. Football overlaps all three sports.

Speaking of hockey, the ice is now in most rinks, and all area teams are now making preparations to get back into the thick of things.

Oakland Seals and the Oshawa Generals both opened training camps on the weekend and it looks as if the Bay Area fans could have more to cheer about this season. Likewise, the Generals have a strong combination of "Junior A" veterans and good solid rookies at their camp and could be a real power again in the O.H.A. circuit.

Local industrial leagues are starting to prep for another shinny season and we hope to feature up-to-date news on these teams.

The high school football schedule gets underway this weekend, so watch these pages for game reports

We noticed a lot of smiles on the faces of Argo fans around town the last few days. Could this really be the year?

ROOMMATES BY COMPUTER

The on-campus computer system for matching roommates at the University of Waterloo in southwestern Ontario has resulted in 50 per cent fewer roommate change requests in its first year of operation, according to a report in Canadian University & College magazine.

The computer system, which was developed by three Waterloo graduate students and operated by the university's computer centre, was used to match roommates in a 480-room residence accommodating 960 students.

Compatible roommates (of the same sex – male) were selected by the computer on the basis of a questionnaire sent out to all applicants for accommodation. The questionnaire is also being sent to students returning to the residence this fall.

Stewart is College athletic director

Dave Stewart of Brockville has been appointed Athletic Co-ordinator of Durham College. He started his new job Monday.

A graduate of Algonquin College, Ottawa and Thousand Islands Collegiate of Brockville, Stewart has just finished a summer as Recreation director at Prescott, Ont.

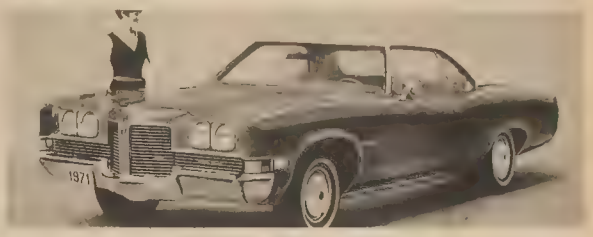
Stewart played four years of senior basketball and football in Brockville and was a member of the Algonquin College varsity basketball team which won the 1968 OCAA championship. He has coached minor hockey and baseball in Brockville for a number of years.

Stewart said Durham will have a well-diversified varsity and intramural program. The varsity will compete in hockey, basketball and football. The schedule will include games against St. Lawrence of Kingston and Cornwall, Algonquin of Ottawa, Fanshaw of London, St. Clair of Windsor, Mohawk of Hamilton and Scarboro Centennial.

Stewart said that he will be working with the Student Athletic Committee at Durham to organize an intra-mural program that he hopes will satisfy the student body.

Moss to enter new kind of race

Former Grand Prix racing car champion, Stirling Moss, will compete in North America for the first time since his retirement by driving a family sedan in Canada's newest motorsport road event, the Canadian BP Economy Run, in October, he announced on a visit to Oshawa.



Moss' Toyota Corolla 1200 will be one of up to 100 cars competing in the 1,400-mile gas mileage contest to be organized by Toronto's British Empire Motor Club. Others will include North America's new sub-compacts, General Motors' Vega and Ford's Pinto, and imports from France, Britain, Germany, Italy, Sweden and Japan. Larger domestic automobiles will also be entered.

The event will determine the optimum fuel consumption of cars with different engine sizes under ordinary driving conditions. Competitors' cars will be fuelled with BP gasoline blended to their engine requirements from the company's service stations. The overall and class winners will be those who achieve the most miles per gallon relative to the weight of the car.

The exact route ot the run is being kept secret until the start. However, it will cover varied major and minor roads in Ontario and Quebec with major control points in Toronto (start and finish), Orillia, Pembroke, Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston and Peterborough. Early starting positions for entries received by September 3 will be drawn by the organizers on that date. All entires close October 2.

A completely restyled Buick "Riviera", a new body style on all regular size Buicks, refinements on all intermediate size models and across-the-board adoption of closed combustion exhaust and new vapor emission control systems on all 1971 model Buicks have been announced. Shown here is Buick's distinctive new Riviera.

Graceful styling and engineering refinements highlight Pontiac's completely redesigned 1971 Parisienne Brougham. This series offers a variety of five engines ranging from the standard 250 horsepower 350 cubic-inch V-8 with a manual transmission to a 455 four-barrel that produces 325 horsepower. All use regular fuel. Styling features include an eye-catching wide horizontal grille that is protected by a ding-resistant tough Endurex center, a new one-piece front bumper and special paint stripes on the crowns of the front fenders and rear quarter panels. The Parisienne Brougham is available as a two-door hardtop, four-door hardtop and four-door sedan.

Who owns the bank

Ninety-three per cent of the 175,000 shareholders of Canada's chartered banks are Canadian residents and they own more than 84 per cent of outstanding stock, according to latest estimates of The Canadian Bankers' Association. The latest issue of the C.B.A. Bulletin, "Bank Stock: Home-Owned and Widely-Held", says that of 59,793 bank shareholders registered in 1949, some 45,000, or 76.11 per cent, were Canadian-resident. At the end of 1969, over 161,000 Canadians held bank stock, representing 93.09 per cent of the total of 173,466.

HOW TO SPOT SUSPECT

A new invention can provide police with a "photograph" of any wanted man from a "memory bank" of 81 pairs of eyes, 70 noses, 86 mouths and an assortment of foreheads, cheek outlines, moustaches, beards and spectacles. "Photofit" is a new system which employs a process of building up the face with actual photos of varying facial features, combinations of which can produce a total of 5,400,000,000 (5.4 billion) different faces. Invented in Britain, it costs about $225, and has been described as a "valuable innovation" by the Home Office, whose police planning department cooperated in its development.

OIL FROM GARBAGE

Scientists at a U.S. energy research centre are on the track of a commercial process to make oil from garbage. The process has reached a point where oil has been produced from wood industry waste and sewage sludge. The refuse is converted to a heavy oil by heating it in the presence of carbon monoxide and steam under pressure.

The yield of oil is about two barrels per ton of dry waste material, say the researchers.

How about building your own boat

Differences of opinion make more than horse races. They contribute greatly to the variety of boat shapes and types preferred by the boating enthusiast.

The elements, sun, wind and wave, are the same for everybody but tastes, pocketbooks and owners' time make for an amazing array of boats to meet every wish and need.

The governing factor in a great number of boats is the overall cost. Professional and amateur boat builders have learned over the years that Marine grade fir plywood speeds construction and saves money by cutting both material costs and expensive man-hours on the job.

Marine grade fir plywood, pound-for-pound stronger than steel, has a tremendous resistance to impact. Its availability in full length sheets for sides and bottoms makes it possible for the builder to achieve a watertightness difficult to obtain with other methods.

Some top professional yards building vessels of planked construction first make a bottom of full-length Marine grade fir plywood as an extra insurance against impact. These "safety bottoms" not only make the boat stronger and more watertight but they impart additional rigidity to the planked bottom for longer life in high speed use.

Plywood's versatility has made it possible for naval architects and designers to produce a limitless number of sail and power craft. These range from flat-bottomed dinghies to ocean-going yachts and power boats.

Plywood has also made it possible for the man who must do his boating with an eye to the family budget to build a family cruising boat for less than the price of a car. Thousands of amateur boatbuilders have taken advantage of the reasonably-priced or free plans listed in the boat plan catalogues published by the Plywood Manufacturers of B.C.

Included in the more than 100 boats listed in the catalogues in a modern 23ft deep vee cruiser capable of using inboard, outboard of inboard-outboard stern drive. Designed by naval architect Frank Carius, the cruiser has accommodation for four adults with enclosed head and galley. It is capable of speeds up to 33 miles per hour with a 150 H.P. engine.

This deep vee has a beam of eight feet which makes her trailable without special permit. Carius estimates the basic material cost to be around $975. Fir plywood lends itself readily to the modern deep vee hull construction.

The most popular boat on Ontario waterways today is the outboard runabout. Used for outings, fishing, summer camp, water skiing and often as a small workboat, the sturdy plywood runabout has put more people into boating than any other boat. It has allowed them to serve an apprenticeship and learn boat-handling skills with an easily-managed boat before moving on to larger craft.

Runabouts have also served as a testing work for the skills of the amateur who builds his first boat out of Marine grade fir plywood. Full-size sheets take much of the worry out of the building and make most of the amateur's precious spare time.

One runabout that has served hundreds is the 16-footer designed by haval architect John Brandlmayr. The sidewing model with a 6'2" beam has won many friends through its performance as a water ski and general fun boat in the Gulf of Georgia and Howe Sound areas of British Columbia.

Plywood has played a great part in the small boat sailing boom in North America. The eight-foot plywood Sabot has become a national sailing class. From Sabots up there are several "hot" boats in international one-design classes designed for and built from Marine grade fir plywood.

The 13ft Enterprise, with sail numbers now well over the 11,000 mark, has been the most spectacular development in modern smaller racing dinghies. Plywood's economy and simplicity made it possible for many young skippers to own an Enterprise on a slim budget.

Threatening the Enterprise in popularity is another plywood speedster, the sporty 16ft Fireball. It calls for greater sailing skill and, with its trapeze, gives the skipper and crew a greater challenge. Material costs are about $250 for both Enterprise and Fireball, with sails and rigging extra.

Designing a family cruising sailboat that will keep up with racing craft of her own size in light winds and still keep going in a blow is a tough assignment. That was the job given the late Ben Seaborn of Seattle. He came up with the 26ft plywood-hulled Thunderbird, which was a success from her first tests.

Seaborn produced a fine sailer with cruising accommodation for a family of four. Her success was aided by clear, well-illustrated plans and building instructions that give step by step advice for the home boat builder.

Most Thunderbirds have been built by amateurs. Costs are about $4,000 depending on the equipment chosen.

There's a boat of Marine grade plywood for every purpose, ranging from the dinghy to the 60ft or better ocean-going sail or power yacht.

Pepetuate best of forefathers: McKeough

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough has announced that his Department has undertaken a study to develop legislation that will assist Ontario municipalities in preserving buildings "that deserve an enduring place in our heritage."

The minister says the Community Planning Branch in his Department investigated the procedures, techniques and legislative authority of preservation programs in other provinces and countries.

"When the draft report is available — and I expect it shortly — we will discuss it with organizations that have a direct interest in the preservation of buildings with historical or architectural values," M. McKeough said.

"Following these discussions, a final study — including proposals for appropriate legislation — will then be prepared."

Earlier this year, legislation was introduced to enable the City of Kingston to designate particular buildings for protection and preservation.

"We would have preferred to have announced general legislation for all municipalities for the preservation of buildings," Mr. McKeough added. The recent study is directed toward doing this.

Mr. McKeough pointed out that there are many ways "we can perpetuate the best that our forefathers have left behind for our safekeeping" and that legislation was only a start.

Mason thinks ahead to Christmas in the heat of the summer

Even in the heat of summer, Stan Mason thinks ahead to Christmas and makes plans You have to, when you're chairman of the Christmas Cheer Fund

Begun in depression days when the less privileged were sometimes in real need at Christmas time, the fund is continued today to provide "a little extra" for less fortunate families. Even with City and Provincial assistance there are those who would have a very thin Christmas without it.

"We get the names of needy people from the City and Provincial Departments of Social Services", explains Mr Mason who is just retiring as Assistant Director of Family and Children's Services after 25 years. Names are also turned in by clergymen, private citizens or members of charitable organizations.

In order to reach as many as possible the 10 committee members who administer the Fund are drawn from such organizations as the Red Cross and Women's Welfare League. Mrs. Doris Nash, a welfare worker at Simcoe Hall and Mr. H. G. Cheseborough of the City Social Service Department co-ordinate the lists each year and Simcoe Hall is used as a clearing house for applications. Girl Guide House gives space for a collecting depot and churches sent their White Gift offerings to be distributed as needed

Single persons on the Christmas Cheer list, last year received cheques for five dollars. A married couple with no children was given seven dollars. Married couples with one child received nine dollars. Couples with more than one child are given a Christmas hamper. It contains a meat voucher, canned goods, dried fruit, apples and oranges and gifts for the children. . .always enough so there's one gift for each child.

Planning and purchasing may begin as early as May and bulk buying saves 50% of the value of the toys purchased.

Donations flow in, both cash and kind, as the festive season comes near. Last year McLaughlin Collegiate contributed a generous $450. Other schools give money, some give hampers. Some junior schools have the children bring toys for the Christmas Cheer hampers instead of gifts for each other. High schools charge an admission fee of a gift or toy for the Fund at their Christmas dances, and community-minded groups ask for names of families they can help. "We give them the larger families", smiles Mr. Mason, "because we feel they can do more for them".

Apart from private donations, the Christmas Cheer fund depends entirely on the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal.

Last year 150 hampers were distributed and 642 cheques. This year with more unemployment there will probably be more names on the list. Mrs. Sadie Thomas, secretary of the Fund and Mrs. Madge Lindsay of City Social Services are in charge of planning and packing the hampers with a team of ten or twelve volunteer workers. The Kiwanis Club takes over when the hampers are ready and members deliver the goodies to the proper addresses two or three days before Christmas.

Bandsmen wanted

A number of Oshawa band enthusiasts are planning the formation of a "high stepping parade band with a lively routine."

Calling it a "good outlet for youthful enthusiasm," and something that will help fill the gap in Oshawa youth program, the committee has called a meeting of all interested parties at the Credit Union Hall, basement meeting room, Sept. 20, at 8 p.m.

Chev celebrates its 60th birthday

Chevrolet observes its 60th anniversary in 1971 with the broadest coverage of the passenger car market in its history, according to John Z. DeLorean, general manager.

"Our new cars reflect Chevrolet's intention to keep pace with changing needs and preferences of buyers throughout the 1970's," DeLorean said.

"From the most luxurious full-sized Chevrolet ever built to our new Vega 2300 economy car, we have a 1971 automobile to match each customer's life style. Each car line responds to today's strong consumer desire for maximum value, utility and quality."

The new Chevrolet, Station Wagons, Chevelle, Monte Carlo, Nova, Camaro and Corvette models go on sale in dealerships on Tuesday, September 29.

The regular Chevrolet and full size Chevrolet station wagons have the biggest change of any year in recent history. Chevelle has a new front end treatment, Monte Carlo gets added distinction, Nova has a larger base engine and there are refinements for the popular Camaro and Corvette models.

Chevrolet offers three sizes of wagons, each with a different type of tailgate.

The full-size wagons introduce a "Glide-Away" disappearing tailgate. Mid-size wagons have dual-action gates and the new small Vega Kammback has a one-piece rear window-gate that swings up for maximum accessibility.

Each of the eight car lines has special emphasis upon emissions control. Every Chevrolet car in 1971 is equipped with an Evaporation Control System (ECS) which significantly reduces fuel vapor emissions.

In addition, Chevrolet for 1971 has developed a Combination Emission Control (CEC) valve mounted on the carburetor which reduces exhaust emissions.

The CEC valve also improves engine operation and permits lower idle speed settings. This helps eliminate engine after-run or dieseling and minimizes automatic transmission creep, reduces engine noise, improves engine cooling and idle fuel economy.

All Chevrolet engines have been designed to operate efficiently on the new no-lead or low-lead gasolines. In addition to the lower exhaust emissions attainable with this engine/fuel combination, there are benefits in longer life for spark plugs, exhaust system and other engine components.

If these no-lead, low-lead fuels are not available, any leaded gasoline with a research octane number of 91 or higher may be used.

Chevrolet in 1971 is publishing two horsepower ratings for each engine — the gross output without engine accessories and net or as-installed output of the same engine with accessories.

The net or as-installed test method follows recommended procedure of the Society of Automotive Engineers and represents actual performance of an engine as installed in an automobile.

All Chevrolet car lines use a sealed side terminal battery in 1971. Because the electrical path is completely sealed, this battery eliminates corrosion at electrical terminals.

All Chevrolet engines in 1971 use slim-line spark plugs. This new plug design makes possible use of a hotter plug to provide increased resistance to fouling.

Fall along the river

Nowhere can its full flavour be better seen and felt than among the tranquil surroundings at Upper Canada Village.

And, at Old Fort Henry at Kingston as the "1867" Guard goes through its final paces in the crisp September air, there is a special Autumn touch.

Both sites, operated by the St. Lawrence Parks Commission, reflect a particularly poignant mirror of pioneer Canadian life.

The Village, now in its tenth season of operation, closes October 15th.

The Fort, with its 105-man university student guard, ends its season September 15th.

Each has a particularly revealing story to tell.

At Upper Canada Village, located near Morrisburg just off 401 Highway, there is the simple but solid pioneer style.

Fall, and Thanksgiving, were always a time for stocktaking during the days of the early settlers.

Their homes were hewed from the nearby forest and offered durable, comfortable shelter.

These features can still be seen today in the settlement buildings at Upper Canada Village.

While the forest was a trap for the untrained settler, it provided much of the necessities of life for those who knew how to use them.

At any pioneer Thanksgiving, there was much to delight the heart, and stomach, of the struggling settlers.

Wild game, fish from nearby crystal clear streams, ale and coffee made from roots and bark, baked beans, pumpkin sauce and pie, cornmeal mush, rye and "injun" bread.

There was also an abundance of wild fowl . . . and near Upper Canada Village, the Fall migration of Canada Geese is an unusual sight.

Thousands begin to arrive at the sanctuary in mid-October for a stopover on their long journey.

Many of the birds are fed daily by attendants during the migration.

Another Fall feature at Upper Canada Village is cheese making.

Daily, nearly 3,000 pounds of milk is processed into 100 pounds of cheese in a wood-fired metal vat.

Along with the cheese, about 200 pounds of curd is also processed.

Cured cheese, which takes about eight weeks to produce, is sold to visitors along with the curd.

Motorcycle course 600- graduate success

Ever since the introduction of light-weight, inexpensive motorcycles which have taken a sales lead over the classic 1200 c.c.'s with powerful engines and masses of chrome during the past years, motorcycling has taken a big leap in popularity.

Applicants for motorcycle licences now range from housewives on Hondas to middle-aged men on mini-bikes . . . though young people of both sexes still own the bulk of Ontario's 40,000 licensed motorcycles.

The growth in the popularity of motorcycling has meant an increased need for instruction for the many novices trying their motorcycle driver licences each year. In 1969 the Department of Transport introduced a new motorcycle training program. This training package is being used by many interested groups and organizations which hope to offer it to the public for the first time this year.

But the forerunner in the area of motorcycle instruction still remains the Ottawa Safety Council, which started its training program in the chilly month of January, 1967.

Safety Council president Jim Bancroft, who recognized the need for such a course in Ottawa as early as 1965, put its organization into the capable hands of Stu Munro, a former motorcycle racer and instructor with the Auto Cycle Union of England. The program was set up along the lines of that conducted by the Auto Cycle Union, and incorporated improvements suggested by Col. Knowlton of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals and the Ottawa R.C.M.P.

The first course was conducted in an Esso garage and attracted 25 applicants. Now instructors reluctantly have to turn away as many as 50 candidates at each enrolment due to limited machines and facilities for training. During their 3½ years of continuous operation, the Ottawa motorcycle course has trained over 600 students.

Over the past couple of years, the Ottawa Safety Council motorcycle course has had some interesting graduates — husband and wife teams, a grandmother and a grandfather, and once a whole family — mother, father and four children, who intended to buy three high-powered bikes for long-distance touring.

Most of their graduates, however, are teenagers of both sexes. When you ask them how they heard about the course, the response is usually, a "A friend told me." While little publicity is given the course, news of it spreads by word-of-mouth and the high school grapevine. For one course enrolment 125 people turned up to put in their applications.

Since the courses are limited to about 50 students, many of these had to be turned away. "They wont' wait — they still go away and learn on their own," says Ottawa Safety Council president Jim Bancroft.

"But where, and how, is what concern us."

Garden notes

Landscaping is a challenge

Landscaping the grounds may seem very difficult to a novice gardener, but it is merely child's play when compared to re-landscaping a newly acquired established property which already has an old overgrown garden. Yet this problem has to be faced by many inexperienced gardeners every year.

Such a garden has most likely been planned around the facilities and living habits of another era, and most new owners are at a loss to know how to revise and recondition it for present day use and enjoyment.

The best and most practical plan is to leave the garden as it is and try to adjust plantings here and there as a compromise. In doing this, make a rough chart every two weeks of the plants in bloom and decide which ones you want to keep.

Wait until mid-September and then take everything out that is movable. Set aside the plants you want and throw out those you don't need to fit in with your plans. In the meantime order some plants you would like to include.

This plan of action for renewing the older garden gives an immediate sense of 'clearing.' Then follows the creative planning that is one of the many thrills of gardening.

When you are making general observations on the performance of individual plants during the summer, also note the way in which the old garden fails to meet the living needs of your family. This information may then be used as a basis for the new design.

In general, the trend in family gardens today is to keep the flowers in close to the house, where they may be enjoyed from the patio.

A distinctive planting may be made to emphasize or disguise a particular feature of the garden landscape, either to enhance its appearance or to screen it from view.

An airy, spacious effect is often achieved by uprooting a tired, worn-out hedge and opening an overgrown non-descript border. The new plantings should relate to the house, providing perspective, scale, form and a succession of seasonal interests.

Tradition and association play an important part in planning a garden for family living. Fragrances, for example, are especially persistent in the memory. Long hardy favorites of an old home garden, such as lilacs, shrubby roses, herbs peonies, clematis and spireas are still good plants to select.

At the other extreme is the inspiring assortment of plant types or new cultivars that have become popular in home gardening because of their suitability to contemporary garden designing. Such plants are usually selected for container planting.

These include such succulents as cacti, aloes, erassulas and other sun-loving types, geraniums and sun-tolerant house plants. All will offer a great variety of forms, color and textures that harmonize with structural and paving materials.

An overgrown garden may be brought back to an orderly state by heavy pruning in the early spring before growth begins. This applies particularly to deciduous materials. Most hedges may be cut to within a foot of the ground. Shrubs or small trees may be topped back and the lateral branches shortened or thinned.

Shrubs that develop in a clump formation may be cut to the ground if the canes are weak and leggy. Sometimes a better plan is to cut out some of the older or heaviest canes, giving the young vigorous ones more light and space in which to develop. Evergreens that have become shapeless and straggly, with lower branches weak and thin, might just as well be removed as there is small chance of their recovery. This is especially true of cedars and junipers. An exception is the yew, which will put out new growth from mature wood if pruned back. This should be done in early spring.

Shrubs that have been drastically pruned or cut back will require a two-to-four-year period to grow back into shape, but often a showy vigorous shrub is created because of the well-established root systems. Recovery can be hastened by applying a complete commercial fertilizer at the time of the initial cutting back

RAPPING IS IN

As today's teen-agers would say, "rapping" is the order of the day as far as the strike scene in Oshawa goes.

And as Toronto has been saying for some time, that is where all the action is.

Negotiations were being carried on yesterday in Toronto in both the General Motors and Ontario County Board of Education labor disputes Officials from GM were talking with members of Local 222, United Auto Workers and board representatives were negotiating with members of Local 251, Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing striking board secretaries

In each case, officials on both sides were reluctant to say much more than that talks were going on. A GM spokesman did acknowledge, however, that benefits were under discussion in the master level negotiations

Several minor incidents connected with the strike occurred at General Motors earlier this week. On Monday, an air conditioning unit in one of the offices began acting up and repairmen could not get through the picket lines to rectify the problem. Salaried employees spent the day sweltering in above-eighty degree temperatures

On Tuesday morning, the salaried employees again were inconvenienced when large numbers of striking workers plugged the entrances to the south plant so that cars could not get through

The Ontario Board-Local 251 negotiations yesterday were a continuation of talks last Friday. Douglas Lindsay discussed matters on behalf of the union while

In which Margaret defines a hippie and there's an uproar over rock concerts

By Peter Brouwer
editor

What is a hippie?

A hippie is one who hangs around corners all the time, with no place to go, and one who needs a wash.

That sums up a question and an answer in city council this week. Alderman Ross Gibson asked the question; Controller Margaret Shaw provided the answer

Is city council worried about hippies?

Well, it's not that simple, you see.

The hippie thing added substance on Monday night to an otherwise dull council meeting. And the hippie storm erupted as unexpectedly as a hurricane when council was trying to approve the minutes of the parks and recreation committee

These contained a resolution about Memorial Park, and rock concerts on Sunday.

Alderman John Humphreys asked the mayor if he could speak on the subject, because he had been away this summer when it was first discussed, and when it resulted in the cancellation of a couple of Sunday rock concerts in the centrally located park

Shirts and ties

This is a public park, Humphreys argued, and the type of music and the age groups attending are irrelevant in a decision about Sunday usage for music. If the Salvation Army or another quiet group, with shirts and ties, were to ask for the park there would be no objections, the alderman argued. He also spoke of narrowmindedness on the part of the stop-the-rock-concert group and added he would prefer the concerts to these young people "going into the fields at night, smoking pot."

And, said Humphreys, "music includes rock and roll."

Alderman Ed McNeely said the decision this summer had not really been one of council because council had referred the issue of rock concerts on Sunday to the Parks and Recreation Committee, "with power to act."

A number of other aldermen made explanations.

"Hippie programs"

Then came Mrs. Shaw saying she was "opposed to hippie programs in Memorial Park at any time." She expounded on the fact that Memorial Park was dedicated to the dead of two world wars, and that she would feel different about these concerts if they were held at a park such as Alexandra or Lakeview. She called on council to "consider the older people also." (A number of complaints from residents of the park area originally brought on the city's move to ban rock concerts from the park on Sundays.)

Mayor Bruce Mackey emphasized that the concerts in question had been scheduled by the recreation department.

Then it was Alderman Gibson's turn. He referred back to Mrs. Shaw's hippie reference and asked for an explanation.

And then came the "a hippie, in my opinion, is one you see hanging around corners all the time, with no place to go, and with long long hair and in need of a wash. And I like long hair to a point, but I don't like filth and dirt."

And, replied Gibson, "if the word hippie means hanging around corners, in 1939 we had thousands hanging around corners, who went off to the war as brave soldiers

"Let's not hear too much about noise," Gibson said, referring to the music of the thirties, and adding fuel to the fire by telling Mrs. Shaw it was remarks such as hers that caused the generation gap.

Never on Sunday?

Alderman McNeely then wondered if it had been the Parks and Recreation Committee's intention never to have rock concerts at Memorial Park on Sundays.

And Alderman Murdoch suggested Controller Shaw withdraw what he called her "unfortunate comment." (She didn't.) The alderman also suggested a study be made to determine the noise levels during the concerts under discussion and other concerts at the park.

Controller C.E. McIlveen, chairman of the Parks and Recreation Committee, said the park should be used on Sunday . . . "and for what the people want, and that includes the young people." He argued the dead soldiers would want to see it used by the young people.

Controller Shaw shot back once more with an "I don't know where you pick up the idea I'm against rock and roll music. There's a lot of rock and roll I like, and a lot I don't like. But I feel the older citizens must be given consideration as well as the younger ones. Memorial Park has been a special Park for a great number of years. Some people have lived there for 60 or 70 years."

All this brought the whole thing back in the committee's lap, following a promise from the commiteee to study it, complete with noise level equipment.

Watchdog board to rule on ours

Oshawa voters may be in the dark for a while yet about the number of x-es they'll be asked to put on the ballot, come December. We may, or we may not have a Board of Control to elect next time around.

The Ontario Municipal Board reserved its decision Monday, when a public hearing in the city hall council chambers was told the pros and cons of the Board.

The OMB's Harold Roberts and William Shaub heard more than a dozen politician and non-politician and amateur-politician witnesses at the hearing. Some felt Oshawa cannot manage without a Board of Control. Others felt Oshawa can no longer manage with one.

City council is on record as favoring abolishment of the Board, but a minority of council feels strongly that it should be retained.

It is now up to the OMB — the watchdog of the department of municipal affairs — to give Oshawa a yes or no.

The reasons pro and con have been discussed at length in Oshawa's news media. There will be no further discussion of these in this newspaper, until the OMB takes the next step.

GM: home away from home

Women in Oshawa who have taken a job at General Motors to get out of the house and away from the drudgery of housework had a surprise in store for them last week

They turned up at work and instead of sitting down at the typewriter, were handed vacuum cleaners. Others were asked to empty waste baskets. Everyone is urged to clean up the sinks in the washroom after use.

These are some of the effects of the present strike of GM's Local 22, United Auto Workers. The office staff, allowed to enter the plant, has had to do its own caretaking work.

Some of them are not too happy about it. "I took a job here to get away from housework," said one stenographer. "I may as well be at home."

Another woman, who insists she isn't a feminist, says this cleaning work has finally shown her what the exponents of feminine equality are talking about.

'I'm the only girl in the office and even though all the men have little or nothing to do, they automatically expect me to do the cleaning up," she said

'We don't give a damn'- Oshawa

Oshawa residents are fatalistic.

This is the opinion of one travel agent contacted recently in a This Week survey on the reaction of Oshawa travellers to the recent upswing in aircraft hijacking.

"People are getting used to it," he said. "There's been so much of it lately that they've become apathetic."

He added that some people were holding off on their plans until the Middle East situation is over, but these types are in the minority.

"Really, we have had very few changes of plans. We did have one woman go by train instead of taking a plane, but that's about it."

Well, strike or no strike, the new cars, and all the hullabaloo that goes with them, have arrived.

Since I was five years old I have been fascinated by cars. Perhaps more so than kids who were born and raised in Canada and for whose family by about 1940 the car was just a means of transportation, as it is for you and me today. When I was five there were three cars in our town. One belonged to the doctor — an old Citroen with the big wide fenders and front wheel drive; another belonged to the local taxi company — a Chevrolet, built in Oshawa for all I know, and the third car was an Adler owned by a dashing young man with a moustache, who was reported to be shady character. All small Dutch boys were fascinated by cars.

Today, with the repair bills these monsters bring and the enormous slice of the family budget they seem to require, the fascination has been somewhat subdued. Still, I've been looking forward for several weeks now to see all the new things the manufacturers have come up with.

I don't know how much of it is really new each year, because sometimes the world of new cars seems to follow the fashion world, and I won't be all that surprised if one of the three big manufacturers will be coming out soon with a car equipped with all things . . . running boards. (Remember the hide-away headlights? Well, you'll also remember how last year the all-new won't hide-away headlights appeared.)

Along with this fascinating new model introduction period has come something editors across the North American continent must delight in. I call it the annual editor's skill test. And it has nothing to do with driving. You can do it at your desk, and it goes this way: Take a typical Big Three news release on one of their big, big cars. Sharpen the pencil, and go to work. The ideas is to make the press release half its original size by just stroking out the adjectives.

I will agree that some of the releases put out by the writers in the Canadian public relations departments of the various manufacturers contain their fair share of adjectives too, but compared to our U.S. friends they're sprinkling adjectives, while America downpours them.

Take for example the 1971 Cadillac news release, which originates across the border:

This car features not just "new styling", but "dramatic all-new" styling; it has an "elegant grille" and features "an in-depth frame" in each opening; its "massive one-piece hood is longer and wider"; a side view of the car "typifies the new architectural concept of 1971"; a new wide rocker sill molding provides "added protection from stone abrasion"; the "bevel of the long hood continues through the belt line to the rear quarter" and "adding a proud touch on the hood is a new stand-up Cadillac crest, spring-mounted to meet safety requirements and resist damage."

That fascinating bit of information brings me to only the third page of the eight-page release.

Still, even without all that, it's a helluva car.

Of a long haired gas pumper on welfare

Just last week we heard something that left us hopping mad. It was yet another welfare story.

It concerned the case of an 18-year old Oshawa boy of "good family" employed at an Oshawa service station. The young man in question was employed to pump gasoline. He was of the long haired variety. Extra long it was, we might add. (At this point we must state that we have no objection whatever to the length of one's hair. Do as you like, as long as it doesn't hurt anyone else.)

It appears the young man's presence at the driver's window of customers' upset the squares. And it was made abundantly clear to the proprietor that if he wished to continue to enjoy the patronage of certain customers, the guy with the long hair would have to leave the scene. (You might argue at this point that the squares were bigoted. You are right. They are. However, human nature being what it is, they were in a position to exercise petty power and the temptation was too strong to resist.

Accordingly, to quote an old saying, he who pays the piper calls the tune, this particular payer-proprietor suggested a haircut might improve business.

The piper in question, being a man of principle, declined. Whereupon the payer declined further pay.

This piper the took off at high speed for guess where . . . . yes, you're right, the welfare office.

If you were a welfare officer, and this particular piper appeared before you, asking for financial help, would you give it to him?

On the one hand he has clearly left what we must consider to be steady employment of his own volition and therefore, it could be argued "let him starve." Or, that alternatively, he wasn't very hungry to begin with.

On the other hand, this man became unemployed because he was adhering to a principle he believed in — the freedom to chose between long and short hair.

Has society any business penalizing a man because he sticks to his principles, however out of step they may appear to the majority of the squares?

And what about the service station proprietor? Perhaps he was a bit spineless? We would suggest that perhaps if anyone is to blame, he, of all the parties that contributed to this piper's dismissal, is the most guilty.

You'll recall some 30 years ago that Mr. Chamberlain tried to appease Mr. Hitler. Isn't Mr. Garage proprietor trying to appease Mr. Square? Does the length of the piper's hair really alter the cleanliness of the windshield or the quality of the gasoline? Of course it doesn't. So why dismiss him? Far better he tell the customers he provides service not decoration.

Where does this place the young man now on welfare, and more important, what kind of opinion does this give the younger generation of the older? We preach democracy, but we rarely appear to practice it.

As taxpayers, we resent having to support from welfare funds an able bodied young man. Perhaps he should appeal, or perhaps the welfare department should appeal to the Human Rights Commission. When it comes to discrimination, it seems no different to us whether you're discriminated against because you have long hair or whether your skin is black, because if we are to live up to our principles which our politicians and our clergy and other distinguished people are always preaching to us about — there must be room in our society for the long haired ones.

In short, what has happened here is that because some twit taxpayers don't like long hair, the rest of us have got to support this unfortunate youth.

P.S. We hate brushcuts, and if we see anyone at the gas pumps with short hair, watch out . . .

Don't insult our intelligence, politicians!

Look how Bob Stanfield kisses babies' bottoms.

Look how Bob Stanfield drives the horses on the haywagon.

Look how Bob Stanfield sips cider.

Look how Bob Stanfield watches midget wrestlers wrestle big wrestlers.

Look how. . .

Enough. We looked at Bob Stanfield watching and kissing and driving and sipping just last Sunday. . .And we were not impressed. We were thoroughly depressed, especially to look at Bob Stanfield trying to do "the Trudeau thing." Let the PM drive the bulldozers and the horses and let him do the kissing and the diving. He's good at it. What Bob Stanfield is not good at we saw at Sunday's annual Progressive Conservative picnic, out in Swiss Chalet Park. What he is good at somehow never came to the fore.

And this whole picnic thing points up the big question mark you can put behind the political activity of either of the two big old-line parties today.

In days of yore, when this country was in the process of getting dry behind the ears, such activities as we have enumerated were the cheap thrills of the era. Has the party exhausted its collective imagination to the extent it has to rely on these hoary old chestnuts to keep the party faithful amused?

As a matter of fact, we were always led to believe that party picnics are an opportunity to reward all those faithful party workers who gave up their time in bringing about the successful return to power of their party. On such occasions a handshake or even a benign smile from the VIP or GOM was sufficient reward to keep them going for another four years.

Since they didn't win, this set of ground rules automatically doesn't apply.

What should have happened is for the party faithful to gather together to be given a cram course by the best professional talent available, on the party's thinking on a wide variety of subjects, and more important to be instilled with the will to win. In other words, when you're out in the cold, get out and hustle. Kissing babies bottoms doesn't win elections.

In this context the Liberals are not much better. They not only do not tell their own party what their policy is on a variety of subjects, they don't tell anyone else either. It would seem as though their philosophy is "until an emergency arises in any given field, leave well enough alone." For example — long ago they knew the postal contract was going to run out. So why in heavens name couldn't they have stopped beating around the bush a year ago and afforded us the continuity of service when this last contract ran out.

We will tell you why. We all take it lying down, and we still show up at picnics and we are so dazzled by the sun's reflection off the GOM's head, that we forget to ask the awkward questions that should be asked.

Pressing on

A tip of the hat this week to "the Englishman."

That's what a lot of people doing business with the Oshawa Harbour Commission call Wilfred A. Gillberry, harbour manager.

The president of Oshawa's latest industrial addition, summing up his reasons for picking Oshawa as a site, said on Friday, "I don't think we could have been persuaded to locate anywhere else. The harbor commission put no pressure on us at all . . . I don't like pressure, and that's what made up my mind."

System must be altered top to bottom, says Melnichuk

Sir:

You are not the first such well meaning, yet nonetheless naive editorialist (nor will you be the last) who offers simple and impractical solutions to very complex labour situations.

The proposition of labour courts, compulsory arbitration, restricted power and scope of unions (with a national patriotic flavour), all have been eagerly and repeatedly seized upon as the salvation of all mankind and peaceful bliss for the community.

Yet all too obvious is the inconsistent lack of concern, or suggestion of any meaningful restraint upon the managements of industry and commerce, whose "democratic rights" in the interests of "free enterprise" are considered sacrosanct. Employers who wreak havoc upon the lives of their employees, their families and the communities in which they live, by free wheeling speed-ups, automation, relocation and/or discontinuation of an operation, are accepted and even blessed by the same people who condemn labour unions for their seemingly self interest. The time lost and misery involved in lay-offs makes a strike scene seem like a picnic by comparison.

Everyone deplores the fact of a strike, and most particularly the strikers. Yet unless society is prepared to accept a double standard i.e. the imposition of legislation equally upon employer and employee, involving the ways and means of productions, profit margin, continuing job security, wages and working conditions, the age old struggle between the buyer and seller of labour must continue. One can hardly support the basic principles of freedom and democracy as a one sided sword

The press and business leaders generally express the view that a strike is caused because the demands of the workers are "unreasonable". This is a strange comment from those professing a strong belief in free-enterprise principles. Under our system no man is supposed to question any persons right to make all the money they can by whatever legal means open to him. If a man, or group of men, by clever, shrewd or sharp business practices can make a few million dollars a year no one is supposed to question his right to do so. If people by virtue of their talents, professional training and a strong organization can boost their incomes to over $30,000 a year, it is all in line with the same free enterprise principles. If garbage collectors can make more money by becoming organized in a strong union, and through strike action, who can reasonably blame them for doing so? If farmers, teachers, nurses and what have you can boost their incomes through their organizations, who is to condemn them for doing so — or at least trying? The name of the game in our private enterprise society is money making. To this end we are to devote ourselves with our talents, knowledge, skill and our individual or collective powers.

What constitutes the degree of what is reasonable? What about the doctors demand for a 30% increase? If $30,000 (a very conservative figure) is not enough for a doctor, is $8,000 too much for an auto worker(If we can justify incomes of over $100,000 a year in capital gains made without working, can we regard $7,000 or $8,000 for people who work (and tediously) for a living in a hundred and one vital occupations.

Actually it is quite pointless to discuss the question of whether the income demands of any group are reasonable or unreasonable because under the principle by which wealth is distributed in our present society such terms have no relevance. We have as yet not established what constitutes a reasonable income, what is a fair price, what is a reasonable profit. Everything is wide open and he gets the most who can grab off the most

There is only one of two attitudes one can take on this issue. We can accept the present ways of distributing incomes as the best and only way, which case we must accept as inevitable the eternal struggle and clashes between contending groups — the endless strikes and the attendant loss and dislocation of economic life, and frustration, often resulting in temper and violence

We can accept as desirable or inevitable the uncontrolled struggle to make money with no holds barred, and everyone "free" to grab all he can by whatever means, with the price of goods going ever upward making a mockery out of any gain — and so on and on the rat race goes. Or, Mr. Editor, we can devote our efforts towards a more sane and just order of society. In a country as rich as Canada, with all the potential for producing the means for exceptionally high living standards for every citizen, with a fully developed modern technology, with highly trained scientists, professors, technicians and workers, can we not devise a more rational and civilized way of distributing wealth? Must we forever be governed by the law of the jungle, with all of us haplessly reduced to acting like famished hogs at the feeding trough?

Attacking the problem piece-meal, or attempting to strangle any particular class or segment of our society within the framework of our present system is negative and pointless. The entire system must be altered from top to bottom. The challenge remains before us

Stores raise prices after strikes, she says

Sir:

I read your letters in the 15th This Week with interest.

I lived in Oshawa many years before a union was established in Oshawa for the workers of General Motors of Canada — when it did and during the course of time the unions' contracts with G.M. came up for renewal; the union had quite a list of demands for their men at each renewal date.

I believe at first things were not too bad, for the Union was American as was General Motors. During the course of time though, the Union increased its demands and then the 'fun' started.

As you are aware this has been going on for many years, and one wonders if there will ever be a lessening of the demands by the Union or even an end!

It has never failed that when the strikers were successful in their demands — the news travelled fast, and all (or nearly all) the stores in Oshawa, raised their prices and still do.

I, being a widow with a limited income, find this unfair and also a hardship — and I often wonder why the city council allows this sort of thing to be perpetrated.

Why do they raise the prices, and yet no one (as far as I know) complains to those people who collect our taxes!

Pleads for another dog

Sir,

My sympathy to Mrs. L. Sager who is sick of barking dogs and their inconsiderate owners. But Mrs. Sager would bark too if she was tied out in a back yard day and night, year after year; the utter boredom would drive her to it.

Many of the dogs are not taken off their chains ever, to have a run and get their energy used up.

There is a dog so tied at Burk St. only this one hasn't even got a shelter to crawl under or into when it pours rain, all it can do is curl up tight on the wet ground and try to withstand the elements during the chill wet weather.

I wish that dog would bark every minute of every day and night until it gets help.

*"With Your Permission,
We Would Like To Get Personal"*

HARLEIGH'S OF GREEN ST. LTD.
121 GREEN STREET, WHITBY – 668-7161.

by tom douglas

There's a feminist joke going the rounds in Oshawa about the little boy asking his mother, a member of the Women's Lib, what God is like. The mother begins her reply by saying: "Well, first of all, SHE . . ."

One would hope that the Libbies aren't quite that determined, but it wouldn't surprise a lot of us if in the next federal election they decided to run their own candidate for prime minister

Many men would just laugh at such a possibility but before we get too complacent about our male superiority, let's remember that Samson probably gave out a few chuckles at the thought of a woman bringing about his downfall

No doubt, Henry VI of England also laughed heartily over his cup of mead when someone suggested that his troops were in danger now that a young girl from Domremy, France was leading the French battalions

And Richard Burton probably gave out with a loud guffaw on the set of the movie Cleopatra when someone suggested that his well-stacked co-star just might be the one to settle him down

No, sir, it isn't inconceivable that the Women's Liberation Movement, which we like to refer to as the Frustrated Hausfrau Society, could successfully run a national campaign. After all, women do hold the balance of voting power and if election day were to fall during the World Series, well .

Anyway, just for the fun of it (and if you've read this far you obviously don't have much else to do) let's assume that Elizabeth Manly has just won the election as Canada's first female prime minister. Her campaign cry of "You'd never catch me consorting with the likes of Gerda Munsinger" was the deciding factor that swung the vote to her.

Now that she is Canada's 16th prime minister, Libbie decides to make "a few changes" that in actuality revolutionalize Canada's political way of life

The House of Commons is done over in chintz and lace and the Speaker's chair is moved "over to that far corner next to the rubber plant".

The maple leaf on Canada's flag is changed to a bouquet of red roses, the lion on our coat-of-arms to a cocker spaniel and our national anthem, with new lyrics is sung to the tune of "Stardust".

Important diplomatic decisions are made over a game of bridge and foreign visitors are received at an afternoon garden party or a Tupperware demonstration

And should the horrible moment arrive when the world is brought to the brink of a nuclear holocaust, the new prime minister will react to the news the way her forebears have done for centuries

She'll sit right down and have herself a darn good cry

Tax men meet here

Tax collectors from widely separated municipalities in Ontario mixed business and pleasure at their convention here last week.

On the entertainment agenda were a city bus tour and visits to Camp Samac, the Civic Auditorium and Pool and the Civic Administration Complex; a wine and cheese party with a singsong led by George Campbell accompanied at the organ by his wife Marion and a banquet, hosted by the City of Oshawa

Alderman Ross Gibson representing Mayor Bruce Mackie, distinguished himself with his witty after-dinner speech. The Horseless Carriagemen, the Oshawa Chapter of the SPEBSQSA entertained with old favorites in close harmony and their quartet, "The Four-Door Four", sang an original version of "My Shanty in Old Shantytown", dedicated to the tax collector and Oshawa's Own in particular.

ciety as a weirdo or crackpot

This statement could be made today about a young person of the same description, but it wasn't. It was made of a man who lived 2,000 years ago.

His only dreams were of total love and peace for his followers, and the generations of mankind to come. And look what has happened to the world of today.

Have you ever stopped to think of the number of years wars have been fought? What's it all in aid of? Peace? Huh!

Sure, drugs are one escape from this, but only for a short time. On coming back, reality is a slap in the face. Nowadays, who needs drugs? Pick up a newspaper. Turn on the TV. There's war, hate, prejudice, poverty, destruction and famine. That's enough to stone a person.

And what's being done? You can't do anything, and we can't do anyting. Why put us down?

Jim and Mary, "hair kids."

J.R. Backus, business administrator for the board and Stan Bowman, a Toronto consultant, handled the board's side of the issue.

Meanwhile, a board official said no reprisals would be taken against students who have been helping the Ontario Board secretaries man their picket lines.

He said that the students have been doing so on their own time and as long as it continued under these circumstances, the board would do nothing about it.

He added, however, that if the students were to begin cutting classes for picketing duty, they would be reprimanded

Drug Abuse News No. 12

"MAINLINING"-- THE QUICKEST ROUTE TO THE END.

Drug abusers are noted for their curiosity. Right now, according to reliable statistics, hundreds of thousands of teenagers and even grammer school students are experimenting with dangerous illicit drugs.

The more sophisticated, influenced by unscrupulous "drug pushers," are being told to speed up the drug effects by "mainlining", which is the injection of forbidden drugs directly into the veins.

Because of lack of precautions for the proper sterilization of the medicine droppers, hypodermic needles and other crude methods used, "mainliners" are suffering hepatitis, septicemia, tetanus and acute endocarditis. Any of these can be deadly.

The next issue of Drug Abuse News will discuss our conclusions about Drug Abuse and reasons why experimenters with illicit drugs are most unwise.

Located in the Mid Town Mall, behind the new City Hall of King W. Beside O.M. Sales

by jo aldwinckle

Did you know that the Municipal Tax Collectors of Ontario had their own Association and that they have just held a successful convention here in Oshawa?

I hadn't known of such an organization until this summer when Clarence Cox, Oshawa Tax Collector, told me about the planned conference of which he was chairman, as well as president of the association

"Is this a mutual defence association?" I asked, which amused Mr. C. "Oh, no," he replied, "we try to make tax-paying easier for the public and I wondered if you would do something for us. . . ?"

I thought of all the things I would like to do to tax collectors but instead, I accepted his invitation to address a luncheon

As it turned out, due to circumstances beyond my control, I was a "no show" and I feel very sorry about that. However, maybe I'm lucky to be here now. It was like this

I was to fly from Frankfurt, Germany, on Sunday morning, September 13. For some unknown reason we were two hours late taking off. Security guards with sub-machine guns on their backs were patrolling the airport

We had been aloft only a short time when the captain announced that we would put down at Amsterdam. This seemed odd to me because Amsterdam is only one hour by jet from Frankfurt and we were set for an eight-hour flight

As we bounced on the runway, the plane jolted badly and I thought "There goes a tire" and, — woops, we did it again. No panic; everyone sat upright and belted and waited

After twenty minutes or so came instructions to take handbaggage and vacate the plane. We filed into Schipol Airport, the quietest and most orderly airport in Europe, and the long night began

An hour later we were served dinner. Then we repaired to the lounge. I started to work on my speech for the next day. Others wandered around the souvenir shops; bought magazines and pocket books; looked at the art exhibit, rocked babies, curled up under a coat to sleep or disappeared into the bar

By 9 p.m. we were issued coupons for a supper snack. At 11:30 we were told that we were to be taken to an hotel for the night

I wondered if it would be the Krasnapolski, one of Amsterdam's finest. It wasn't. It wasn't even in Amsterdam. We were driven off into the dark, wet night to the City of Utrecht and there, at 12:30 a.m deposited at a new Holiday Inn

Management coped nobly with the assault of 170 tired, ill-assorted passengers, producing twin double-bedded rooms for families and twin beds for pairs and singles

It took a while, but it worked. Strangers were introduced and went off contentedly to share a room

Our suitcases were held in bond at the airport and thereby hangs a tale. In my final packing, anticipating a daytime flight, I had packed overnight necessities in my suitcase and in my flightbag I had nested my two cameras and three bottles of wine which had been presented to me at village festivals on the Rhine. That was it, — not even a toothbrush.

We were called at 6 a.m. and after a hearty Dutch breakfast were off and aloft by 10:30 a.m. in the same plane with a different crew. One last element was enlightening. We were advised that some of the passengers would be searched. They were, by armed guards.

Only one man was heard to protest the delay and he was swiftly silenced by those near him. There were all sorts of rumours but the facts of the delayed flight are not likely to be revealed. Enough to say that we landed safely in Toronto after an air journey that took us beyond the North Sea in a wide arc over Greenland and Labrador.

Home to a stack of mail and 'phone messages. Among them an invitation to the second annual dance planned by the United Council of Veterans' Associations at the Polish Veterans' Centre this coming Saturday.

The ballroom is to be decorated with the colors of the Council Associates, the Sikorski Polish Vets., the Navy Vets, the Canadian Corps and Veterans of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Invited guests include civic dignitaries and presidents of local clubs. The Polish Veterans' Ladies' Auxiliary is undertaking a super buffet.

Sutherland-Aitchison

Saint Mary's of the People church was the setting for the marriage of Lorraine Sutherland to Jim Aitchison. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Sutherland and the groom the son of Mrs. Lorraine Aitchison, all of Oshawa. Father McHenry officiated at the Sept. 5 ceremony

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white French lace dress with a full skirt and train, seed pearls trimmed the neck line with long lily point sleeves. The veil was white french lace, petals trimmed with seed pearls and was a four tier illusion shoulder length veil

Maid of honor was her sister Lee Sutherland, and her bridesmaids were, Mrs. Marlane March, sister of the bride, Debbie Sutherland, Susan Nash, cousin of the groom, Helen Coe, cousin of the bride, all of Oshawa Junior Bridesmaid Judy Sutherland, flower girls, Sandra Cullen from Whitby and Christine McLean of Oshawa

Best man was Jack Nash of Oshawa, and ushers were James Shields, Dave March, Lloyd Cullen of Windosr, and Rick Babcock.

Following a reception at the Canadian Legion Hall in Oshawa, the couple left for a honeymoon trip to Bermuda. The bride wore a blue pant suit trimmed in white lace with silver accessories

The couple will make their home in Waterloo, Ontario

About hijackings

el agent echoed the sentiments of the first. She finds that people are not only apathetic about the whole situation, but actually joke about it

"Many of them laugh about it. When we're making plans with them, they say things like 'Well, if I get to France, I'd like to see so-and-so' None of them seem very worried."

She added that she has had one postponement, a nine-year-old girl who was to fly to England to go to school

"The parents were reluctant to send her with the current situation in the Middle East, but this is merely a postponement, not a cancellation."

This Week interviewed several people buying tickets at the travel agencies and found in each case that they were not very worried about the situation

"If it's going to happen, it's going to happen," was the way one person put it. "I could get killed driving into Toronto on the 401, so why worry about it?"

Another traveller said he looked forward to such a possibility

'How many people in Oshawa can say they've been hijacked to Cuba or Jordan?" he said. "That alone is worth the price of the ticket."

MARRIAGE

Mr. and Mrs. John C Howson announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Jane, to Alan Thomas Anthony, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert T. Anthony. The wedding will be held Oct 9 at 7 p.m. in St. Gregory the Great Roman Catholic Church form there is pertinent information other than name and address of the bearer. It is true that a stolen credit card or even a stolen licence can be presented for identifying purposes and these are the risks the store must assume. Therefore the more identification the shopper has, the lower the risk for the store

Incidentally, I have on occasion, told more than one irate shopper, "this was the company policy on cashing cheques here and if this did not meet with their approval, I would suggest they take their cheque to the bank!"

Regarding the letter of Mr. Jim J.— his opening sentence sounded rather ominous to me. almost like a threat. You are wrong Mr. J. in saying that the only weapon a working man has is his right to strike. He also has another and that is his right of working elsewhere if he is not satisfied. I wonder about some people continuing at jobs when they are so unsatisfied. Why do they remain there?

As far as your question "do you want us back in the dark ages," we can back up one step further I sometimes think mankind has not emerged too far from the caves.

Jo Ann.

Mr. and Mrs. John Peyton, of Oshawa have completed a five-month specialized course in Bible instruction and missionary training at the Watchtower Bible School of Gilead in New York City.

Here, (left and right) they are shown in a corner of the School's garden with Kirsten Jakobsen of Germany comparing notes with a few of the ten-thousand volumes of the School's Bible research library. Seventy selected ministers of Jehovah's Witnesses shared in the courses offered. Coming from six different countries around the world, the School's courses equip them to take their message to the 19 different countries to which they are assigned

The academic studies included a chapter-by-chapter study of the entire Bible, the relation of world history to Bible history as well as techniques for teaching the Bible. Intensive instruction was given to each student in Spanish, French or Portuguese, depending on his assignment.

Students were given an opportunity to study and participate in the United States Branch's supervision of its 5,384 congregations and 364 traveling ministerial supervisors in addition to sharing in the operation of the Society's printing plants. The student body participated in the production of the year's output of over 24 million Bibles and Bible study aids as well as over 196 million copies of the Society's two magazines.

"I was very much impressed," Peyton said, "to see how the Bible could exert such a force for peace among so many living in such close association from so many different national and cultural backgrounds. We always enjoyed a deep mutual understanding and peace with our fellow students."

This Week reporter leaves for Australia

Why Tom (and wife) are going down under

By Tom Douglas

You have dozed off in the hot tropical sun and you are awakened by a soft voice asking you if you are ready for your mid-morning snack

You sit up hungrily, famished by the invigorating sea air even though you had oatmeal, bacon, eggs, toast and coffee for breakfast. Before you is a tray ladened with small cakes and a steaming pot of tea

After just taking the edge off your hunger (after all, there's a gigantic buffet for lunch), you settle back to continue reading that novel that the fast-paced life back in Oshawa never gave you time for

You'd like to finish it by early afternoon because there's a first-run movie that you'd like to see and you certainly won't have any time this evening what with the cocktail party and Costume Ball

With any luck at all, you'll get it read right after lunch while you're digesting your meal before taking a quick dip in the pool. You won't have time to read at all tomorrow because you're going on a one-day tour of Hawaii

Does this all sound like something you've dreamed about all your life? Would it make you envious to learn that in less than five weeks that's exactly what I'll be doing?

Well then, eat your heart out because after October 26, I'll no longer have to think about General Motors' strikes, Oshawa's damp winters, heavy traffic on the 401 or whether my old overcoat will bear up under another six months of below-freezing temperatures

And what's more, the scene I have just described isn't going to cost me a single penny

Well, in actual fact, my wife and I have paid out $1,200, but it would have cost us that much to do what we intend to do anyway, so as far as we're concerned, all this unbelievable relaxation is ours at no cost whatsoever.

You see, we are emigrating to Australia. I've had my fill of bosses who are more interested in the almighty dollar than in serving mankind (I don't mean you, Pete), neighbours who live beside you for years and only talk to you when your dog uses their lawn to show how you've felt about them all along and salespeople who consider any purchase you make as a nuisance that has taken them away from filing their nails or talking to their friends on the phone.

Perhaps we're mistaken about Australia, but from what we've read, we see it as one of the last frontiers where a person is judged for what he is, not how new his car is or how much money he has in the bank. If we're wrong, then we'll keep on going; Diogenes will have nothing on us

When it came time to decide by what mode of travel we wanted to get from Canada to Australia, it took us about three-tenths of a second to make up our minds. And so, we are booked on Peninsular and Orient's 'Himilaya', a 28,000-ton ship leaving Vancouver October 26

Both of us have travelled by ship before and we realize that if time doesn't mean that much, ocean travel has it all over the hurried, disorienting trip by aircraft.

And there's where the free entertainment comes in. Our passage, for a two-berth cabin, costs us only slightly more than we would have paid to fly from Vancouver to Sydney.

That means we have 18 days aboard ship, accommodations and meals completely paid for, and we'll arrive in Sydney with all the exhaust fumes and factory smoke blown away by the sea air.

Every day aboard ship is a party with swimming, dancing, bingo, bridge lessons, movies and deck games offered at no extra cost. All we pay for is our drinks and at sea, these are tax free. . .or about 20 cents a shot.

And if that weren't enough, there is a day's stopover in Hawaii, Fiji and New Zealand before we dock in Sydney. The duty-free shop at Suva, Fiji's capital, will further reduce the actual cost of our passage with the bargains we'll get.

Should anyone reading this wish to follow in our footsteps, I have only one piece of advice. Book your passage early (we did so in March) since many people have the same idea.

And once you've arrived in Sydney, look us up. We'll be the tanned, relaxed couple with the red maple leaf on our sun umbrella lying on Bondi Beach.

Monday a new era in education

A new era in education begins Monday when Channel 19, Canada's first television station fully devoted to entertaining education, begins regular broadcasting

In Oshawa thousands of Cable TV subscribers will have a new opportunity to brush up on their French or Italian or math or psychology, science or even journalism. Channel 19 will offer music appreciation programs, and special shows for children . . . all ages.

Most schools in Oshawa have cable connections also, and they are expected to benefit fully from the new programming.

Bill Leask of Oshawa Cable TV told This Week Channel 19 will be shown on what is now Channel 10, Rochester, a "duplicate station" of Channel 4. Following educational TV programs at about 10.30 nightly, Cable subscribers will be switched back to Channel 10, he said

Leask said his firm has installed a special custom-built antenna that is tuned to the Channel 19 frequency.

Channel 19 means a new opportunity for learning to some 2.7 million residents of southern Ontario.

It brings education within the reach of housewives, shift workers, chronic invalids, office workers — all those who for one reason or another cannot go outside the home for education.

Programmed by The Ontario Educational Communications Authority, the new body created to be responsible for educational broadcasting in Ontario, Channel 19 will be on the air 13½ hours daily Monday to Friday and five hours on Saturday and Sunday in an area bordered by Oshawa, Hamilton, Newmarket and St. Catharines.

"Our job is essentially to create learning programs which relate to the needs of education in Ontario and to distribute those programs in a manner that is economic and educationally effective," T. R. Ide, new OECA chairman said.

Channel 19 programming concentrates strictly on education under the terms of the licence issued by the Canadian Radio and Television Commission, but within those terms of reference it intends to be anything but dull

And there will be something for everybody: preschool, school and youth, university and college, professional development and adult education for home viewers.

For example, preschoolers will learn how to count by watching the highly acclaimed "Sesame Street". New Canadians who wish to speak and understand English better will find learning easier through the Canadian-made series called "Castle Zaremba". Predictions are that the se-

Fall recreation program for everyone

There's something for everyone in the Oshawa Recreation Department's fall series of programs. Sports director Chuck Pell and his assistant Glenn Welch announced that their fall and winter programs would start the week of October 5.

Included in these programs will be adult evening classes in Yoga. Fencing. Adult gymnastics, Ladies and Men's Conditioning and fitness classes and a new course in Ladies Self-defense. All courses will run from October until December.

The department has tried to hire the best talent in each activity to instruct the classes.

The fencing course. will be handled by Fencing Master E. Meister of Toronto and a former Hungarian fencing champion Lawrence Jenvay who now makes his home in Oshawa.

A new activity which should attract the fair sex this fall is the Ladies Self-defense course. (No, madam, you will not gain a lot of unsightly muscles but you will know how to fight off any over-amorous oafs that come your way.)

A. Kleiner of Toronto will operate the class in Yoga. While not a sport as such, Yoga is a set of exercises that have the mind and body working in unison.

For the ladies and gentlemen of the community who are finding that they are filling out their suits a little too well, the Adult Physical Health Studio offers the finest in equipment and plush surroundings. Coupled with a little sweat and top-level supervision they have a chance to regain that old svelte figure.

For the younger generation the professional staff make use of local secondary and elementary school facilities for their gym games (boys and girls), and floor hockey. One of the highlights of the children's program is a course in rifling. This is a marksmanship course on which the kids learn proper use of .22 calibre rifles. The facilities at J. F. Kennedy Separate school are used for this popular activity, held once a week and for which marksmanship awards are given.

In addition to the above courses there is public and club swimming. If anyone is interested in joining these activities, all that is required is a phone call to the Sports Dept. at the Oshawa Recreation Dept., Thornton Rd. S., Oshawa. or call 725-1111 ries will be equally popular with English speaking viewers. Other programs for adults range from a thriller series in French, to a course in accounting, and gourmet cooking lessons with French chef Julia Child.

Manuals, pamphlets and other written material will be offered in conjunction with some programs at minimal cost.

Mr. Ide said 95 per cent of the content of programs going into the schools will be Canadian. The adult education programs will average about 67 per cent Canadian content.

Until OECA's own Bayview Avenue headquarters expands, most of the shows will be produced in rented studios. A number will also come from the CBC, the National Film Board, the Metropolitan Toronto Educational Association and independent producers. Programs will be repeated two or three times a season and can be used for several years.

OECA's predecessor, the Educational Television Branch of the Ontario Department of Education has been actively producing and distributing educational programs for Ontario schools for more than four years, broadcasting over regular television channels.

Surveys show 85 per cent of 4,502 elementary and separate schools in the province listened to and watched the ETV programs, along with 81 per cent of the 553 secondary schools. In addition about 250 secondary schools record shows with their own equipment for playback at more suitable times.

This experience in part encouraged the province to apply for a full time ETV station, bringing education to a larger audience, and extending broadcast hours to the full program day.

Channel 19 test patterns began September 14. Opening ceremonies will highlight Preview Day on September 27.

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

No sooner have the round rubber pellets used in Lacrosse been put to pasture then the black disc comes out of the refrigerator to kick off the hockey season. Now for the next six months at least the great Canadian sport crowds into all the available arenas and rinks across the country. Ice time and schedules now outrank the middle east crisis as news items get the heave ho to keep the 20 million hockey fans abreast of the latest goings on in the sport.

Oshawa of course can be classed as a hotbed of the winter sport and rightly so since who else has given so much to hockey and what other town is so deeply involved — next time you're at the beauty shop or barbers listen to the chatter that goes on about hockey — its almost an obsession.

When the NHL came to town to play exhibition games the first thing that came to mind was "Let's see if we can do a game," and after a few conversations and phone calls it was arranged that Cable 8 would be allowed to do a game, but only on tape and only if it was played at a later date. So last Friday the studio cameras and equipment were stripped and painfully carted to the Oshawa civic Auditorium where they were set up and warmed up to do a game. The only problem was the camera operators had just recently recovered from a strenuous Lacrosse season and this had firmly implanted the "Lacrosse Ball syndrome in their minds."

Never were there such words expressed on the intercom as when that puck was dropped on the ice and the NHL players began to move the black disc at speeds seemingly close to the speed of sound. Shouts of "Where did the puck go?" and "What's going on?" screamed through the head sets for the first 10 minutes of the game until the camera operators got the hang of it.

After the game was over the perspiration drenched lens aimers expressed great respect for the CBC cameramen who cover the NHL for the full season. In spite of the minor troubles at the adjustment period the tapes produced by Cablecast 8 captured the game and not too badly at that. So NHL hockey fans take note that this Thursday at 8 pm the Buffalo Sabres and the Oakland Seals' game will be telecast over your local station ch. 8.

CICA are the call letters of the newest station to spring into life in Canada. Broadcasting on ch. 19 the educational station will be available on Ch. 10 for cable subscribers. Since 19 broadcasts from 8 in the morning till 10:30 at night the rest of the evening will carry the Rochester station. Channel 10 is a duplicate of 4 in Buffalo except for late movies so there shouldn't be any problems in that department. What 19 is offering is a very well done program format covering just about everything under the sun and for all age groups, most of it's in colour.

Don't be at a loss for words - try adult education this winter

Have you ever found yourself at a cocktail party where the topics of conversation were cake decorating, comparative religions and auto mechanics and you were at a loss for words?

If such embarassing moments have filled your life, the Ontario County Board of Education can help you, friend. After a few short weeks, you should be able to hold your own on any of these topics and, what's more do so in Spanish

These subjects are just a few of the many evening programs in adult education being offered this fall and winter by the Ontario County Board Registration for the programs takes place Sept. 28 and 29 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m

The courses, which begin Oct. 5, include, in the area of general interest, art, ceramics, woodcraft, flower arranging, instrumental and choral music, photography, wood refinishing and clay and wood sculpturing.

There are also courses on baking, gourmet foods, hostess hints, beauty culture, hairdressing and physical fitness. Under home improvement, the board offers such courses as fireplace and barbecue construction, home mechanics, landscaping, interior decorating and upholstery.

A number of miscellaneous courses are also offered, including St. John Ambulance, public speaking, speed reading, defensive driving, retail merchandising and the stock market

Technical courses will also be provided in such areas as automotive and small engines, drafting and drawing interpretations, electricity and electronics, machine shop, graphic arts, welding and building construction.

Oshawa residents can register at Central Collegiate, Eastdale, R.S. McLaughlin or General Vanier Secondary School. The Anderson Collegiate will handle registrations in Whitby.

Fees are $10 for a 10-week course and $20 for 20 weeks. A materials fee is charged for some courses and textbooks are to be supplied by the students

Fetio signs lease

It's not a steel plant

It is not a STEEL PLANT they're going to start building next January at Oshawa's lakeshore.

It's a plant for separating iron from titanium.

Vast quantities of iron ore, chemically mixed with titanium abound in Canada and because until a short while ago nobody had found a way of separating the titanium from the iron ore, these vast quantities have remained untouched.

That's where Fetio comes in.

Fetio Industrial Developments Ltd is Oshawa's latest new industry whose principals signed an agreement with the Oshawa Harbour Commission Friday, to lease 12 acres of land for 60 years.

Manager Wilfred A. Gillberry of the Harbour Commission has been working for over a year with the Fetio people to complete the deal for an initial $10 million investment in Oshawa.

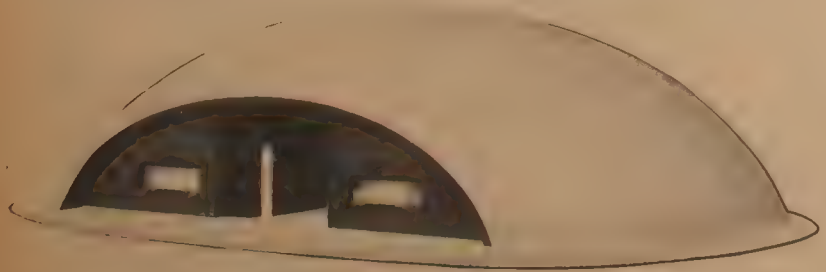
Construction equipment is being moved to Harbor Commission property this week.

Mayor Bruce Mackey welcomed the signing of an agreement Friday as a "long awaited breakthrough after years of hard work by the industrial commission and the harbor commission to attract new industry to the city."

The mayor said he was pleased with the company's sign of confidence not only in Oshawa, but in the entire region.

Construction of an office building on the site will be started immediately and a start will be made on the plant in January, company officials reported.

President Martin Stallaert of Fetio said a new joint corporation of his firm and Multi-Minerals Ltd. of Toronto will be formed, with Multi-Minerals supplying the raw iron-ore for the plant and Fetio carrying out production.



The ore will be mined in the Chapleau area, north of Sault Ste Marie in Northern Ontario.

Access to Lake Ontario, rail facilities and the availability of skilled tradesmen figured in Fetio's decision to pick Oshawa, Stallaert said.

Fetio's lakeshore site of 12 acres is part of a 92-acre complex under option to the Oshawa Harbour Commission. Robert Nicol, Oshawa's industrial commissioner talks of numerous other enquiries that have come to Oshawa since Fetio's first announcement to manufacture here.

Vice President Hank Dube of Fetio Industrial Development Ltd., left, discusses construction program with Wilfred Gillberry, Oshawa Harbor Manager. In background in the company's temporary construction office, moved to the site Monday.

Here's an example of the architecture Fetio Industrial Developments Ltd. plans to use for its office construction project on the Harbour Commission site near Lake Ontario. The process involves pneumatically inflated concrete. With several of these dome-shaped structures planned eventually, Oshawa's lakeshore property will some day resemble a flying saucer launching pad, observed one official.

SPORTS

Former Generals on Seals team

Oshawa is well-represented at Oakland Seals training camp this year Former Generals Peter Vipond and Tom Foxcroft are fighting for pro jobs along Pete Laframboise, a former Junior B player who toiled with the Oshawa Crushmen a couple of years back.

Coach Fred Glover of the Seals said that Vipond's added weight would stand him in good stead during his attempt to crack the professional ranks this year. He said that they haven't had a real good look at him as yet because of a groin injury and the fact that Peter has been playing on the right side, his wrong position.

Tommy Foxcroft is showing quite a bit of hustle and desire after a lot of moving around last season. Tom Started last year with Providence Reds of American League and then spent the latter part of the season with Greensboro of the Eastern League

Vipond played the 69-70 season playing Senior A hockey for the Nelson, B.C. team while attending Notre Dame University at Nelson. He was picked up by Spokane for their Allan Cup Finals against the Orillia Terriers.

Peter Laframboise played the 69-70 season with the Ottawa 67's of the O.H.A. Jr. A loop and is making a determined bid at earning a job with the NHL club

Coach Glover said he is impressed with the way Laframboise is skating and hitting, and making use of his good size

The coach said there will be no decisions made on cuts until after the weekend but a fair number of players would soon be sent to the camp at Providence

Crushmen open camp

General manager Ralph Cook announced opening of the Oshawa Crushmen training camp on September 28. About 40 players will be on hand for new head coach Jack Armstrong to select his 1970-71 club from. Mr. Cook said that the team will probably be quite young with several players still of midget age.

The Crushmen have scheduled one exhibition game so far. This match will have the Oshawa team squaring off with Peterboro at the Auditorium on October 3.

Both Cook and Armstrong expressed delight with the spirit of co-operation that exists between their Junior B team and the management of the Oshawa Generals.

Armstrong said that for the first time the Gens have allowed he and Mr. Cook to have a say in the operation of the Junior A camp.

College training opens

Durham College will open its hockey training camp at the odd hour of 6:30 am on October 5 at the Civic auditorium.

Head hockey coach Gerry Pettit is looking forward to a large turnout of players with several of last year's players returning this season. Along with a good crop of first year students, the college should have a solid club.

Former Oshawa Crushmen who are attending the school are Bill Barker, Eric Howard and Scott Wilson, and if these boys go out with the team they should help Pettit ice a real contender in the Ontario College Athletic Association.

All home games for the college will be played at North Oshawa Arena.

SPORT

Football kicks off with N-S

Football fans received a real treat Friday night as the Annual North-South High School football night kicked off the new season amid an atmosphere of hoopla and ballyhoo. There were pretty cheerleaders, school bands, raucous school yells and some mighty fine football

The North side of town dominated the action pretty much throughout the 12 games

In Junior, O'Neill blanked Courtice 8-0 and Central 20-0. Eastdale defeated Donevan and Central by scores of 14-0 and 22-0. McLaughlin beat Courtice 7-0 and Donevan 12-0 in their two 20 minute encounters

In Senior Action, McLaughlin split, beating Courtice 8-0 and losing to Donevan 14-0. Eastdale had a tight battle with Central. The game ended in a scoreless draw. Donevan won their game with Eastdale 14-0 O'Neill, last year's big power in the area, blasted Courtice 18-0 and lost a real squeaker to Central by a count of 7 to 6.

From the looks of the teams in practice and in this annual encounter, high-school football fans should enjoy a banner year. All the teams appear to be big, fast and strong, and trying to predict a winner at this early date would be an impossibility.

Miss championship

Legionaires go hungry

The Oshawa legionaires got to the lunch counter but came away hungry in their bid for a rare All-Ontario Baseball championship on the weekend

On Saturday night, down in Welland, the Oshawa club received fine pitching from Darin Bird who flew in from the University of New Brunswick for the weekend action. The team had four runs from six hits but with the help of eight errors gave up six runs on the same number of hits for the Welland crew. Bird took the loss for Oshawa and George Boichuk was the winner

On Sunday it was do or die for the Legion team at Kinsmen Stadium. For the first eight innings Oshawa had the game well in control, leading 3-1 until Welland catcher Ian Schaeffer bounced one off the left field wall to put the visitors ahead 4 to 3. Starter Dave Hecimovitch was relieved by Boichuk in the bottom of the eighth and allowed only one Oshawa runner the rest of the way

Coach Dave Waite of the Legionaires said he was proud of the way his team showed hustle and desire throughout the season. He said that the team had more fighting spirit than any other team he had been associated with over the years.

Already, Waite and manager Gord Johnson are preparing for next season and with a few additions to the club should wind up with a full-course dinner next year

Imlach in Oshawa, he's got a surprise

The great color man of the hockey world is back. George "Punch" Imlach and his new Buffalo Sabres of the NHL invaded Oshawa Friday night and went back to their training camp in Peterboro after receiving a rude welcome from Fred Glover's Oakland Seals. Despite some of the patented Imlachian stunts, the Sabres were defeated by the Seals 6-0.

This was the first game in which the new "free faceoff" rule was used. While only an experiment

One more sport finished up the year on the weekend as the Oshawa Legionaires lost out to Welland in the OBA final. This first-year club enjoyed a fine season winning the E.O.B.A. Lakeshore championship and going right to the finals in All-Ontario playoffs. For fans of the diamond sport however, there is plenty of softball action still going on. At present, Quality Fuels, Gale Lumber, Tony's and Whitaker Sales Bantams are all involved in their respective O.A.S.A. playdowns.

Hockey is now beginning to dominate the minds of local sports fans as can be witnessed by the large turnouts of people at the daily scrimmages of the Oshawa Generals and the Oakland Seals. The Seals have now moved their base of operations to the new twin-pad Harman Park Arena, and will continue twice daily practices there.

The Gens, under the tutelage of new GM and coach Ed Reigle are starting to impress folks around the OHA circuit with fine play. Thursday they defeated the Niagara Falls Flyers 5-4 and then split with Peterboro Petes on the weekend. Down in Trenton Saturday the Generals suffered their first defeat of the exhibition schedule by a count of 3 to 2. On Saunday, at the Auditorium the Junior Generals came back with a 6-2 win over the same Petes.

The management has been pleased with the play of some of the new recruits and their fine goalies. In goal there is a real fight going on for the two jobs between last year's regulars Ted McComb and Gilles Gratton and young Bryan Rose, up from last year's Jr. B. Crushmen.

In talking with some of the players, one thing keeps coming up. That is the respect that the young players have for Reigle. He appears to be running a looser camp than the players have experienced before, with the emphasis on the fundamentals of the game such as skating, shooting and positional play.

A big improvement in the local hockey scene is the new spirit of cooperation between the Generals and the Oshawa Minor Hockey Association, With the Jr. A club helping out the youngsters the fans can expect to see much more home-brew talent in the OHA in the near future.

Congratulations are in order for two fine young local hockey officials, Robbie Waddell and Allan Glaspell, both of Oshawa, last week signed contracts with the NHL as league linesmen. There have been a lot of good referees and linesmen developing in this area of late and it is good to see some from around Oshawa make it to the big time. It is out and out shameful that the O.H.A. has not seen fit to use a local man as a referee in their Jr. A. circuit. Since they use officials from every other Junior A. city, they should be scouting around Oshawa and Peterboro for at least one ref from each town.

If this is really the year, the Argos had better quit living off their advance press and start playing a little football. Their was an air of gloom in a certain sports editorial office Monday morning as the Double Blue blew one to the Montreal Als on Sunday the rule was called on the Sabres in the first period by referee Brian Lewis In the ensuing confusion Imlach sent his entire squad over the boards for Lewis to explain the rule and Lewis promptly sent them back to the bench Imlach said after the period, "Isn't this co-operation. My first week back in harness and they bring in a new rule and try it on me. I thought I might as well have an interpretation from the horse's mouth but he wouldn't explain it to my players."

Commenting on the team's prospects for the new season, Punch said "I think we will surprise a few people. We are here tonight missing a few seasoned vets and the team is tired from Thursday's game with New York."

Starting goaltender Gary Edwards was replaced in the third period by young Larry Holmes who now makes his home in Oshawa. Imlach said after the game that he was impressed with the way Holmes has been working hard and with his natural ability. Punch said that the problem was having an abundance of pro goalies in camp and there would be a problem finding jobs for all of them, but he may be able to find a spot in Amarillo or Salt Lake City for Holmes if he wished to give up his job with a local finance company

Fred Glover was very pleased with the play of most of his rookies in the game. Notably, Pete Laframboise and Joe Hardy were standouts for the Seals

Guns oiled

The big battle starts this weekend

The men of Oshawa have their eye on the calendar, ready to do battle this Saturday. The guns are oiled, the equipment is ready. All that remains is to kiss one's loved ones goodbye and bravely trudge off into the woods

The enemy has been spotted in the area and despite the dangers involved, the men of Oshawa are ready to battle to the death — but not their death, of course

No, they won't be firing at anything that can shoot back. They'll be taking their annual pot-shots at anything that moves in hopes of coming home with a brace of partridge, duck or geese

The 1970 hunting season in the Oshawa area begins at sunrise Saturday and continues, in the case of duck and geese, to Dec. 15. Partridge can be taken until Nov. 21.

On Oct. 14, the pheasant season opens as well and continues to Nov. 2. The bag limit for pheasant is three per day, no more than one of which can be a hen. Hunters are Darlington Provincial Park will be open to hunters on a limited basis During the duck season, hunters will be allowed into the park on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

A special park licence of $5 per day is required with an additional $4 charged for each of the 10 blinds provided. These are rented on a first-come, first-served basis

The park will also be featuring pheasant hunting from Oct. 14 to the end of November with birds purchased from a hatchery and released in the park

In order to obtain a hunting licence, a person under 20 years of age must complete a course in hunter safety training given by a qualified instructor

Those above this age limit must present before an issuer of licences a previous licence duly completed for renewal or present proof of previous hunting experience in the form of an old or current licence for any province, state or country

Failing this, he must take a hunter safety training course from a qualified instructor at a fee of $3. A schedule of time and place for such courses can be obtained from the district office of the department of lands and forests

Every person must have a licence to hunt and have it with him while hunting. He must show it to a conservation officer if he is requested to do so

In addition to a regular Ontario hunting licence, a Canada migratory game bird hunting permit is required to hunt ducks and geese

BIG SPLASH

To encourage members and attract new ones the executive of the Women's Welfare League is making a big splash at its next general meeting, September 28. Following the 2 o'clock meeting at Simcoe Hall Boys' Club (Eastview) there will be a pool party (bring your own towel and swim suit, not a billiard cue) the $5.89 shock absorber is here!

Worn shocks are dangerous. They upset the ride, control and even the braking of your car. That's why we think our 5.99 shock absorber is big news. It can restore that new car feel and control, at a bargain basement price.

But maybe you think it's a little risky trusting a "Discount Store" when it comes to car repairs. Maybe you think a high price means a better job. If you do, then maybe you're paying too much for car service.

We specialize in "Most Needed" car services. Our men are experts and we use only name brand parts. We can save you money, safely. Try us. We're open every night until 10.00 p.m. — and you don't need an appointment.

Why do we have to pay?

You'll always lend a buddy a couple of bucks till payday, just about every guy on the block borrows your mower, and you could never pass a kid who was crying on the street. But there are thousands of people who need your help. They don't live on your block, in fact you'll probably never see them. They're the old, the crippled, the blind, the young people all those thousands in your community, who just aren't as fortunate as you. You can help them! Give to United Appeal Canvassers when they call at your home or place of work. Your contribution will go a long way. We know all we have to do is remind you that these people depend on you. Get Involved!

OSHAWA-WHITBY UNITED APPEAL

Buffalo Sabres emptied their bench to discuss the free face-off with the referee. The free face-off is being tried out in exhibition games before regular season games start.

Parents demand tear down South Simcoe Public School

A delegation of irate parents from the South Simcoe Parents Association told trustees of the Ontario School Board this week that conditions at the South Simcoe School are "deplorable". The group demanded the school be torn down and replaced.

Spokesman for the contingency, John Shea, called the school a "fire trap". Some areas of the school he said were impossible to get out of in case of a fire.

The trustees were told the basement was used as a television room and a library. "The floors are made of concrete and the acoustics are so poor the entire basement sounds like an echo chamber," charged Mr. Shea.

"The library is a small room approximately 15 by 20 feet with a large fan circulating overhead to distribute heat. The noise is unbearable and makes any type of studying impossible," says Mr. Shea.

Mr. Shea charged the washroom facilities were grossly inadequate for the 360 students. There are no gym facilities for the senior students and they must use the Simcoe Hall gymnasium.

"The school was built in 1912 and is an antique. There have been several new schools built but no effort has beem made to update South Simcoe School," says Mr. Shea.

School board chairman Stan Lovell took exception to the use of the word "deplorable".

"I have just visited the school and I do not find anything deplorable about it. A new heating system was installed last year and our engineers say it is adequate," said Mr. Lovell

One of the parents on the committee charged that the children often had to wear their coats in the winter to keep warm

"I realize a new heating unit was installed last year but the facilities to which it is hooked are

Doctor, police chief speak out on drugs

Drug pushers in Oshawa are pimps on other people's minds.

This statement was made Monday by Dr. G. B. Doherty, a member of Oshawa's steering committee on drug abuse in schools, in an interview with This Week.

"I told this to one chap I just had into my office recently when he told me he pays for his drugs by cutting them with something else and selling them to others," said the doctor.

"He said the drugs he took gave him greater insight and more social awareness and then in the next breath admitted he was selling these things to other unfortunate people.

"I told him he was a parasite on the public and a few other things but it didn't shake him at all. All he was worried about was whether the stuff he was taking would impair his sex life."

Sex life

Whether or not a user's sex life will be affected is debatable, but local medical officials have warned time and again that hepatitis can result from using an infected needle to 'shoot up', as the taking of drugs intravenously is called colloquially

The number of cases of hepatitis in Oshawa has

Chief Jon Jenkins told This Week yesterday that an expert from the Ontario Provincial Police is in Oshawa to establish whether or not the bikes have been stolen.

Police believe they have enough evidence at the moment to establish that two of the machines actually were stolen. The OPP expert is trained in re-establishing serial numbers that have been filed off.

"It's a slow process," said Chief Jenkins. "He might spend two or three days working with one

SHORT TAKES

Accidental
The death of an Oshawa man killed in a construction accident July 10 was ruled accidental by a coroner's jury. Earl Kehoe, 23 was killed on a Toronto construction site when he was struck by a crane boom which fell when a supporting cable was sawn through by another cable

Donation
Students at Kingsway College presented the South Ontario County Unit of the Canadian Cancer Society with $772 This was the largest single contribution of the year. The money was raised through a walkathon held last May.

Company charged
Falcon Structural Forming (Central) of Toronto and company foreman Angelo Marendino of Toronto have been charged with contravening the Construction Safety Act in connection with the July death of 23-year-old Oshawa construction worker Giovanni Mastracci. Mr. Mastracci was killed while working on the Bell Tower complex at the Oshawa Shopping Centre. Company representatives and the foreman are to appear in Oshawa provincial court October 16.

NDP convention
The New Democratic Party riding of Oshawa is sending 15 delegates to the October 2-4 leadership convention in Toronto. Some of the delegates include Ald. Alice Reardon, Viola Pilkey (wife of MPP Cliff Pilkey) and David Broadbent (brother of MP Edward Broadbent). The new leader of the provincial party will be chosen at the convention. The race is between Stephen Lewis and Walter Pitman.

Sidewalk dispute
Eight residents of the Harcourt Drive subdivision lost an appeal to council in which they asked that a 275-foot sidewalk not be constructed The residents complained the sidewalk was unnecessary and too costly. The sidewalk which will connect a sidewalk further south on Harcourt to Olive Avenue in the north will cost residents $3.25 per foot lot frontage if paid in a lump sum, or 50 cents per foot per year over 10 years on instalments.

Graduate Nurse
Janet Louise Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Norman E. Ward of Oshawa recently graduated from Victoria Hospital School of Nursing, London Miss Ward is a former graduate of McLaughlin Collegiate

Lottery Fees
Council has approved a reduction of certain lottery licence fees. Bingo lotteries with prizes of between $500 and $3,500, the new fee will not be two per cent down from the previous four per cent. A fee of $20 for the $500 or where prizes do not exceed $500 will still remain.

Increase Fees
Board of Control has approved a $2,000 increase in fees for the city's external auditors effective June 1 until the end of the year. The Board will notify council it plans to investigate the possibility of hiring a local accounting firm to audit city books in 1971

Regional meeting
Lack of communication between municipalities on regional government has spurred city council to call for a joint meeting in the near future between officials of Oshawa, Whitby, East Whitby and Darlington Townships to discuss their independent plans for the region

Development Day
Teachers in the Ontario County separate schools will have a professional development day October 28. They will meet at the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto for a program of discussion and tours of the centre. The theme for the day is "Planning and Evolution."

25th Anniversary
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Harold Coppin recently celebrated their 25th weedding anniversary The couple married in Toronto have lived in Oshawa since their marriage. Mr. Coppin, former traffic manager of General Motors, retired in 1966

Approve Funds
City Council has approved $7,000 for Phase Three of Oshawa's Civic Auditorium to complete sewer connections in the third stage of construction. Con. Christine Thomas was adamantly opposed to the request and said Civic Auditorium citizens' chairman E. R. McLaughlin "has no right" to ask the city for more money inadequate," said Mr. Shea.

Strong case
Trustee F.S. Wotton told the delegation they would have to have a very strong case to have the school replaced. He said money was very hard to come by to replace schools and did not recall the board ever authorizing the demolition of a school.

"Our budget gives priority to building new schools in subdivision areas and presently there are homes that cannot be built because we just do not have the money to build schools," Trustee Wotton said.

Mrs. William Ferguson, president of the Home and School Association told the board she was behind the movement 100 per cent.

"The opportunity room which is used by children with learning difficulties is not properly equipped. There is only one outlet in the entire room making it difficult for electrical equipment to be used by many of the students," said Mrs. Ferguson.

Mr. Shea invited the board to send a zone superintendent to the school and carry out a complete investigation. He asked that representatives from his committee be allowed to accompany the superintendent on his tour.

While Mr. Shea said there had been complaints before about the school Mr. Lovell said it was the first time he had heard a complaint.

Case solved of mysterious gravedigger

The case of the mysterious gravedigger has been solved

This Week has it on good authority that the person who erected the tombstone sign at the Oshawa-Whitby border is a highly-placed official in the administration of the town of Whitby.

We contacted the person so named, but he half-heartedly denied that he had anything to do with it

"They must think I'm a clown all the time," he said. "Being a civil servant, I couldn't have had any part in it."

To a newsman who has dealt with denials by politicians and civil servants for a number of years, this latter statement translates: "Being a civil servant, I couldn't admit I put up the sign even if I wanted to."

The sign in question reads: "Herein lies Oshawa's plans to annex Whitby. May they rest in peace."

Mayor Des Newman of Whitby and other town officials have repeatedly voiced opposition to Oshawa's wish to amalgamate with their municipality bike and then he has to check with the authorities here and in other provinces to establish its ownership."

The chief said no consideration would be given to the laying of charges until the investigation has been completed

71's on ice

GM employees took time off from their "strike duties" last week to take a look at what's new in the company's new 1971's. Picture at top has Cyril Goodrich of the body plant in a Beauville Sport Wagon with David Martin of the chassis plant. Fellow in the tall vehicle is Tom Winter Jr. at the controls of the 1971 Astro 95 truck. In centre photo it's Adrian Vandermeer with daughter Pauline and wife Mary, or Whotby, admiring the 1971 Corvette Stingray. Vandermeer is employed in the South Plant trim and hardware department. Below is one of the sportscars that stole the show, an Opel GT, admired by Loren Johnson with dog George. Johnson, of Whity, works in the chassis plant.

Rep by pop, fair shake on services

Considering the provocation contained in certain statements submitted by neighboring municipalities and the hysterical rhetoric therein, we were most agreeably surprised this week with the tenor of the City of Oshawa brief to the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study.

The whole tone of the submission is one of quiet restraint and it shows a maturity of outlook which is like a breath of fresh air. The city's rebuttals to previous statements are concise and well-reasoned.

In a nutshell, the city of Oshawa has to our way of thinking made a very cogent case for:

STANDARD OR SERVICES

The standard of services of neighboring municipalities should be raised to a level now enjoyed by the city of Oshawa. Instead of the whole regional area sinking to the lowest common denominator of services, the outlying regions should rise to the level of excellence Oshawa enjoys in such hard services as water, sewer, roads and sanitation and soft services such as social cultural and recreational facilities.

PAYMENT OF SERVICES

Payment of such services must be borne in the main by those who will benefit most from them, and not, as the latest regional government study paper proposes by the city of Oshawa. Because the city has these services now, should Oshawa bring the outlying municipalities up to Oshawa standards? Let's face it, the City of Oshawa has provided and paid for over the last 20 years, while sustaining an ordinary growth rate of four per cent, the highest level of service in the area. In no way should Oshawa residents have to start paying through the nose again for services in other municipalities.

REP BY POP

It is proposed in the Third Discussion Paper of the OAPADS study that Oshawa, with 46.1 per cent of the total regional population be apportioned 36.5 per cent of the representation on a regional council. This example of representation, as the city's brief this week states, strikes at the very marrow of the most basic principle of our democratic society — representation by population — one man, one vote.

Through thick and thin, the city should abide by this premise and it should not back down to the pressure of tin-horn politicians in other municipalities whose price for their assent to regional government may be disproportionate representation — and just to perpetuate their individual terms of office.

The city's brief categorically rejects any system of representation fashioned in this manner. Stick to it, ladies and gentlemen!

Apropos of tinhorn politicians we should all realize that the main stumbling block in the whole regional government bit is the attempted retention of political power by those politicians who know in their own heart there will be no place for people of their outlook, temperament and education on a regional council. This concept, if it is going to be successful, will have few vacancies for amateurs. It is not so much academic qualifications that should be stressed, but the right mental attitude (something, we might add, is sadly lacking in municipal councils at this time.)

What is this right mental attitude? It is to be able to rise above a parochial concept of things and to concentrate on the wider issues. A classic instance of what we mean by right mental attitude as opposed to wrong, is contained in the city's brief in respect of traffic control devices. The brief mentions the Townline as an example. For a number of years the speed limit on the east side of the road was 50 mph, while the speed limit on the west side was 30 mph.

Let's also at this point take another look at Whitby's delusions of grandeur in the face of the imminent arrival of regional government. Any lingering doubt we may have had regarding the merging of Oshawa and Whitby into one municipality was dispelled by the City of Oshawa's brief this week.

In spite of its forthcoming obsolescence the mayor of Whitby and his henchmen are still pursuing the damnfool exercise of building a new town hall and/or police station for the greater glory of Whitby. Good for you, Mr. Mayor, but we hope that in these strike torn days, the Whitites have something substantial put away at their friendly credit unions to foot the bill for this extravaganza.

"United we stand, divided we fall." Like it or not, all the taxpayers in all the municipalities that make up the Oshawa region are going to be faced with increased taxes in the future. That will come whether or not we have regional government. The only variable is the amount of the increase. If there is no merger, for example between Whitby and Oshawa, there will continue to be costly duplication of services and inefficiency.

How about negotiating on the home front?

A couple of weeks ago we concluded in this space that strikes, and even the holy war on now between the giant United Auto Workers union and the giant General Motors Corporation, are juvenile.

Nothing that has happened since has changed our belief. In fact, now that we're slowly getting used to the idea of pickets and signs, we are even more convinced. And so, we believe, are a lot of our readers.

Leonard the Great was in Oshawa this week to instill some good old fashioned confidence in his troops. Stick together, he preached, and we shall overcome.

Negotiations continue meanwhile.

So do the lay-offs.

Suppliers of parts to GM are beginning to feel the pinch. They're laying off people.

Merchants are feeling the pinch. They've got to cut costs.

Government treasury chests (yours and ours) are feeling the pinch.

It all boils down to this. We — the people — are forced into contributing to a better contract for workers who are members of the United Auto Workers.

Now, we subscribe to the premise that we are our brother's keeper. But it hurts when brother is forcing this thing on us, and doesn't really appear to consider the part we play. Sometimes we believe brother is laughing in secret at all the suckers who are playing along with him in his game.

So much for this week, as far as the principle of the thing is concerned.

On to something practical.

Why are the two Canadian armies (well, units) fighting the war in Toronto? What's wrong with Oshawa? Is it not good enough to be the battle ground?

We wonder if the additional pressure of having the negotiations moved from the big city with the bright lights to good ole Oshawa would help. We feel there may just be the right amount of pressure on the negotiators when they are back on home ground doing their stuff.

There are two or three places in Oshawa that would lend themselves to the plan. We are sure Harry Feiner at the Genosha or the management of the Carousel or the Georgian could come up with proper accommodation. And there are other places.

The union leaders and the management negotiators would do well to be right here in Oshawa. At night, let them go back to their homes, and hamburgers and other home-cooked meals and snotty-nosed kids, and yes, the telephone . . . . There must be a lot of faithful union members who would like to phone their rep now and again to see what's going on, or to tell him to get on with it.

We have yet to hear one good reason for the negotiations being held in Toronto. We would find it difficult to believe that it's just the after-hours attractions the big city offers that keeps them there. But if it isn,t, then what is it?

Keep out of it

The businessman and those who embrace his ideals are quick to accuse the union man of doing irreparable harm to Canada through excessive monetary demands during contract negotiation.

Actually, the businessman is as much to blame as anyone if these demands are too high. All his advertising campaigns are tied to the theme that everyone including, and perhaps especially, the working man deserves a slice of the good life.

Whether the advertisement is for cars, television sets or trips to Europe, the message is that all of us have a God-given right to these things and if we cannot afford them now, we should grab them anyway and pay for them later.

Anybody who doesn't enjoy all these luxuries is pictured as "out of it". No wonder we are all demanding more and more money. That "later" they talk about has the nasty habit of creeping up on us and the money has to come from somewhere.

No, the union man cannot be saddled with all the blame for any financial ills Canada is suffering. However, unwittingly perhaps, the leaders of the United Auto Workers have just added to another problem of Canadian life.

Both UAW president Leonard Woodcock and Canadian director and international vice-president Dennis McDermott said here in Oshawa Monday that the union backs the demands of its workers at General Motors' Ste. Therese, Quebec plant to have French made the working language.

Mr. McDermott said that when GM locates in France its working language is French. The same should be true when it locates in French Canada.

To our way of thinking, Mr. Woodcock and Mr. McDermott should stick to negotiating wages and fringe benefits and leave bilingualism to the politicians who are better informed on the delicacy of this problem.

These two union leaders may believe that their stand is magnanimous and aimed at bringing together the two cultures of this country. In actual fact, they could be doing just the opposite.

Those people who have been dealing with the problems of our two cultures have been trying for years to get both sides to see how important it is for both languages to be used by both groups.

Now Messers Woodcock and McDermott come out in support of those people who advocate Quebec for Quebeckers and the devil take "Les Anglais" as they call English-speaking Canadians.

The French-only policy of the UAW leaders is every bit as short-sighted as the Union Jack and crumpets attitude of the likes of John Diefenbaker, W.A.C. Bennett and other mid- Victorian types.

by tom douglas

A friend of mine, Jim Pecksniff, recently dropped over to the house with a small clay pot he had bought at one of the booths at the Canadian National Exhibition

The salesman told him the pot was found washed up on the shore of Southern Spain just west of Gibralter and that he could have it for a song (which translated into salesman language is an arm and a leg).

Jim got home and was putting the pot on his mantelpiece when it slipped out of his hand and smashed into a dozen pieces on the floor. This accident revealed the pot had contained a false bottom and a piece of parchment lay amongst the shards of clay.

Now Jim has an imagination matched only by his enormous thirst and when he paused at this point in his story, I knew that he would require a bribe of another bottle of that happy, lazy, beverage he enjoys before going on with his tale.

Once I had snapped two more caps, he continued with his story and since he did not have the parchment with him, I have only his word that the facts are true, but I thought you might be interested in hearing them.

It seems that the parchment contained the writings of a scribe of the lost city of Atlantis, written just before the doomed settlement was engulfed by the ocean. There follows, then, the writer's account of what caused the destruction of so advanced a society translated by Jim, a professional student who once took a course in ancient Greek for want of anything better to do:

"I pray to Hermes, the messenger of the gods, that this record of the destruction of Atlantis will find its way to another civilization so that it will not make the mistakes we have made," the ancient scribe of Atlantis wrote.

"We learned a short time ago from our soothsayers that a disturbance in Ocean would mean the destruction of our city-state within a matter of days unless a gigantic wall were built around the island

"The wise men of our land met and drew up plans for such a wall but our first delay occurred when the women whose duty it was to transcribe these plans refused to do so until their wages were raised from one to two gold pieces a month.

"After settling this dispute, the wise men of Atlantis faced another. The Ancient Order of Boulder Toters refused to move the necessary materials onto the construction site until they too received a raise in pay. They stationed a number of their men around the island in such a way that the Society of Donkey Teamsters, the Masters of Mortar Mixing and the Organized Wall Builders of Atlantis refused to interfere with them by reporting for work.

"With time running out, the wisemen of Atlantis gave in to their demands, excessive as they were, in hopes of building the wall in time. However, with the water actually lapping at our ankles, we received more bad news: the United Chariot Builders of Atlantis had now also refused to work

"They lined up outside the chariot works and stopped everyone from going in except the scribes and money-changers responsible for processing the individual sacks of gold each builder had coming to him

"Without chariots, none of the required materials could be moved to the site and work ground to a halt

"No amount of pleading would get them back to work. They would merely reply with cries of inequity and injustice and refused to move until a long list of demands was met

"And that is where things came to an end. I am sitting on top of the statue of brotherhood in Peace and Tranquility Park. The water is up to my waist and I feel I will join the rest of my brethren within the hour.

"I am going to seal this document in a clay pot in hopes that it will float to other shores and be found by a member of some other civilization

"I pray to Zeus, father of the gods, that its message will be read and understood so that no other society will suffer the strife and tragedy which has befallen Atlantis. May saner heads prevail."

Got a beef? Or a compliment? "Readers write" is your page. It's there every week, and your comments are welcome. There are umpteen subjects in this community that need a great deal of discussion by the people of this community. So, fire away. We'll make room, be it for darts or laurels or a little of both.

THE EDITOR.

Trudeau off to Venus?

Sir:

I just had to drop you a line. It worried me no end to read that your intelligence has been insulted.

As a truer than blue Tory I feel I must write and re-assure you. Be patient with us and our political stunts. Believe it or not, these same stunts were not invented by "Darling Pierre", but have been going on for quite some time. We even have a third political party (I can't recall their name) who have been known to wear Stetsons, drive stage coaches, drink tomato juice etc. etc.

As for that cram-course you expected, just don't worry about it. We have been cramming since the last election. Somehow though, our activities don't seem to get much press coverage. A biased press! Sake alive! Surely not!

But bear up, and press on regardless. Save your energy for the last two weeks of the campaign.

"In the know" Liberals have informed me that Pierre is planning a super fantasmagorical grandiose conclusion to his campaign which includes a return trip to Venus in 48 hours and a marriage to Jacqueline Onassis while hanging by his feet from an acrobatic pole.

E.P.
Athol Street.

Where is justice?

Sir:

I have never thought the day would come when I would agree with the words of an avowed unionist, but I feel I must register my acceptance, in part, of what Steve Melnichuk, obviously a union man, had to say in your 'Readers Write' section last week.

In our society, we DO resemble a number of famished hogs at the feeding trough the way we try to gorge ourselves with as many material things as we can possibly buy.

But who is the bigger pig, the industrialist or the worker? At least the industrialist invests (and therefore gambles) many thousands of dollars in hopes of making a fair return on his money. A worker invests a couple of bucks in a lunch pail and thinks he deserves the same amount of room at the trough.

We see picketers these days holding up signs saying they're on strike for justice and equity. Where is the justice in all this?

Jim Morrison

Trade in the old equipment?

Sir.

The strike by General Motors workers here, elsewhere in the country and in the U.S. could have a disastrous effect on the economy, especially if predictions of a long shutdown hold true.

With 27,000 Canadian employees, and more than 300,000 in the U.S. now idle, the key to the seriousness of the strike will be its duration. Anything beyond six or seven weeks will really hurt both GM and the smaller plants that supply it. In addition, the economy will suffer from loss of purchasing power of the strikers who earn a basic $160 a week and now will have to get by on about $40 a week strike pay.

The city of Oshawa is particularly hard hit, as its 11,000 GM workers comprise a large segment of the population and buying power. Businessmen reported a slowdown in trade in the few days since the strike started.

The overall economy will also be affected by sales lost to imports. To date, 20 per cent of Canadian auto sales are made by foreign suppliers. A further indication of the strike's impact is contained in the estimate that for each day GM is strikebound the U.S. and Canadian economies lose $12 million daily income for the strikers and GM loses $90 million a day in sales through lost production of 26,000 cars and trucks.

Powerful forces are at loggerheads and the stakes are high. One wonders whether the nationa can weather the strike without irreparable damage to its well being.

The fact that you are encouraging discussion of this important issue is commendable. Personally, I should like to hear publicly from those who are at loggerheads whether they've given any thought to trading in the old equipment they're using.

James Macauley.

Tour is success

Sir:

On behalf of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary I would like to thank you very much for the informative article you published.

The house tour was a great success and we are sure we sold many tickets because of your article.

Mrs. D. Williams

Tom hides this week?

Sir:

What does Tom Douglas have against women? I have been reading his columns over the summer and have seen him take a swipe at telephone operators, waitresses, housewives and feminists.

Either Mr. Douglas was raised by a domineering mother or he is married to a real battle-axe who keeps him constantly under her thumb and this is the only way he can get back at her. I'll bet she isn't aware of the things he's saying in his columns. He probably hides his copy of the paper before she can get a look at it.

I note also that he is leaving shortly for Australia. As far as I'm concerned, that's Australia's loss and our gain. I only feel sorry for all those poor kangaroos and koala bears.

If you print this letter, just sign me as one of those "Libbies" that Mr. Douglas criticized in last week's column.

Libby

Mr. Sam's

Sir;

In our Oshawa papers as well as in posters, church announcements and other media, we currently find the McLaughlin Band Shell, a gift from "Mr. Sam" referred to (erroneously) as Memorial Park Band Shell.

Should not the Parks Department replace the eroded engraving in the plaques identifying this gift to our community?

A similar situation exists at McLaughlin Library where a tree has completely obscured the bronze lettering acknowledging that magnificent gift.

Reader,
Patricia Ave.

P.S. How about that "elusive one" the "chronicler"?

Says O'Neill students litter

Sir:

We very much enjoy your paper and would like to ask if you would be interested in trying to clean up the bottles, lunch bags, candy wrappers etc. left on the lawns

Drug Abuse News No. 13

DRUG ABUSE IS A SYMPTOM OF MENTAL WEAKNESS.

As a rule, drug users do not live happy, successful lives. They lose interest in school, family, or job. The drug soon becomes their master. The only social contacts they usually have are other drug addicts.

Drug abusers, in the beginning, are impelled by curiosity to experiment. Their friends or drug sellers tell them to expect an increase in their mental ability. This very rarely occurs. Instead, drugs become a means of escaping from life's problems. Then, the drug becomes his greatest problem.

If a drug abuser is fortunate enough to not yet get "hooked" on the addictive drugs, he has more hope of escape from serious harm. Smoking Marijuana or sniffing glue can be easily stopped if he wants to try. The odds are much greater against stopping, if he has become addicted to Heroin or the Barbiturates.

A last-minute cancellation by the guest artist, Juiseppe Macina, of his participation in the Friday night concert may have given the youthful producer, Edward Phioip Oscapella, a let-down but it did not lower the standard of the re-arranged program.

Oscapella and Charlene Biggs, duo-pianists, played the 1st and 3rd movements of the Haydn Piano Concerto in D. major with technical assurance.

Charlene completed the program with a sensitive interpretation of Debussy's Preludes, conveying a mystic, watery image in The Sunken Cathedral.

She swept through Chopin's Ballade in A flat with its recurring, rocking rhythm and concluded with a difficult contemporary French composition, "Sonatine for Yvette" by Xavier Monsaltvaltdge.

Charlene is a student of Boris Berlin, Toronto. She has won numerous awards at Kiwanis Music Festivals and at 14 years of age, played the Stravinsky Piano Concerto with the Toronto Symphony. She is currently studying Grades 12 and 13 in one year and still manages four hours piano practice every day.

Her mother, Aurelle McNeil-Biggs, an outstanding Canadian pianist, is head of the Vancouver Branch of the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Oscapella of Oshawa, Edward Philip has also entered the University of Toronto this fall to study for his Bachelor of Music degree. He recently auditioned as an accompanist for the Canadian Opera Company rehearsals, — the test, the opera La Traviata. With only a few days' notice, the young aspirant worked at the score 12 and 14 hours a day and won the audition.

This is the moral fibre that concert artists are made of. It's not only the technique but the will and the stamina to reach that unreachable star. Keep your eye on young Oscapella.

Another masterpiece made its debut in Oshawa last week. Centre of attraction at the GM presentation of 1971 models was the sporty Vega 2300. Called a "small model", it's really not that small if you're looking for something to keep under the kitchen sink, but it is four feet shorter than the full-size Chevrolet and it's only 5½ feet wide.

Good mile-age too, about 30 mpg and what I liked was the way in which on some models the rear window is incorporated with the trunk lid (you can see clear through the windshield with the trunklid up) and the neat way the rear seat folds flat to provide more storage space. Four cylinders, automatic, very tempting . . .

Another eye-catcher was the Opel GT, — lots of dash, but anything that zooms at 120 mph if it's not airborne, frightens me. All the men liked it.

The Buicks made a beautiful show; the Vintage Red Riviera with its curved dash and torpedo shape, the Verdemist green Electra, air-conditioned, and the Skylark, an elegant lady in blue.

King of the road was the 16-cylinder Cadillac Eldorado, a juggernaut in muted gold, called Almond Firemist Pontiacs, prima donnas, the Firebird in Castilian Bronze and LeMans in "lime-kissed" green with a white leather top, were queens of the chess-board, yet I overheard several guests say "That's still my favorite," "That" was the Chevrolet Bel Air

No peace for status freak

Sir:

Are you a status freak? I'll bet you are. For example, you would like to own a Cadillac, and not necessarily because you like a Cadillac, but because it shows success. You'd go out with a guy or girl basically because he or she is popular, and not because you actually like this person. You'll do anything as long as you appear to be better than the next guy in one form or another.

Kids get status by buying the latest albums, whether they dig them or not, just as long as it's the "cool" thing to do.

We gain this feeling of superiority by growing our hair long, wearing the latest clothes and purchasing materialistic things. Manufacturers take advantage of our emotions, thus taking control of individualism. It sickens me to think that one must do or think like the majority, in order to be with it, or accepted.

For those who are doing what they really dig, despite status because it's actually "their thing" I grant peace of mind.

Pete May.

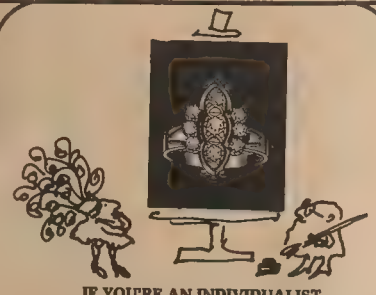
where we live by the careless, untidy pupils of today who go to the High School, that is O'Neill.

As a tenant it is not easy to ask them not to litter the places outside our windows and we do not want them breaking our windows because we do complain. They are rude, and deliberately leave more mess so perhaps a little publicity may help us to bring it to the attention of the Principal. He is the person to tell these pupils to at least respect other people's property.



We think school is the place to teach respect (which is more or less out of style now) as the parents don't seem to care any more what their children do, so if you think it worth while and we hope you do, please do a "comment" at least and perhaps we may have some clean lawns and steps around here. In the winter they have the nerve to come into the lobby to smoke where it is warm and rudeness is their keyword.

Oshawa doctor speaks out :

Drug pushers pimps on other people's minds risen sharply this summer with seven cases among young people reported by the Oshawa General Hospital in June and July.

A medical spokesman at the hospital said it is now known that the two types of hepatitis, formerly referred to as infectious and serum, are both communicable.

"Researchers are now referring to them as short incubation period and long incubation period hepatitis," he said. "Shortly, we hope to be able to classify the type of viral infection causing inflammation of the liver."

The spokesman said that at one time, isolation of cases of so-called serum hepatitis was not regarded as necessary, but in view of what is now known about its ability to infect other people through bodily discharges, this idea has been revised.

Isolation

"Hepatitis of the so-called serum type can be passed by other means than syringes, needles or blood transfusions. We're still having difficulty convincing people that isolation is necessary."

The doctor was quick to point out that this new evidence lets some of the young people off the hook who have been accused of taking drugs despite their protestations of innocence.

"We have had young people swear to us that they haven't been taking drugs and after examination we have confirmed this and yet they have had hepatitis.

"We can't stigmatize every person with the disease just because he's young and has long hair. He just happens to be in a town where there are a number of young people with the disease. He could have picked it up in school."

He added that while the type referred to as infectious hepatitis has a very high recovery rate, it is not 100 per cent. In addition, as high as 10 per cent of those with serum hepatitis can go on to suffer liver disease and liver failure.

The rise in the number of cases of hepatitis amongst Oshawa young people has been coupled with an increase in the number of arrests of drug users and traffickers in the city.

Police chief Jon Jenkins told This Week that arrests have increased threefold.

"I don't think it's because there has been a great increase in the number of users," he said. "I think it's just that we've become a little more intelligent in apprehending them."

The chief was reluctant to reveal what methods of apprehension the department is using, saying that he has found the less said about it, the better it works.

"Other municipalities have found this as well. All I can say is that there has been no let-up and there won't be."

Chief Jenkins was highly critical of individuals who stand up at meetings and quote percentages on the number of young people actually using drugs.

"I'd like to know how the hell they get these figures. Any I've asked have admitted it was only their own opinion and not based on any survey or anything. I think this is highly irresponsible."

Miss Polonias to gather here

A bevy of beautiful girls of Polish parentage will arrive in Oshawa on Friday evening. Each has been chosen "Miss Polonia" of her own community: Hamilton, Ann Slomka; Brantford, Ann Lawlowska; Mississauga, Maryla-Urszula Pietowski; Niagara Falls, Lillian Sielieka, Windsor, Gloria Bielecki, Toronto, Barota Barska and Irene Wolanczuk.

With Miss Polonia of Oshawa, Teresa Jordan, the girls will be the guests of the White Eagle Soccer Club of Oshawa at the second annual Queens' Court Ball to be held at the Polish Veterans' Centre, Saturday night. Hostesses for the dance are Miss Helen Firka, Miss Polonia of Oshawa 1969; Miss Barbara Bartosik and Miss Lila Horbacwicz, with host Joe Fras.

Mayors honored

Their Worships Mayor Bruce Mackey and Mayor Desmond Newman and their ladies were honored guests at the dance organized by the United Council of Veterans' Associations at the Polish Veterans' Centre, Saturday night.

Also introduced by President William Stacey were John Manning, president Oshawa Naval Veterans' Club; Kazimierz Nawrot, president General Sikorski Polish Veterans' Association; Eric Smith, president Canadian Corps Unit 42; "Chick" Hewett, president 420 Wing RCAFA and their ladies, all of whom received a chrysanthemum corsage.

Spot prizes and door prizes gave added pleasure and Chairman Harry Woods reported a successful social undertaking by the United Vets.

Dobroshinsky-Makaro

Rev. Father G. Connellan heard the marriage vows uniting Elizabeth Joanne "Jody" Makaro and Terry Peter Dobroshinsky in marriage recently in Sacred Heart Catholic Church, Merritt, British Columbia.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Makaro of Merritt, B.C. and the groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dobroshinsky of Oshawa, Ontario.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a formal gown featuring a bouffant skirt of nylon over net and taffeta underskirts and a three-quarter length train fell from the waist. The lace bodice featured a scalloped neckline and full length lily point sleeves. A circlet pearl tiara held her full off face nylon mist veil. She carried a bouquet of cerise and white carnations.

Maid of honour was Miss Theresa McKeowan of Prince Rupert, .B.C., with the bride's twin sisters Karyn and Kathryn Makaro of Merritt, B.C. and the groom's only sister Linda Dobroshinsky of Oshawa, Ont. as bride's maids. Flowergirls were Darcy Makaro of Mission City, B.C., and Arlene McWilliam of Regina Sask.

The groomsman was James Simpson with Creighton Smith, Gerald and Jonathon Makaro all of Merritt, B.C. as ushers.

Following the reception at the Elks Hall, Merritt, B.C. the couple left for Courtney Lake Lodge, B.C. and then a trip to Oshawa where a second reception was held for the newlyweds by the groom's family.

Mr. and Mrs. Terry Dobroshinsky will live in Merritt, B.C.

The Y's new image: involvement

At one time the Whitby YMCA used to be just a building where people could go and swim and throw a basket ball around. But its image has changed now and total community involvement is the word today.

A lot of credit for this changing image at the Whitby YMCA can be attributed to Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, the first full-time program director the Y has employed

The attractive brunette projects an image of youth and great enthusiasm for the future of the Y and what it can do for all the community residents.

One of her special interests lies with the group of people often neglected in community programming.

"I have a great belief in teen-agers and a lot of faith that they are interested in helping organize and set up programs specifically designed to their own interest," she says.

To allow young people to have their say in Y activities a Junior Executive has been formed consisting of three representatives from the Whitby high school who will advise Mrs. Moore on programming for their age group.

"These kids suggest programs and then go back to their respective schools to round up interested students in putting the suggestions into action," says Mrs. Moore.

One successful outcome of the Junior Executive is Gandalf's Tea House, a place where kids can gather and rap and relax. So popular is the venture that it will now be open on Wednesday nights as well as Fri-

CHEVY'S NEW LITTLE CAR IS OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

Vega is here at last.

Now you can buy what we modestly believe is the best little car in the world.

It does everything well.

Everything? Everything.

Vega moves well, stops well, steers well, rides well, handles well, responds well, passes well, merges well, travels well, parks well, sits well, wears well, and is priced well under what you'd expect to pay for such a totally talented car.

In highway tests, Vega has been getting around 30 miles to the gallon. Yet unlike your average little car, ours steps right out when you step on the gas.

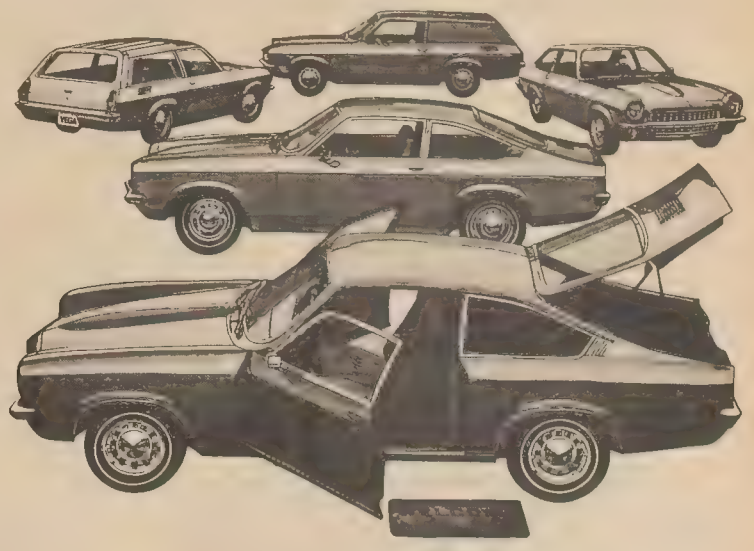
The standard engine is a specially designed 140 cubic inch overhead cam four with a lightweight aluminum alloy block. You can order the optional engine which has a 2-barrel carburetor and delivers 20 extra horsepower. The brakes are something too. Discs are standard in the front, new-type drums in the rear.

The wheelbase is 97 inches. Width: nearly 5½ nice, stable feet. Weight: 2,190 lbs. for the standard sedan. Engine displacement: 140 cubic inches; horsepower: 90 SAE gross, 80 SAE net. Seating Capacity: four adults. Turning circle: 33 feet, curb to curb.

What it all adds up to is a lot of little car.

Three cars and a truck.

Vega turned out so well that we couldn't turn out just one. So we made four: a sporty little hatchback coupe shown open and closed in the foreground below; the sedan, on the right; the Kammback wagon, on the left; and the little panel express truck, in the rear.



You have a choice of 10 outside and 5 inside colors plus a pretty fair selection of available options.

September 28th is Opening Day.

All Chevrolet dealers across Canada are handling the Vega, so you shouldn't have to go very far to find out more about it.

Chevy's new little car is open for business.

Look into it.

days and Saturdays.

Shortly Mrs. Moore hopes to begin a series of what she calls rap sessions. She would like to involve teen-agers in an interest in social actions and interests of the day

She would like to bring in community members with interests in different fields to talk with the teenagers hoping not to create conflicts but to formulate positive understanding between two groups of people who misunderstand each other

"I've seen this kind of activity work so positively in Chicago and have such great outcome that I sincerely hope the kids in this area will support the idea", she said

Mrs. Moore joined the staff of the Whitby YMCA in February of this year after completing a Bachelor of Arts degree in Sociology and a Bachelor of Science degree in group work at George Williams College, Chicago, Illinois.

Her association with the Y dates back to her childhood and on through her teen years working at Y camps.

The YMCA caters to all age groups in the community offering activities as varied as judo and swimming to courses in babysitting and homemaking

The success of the Y depends greatly on the support it receives from the United Appeal. This year approximately 40 per cent of its budget is based on funds received from the United Appeal

"We just wouldn't be able to operate without this money. We would have to cut back on programs we offer. As a result the whole community would suffer," said Ron Hupfield, executive director of the Whitby Y

The United Appeal campaign coincides with the bustling activity of the YMCA as it begins its fall season.

If the United Appeal does not reach its quota all recipients of its funds have their budgets cut, in some cases making drastic changes in programming.

Kids mad about hippie statement

Drop-in Centre re-opens with clean floor

An angry outburst by 100 city youths demanding the Drop-in Centre be re-opened was a direct result of a statement Con. Margaret Shaw made, says Project Youth Official Ian Gamble.

"I think these kids were directing their antagonism about the closing of the centre to the statement made by Con. Shaw who referred to hippies as people who hang around corners," says Mr. Gamble.

A meeting last Wednesday night between the adult volunteers and the youths who use the drop-in ended in agreement to re-open the Centre. It had been closed for one week because it was not being kept clean.

The 100 youths passed around a petition two days after the decision was made to re-open the centre. Gamble says he thinks the petition was to draw attention to the statement made by Mrs. Shaw.

Ald. Ruth Bestwick, city representative on the advisory board, said she felt that perhaps much of the mess was created by a few youths who might not even be a part of the community.

"The teens become lax from time to time and just do not keep the place clean. We threatened to close the centre and finally had to take the drastic step to give the teens time to think about using the centre properly," says Mr. Gamble.

Rev. T. Gemmell, chairman of the advisory board said the centre would be closed down again if it is allowed to get into the same condition.

"Three weeks ago the teens had a big bash and really cleaned the centre but then they get lazy and soon the place is a mess again," says Ald. Bestwick.

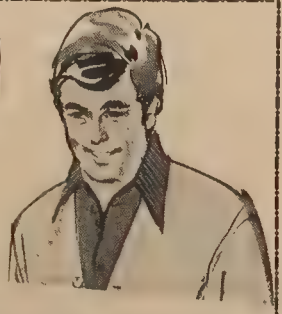
Mr. Gamble attributes part of the problem of keeping the centre clean to the large number of persons using it.

"We are looking after 200 to 500 kids in one evening where most centres get 50 or 60," he says.

He says it is very difficult to instill a sense of responsibility to such a large group. This situation results in a few sharing the work of the majority.

The Drop-in centre will initiate a series of craft programs next week. An all-day workshop and seminar will be held on October 9 between the police and the young people. It is to be held at St. Andrew's Church at 9 a.m.

A discussion paper has been made out and five Oshawa police officers will be in attendence to discuss the beefs of the youths.



In the meantime the centre is scheduled to re-open this Friday and will continue to operate on the fall schedule as long as it is kept clean.

There are only two rules to be observed — no drugs or alcohol and keep the place clean, Gamble says.

MINI EX

Members of the Christian Reformed Churches of Oshawa and Whitby are sponsoring Oshawa's first Mini-Exhibition, to be held Oct. 15 and 16 at St. Gregory's Auditorium, Simcoe Street North. The Ex includes a fashion show both nights and a flower arranging demonstration in the afternoon, followed by pancake supper, 6 to 7 p.m. A St. John Ambulance demonstration will be another attraction. Proceeds of this Ex go to the Durham Christian High School.

OSHAWA-WHITBY UNITED APPEAL

by peter brouwer

Isn't it just amazing how a newcomer can shake us out of our complacency and show us just what's wrong with our city or country?

Take the city.

A friend of mine moved to Oshawa just this week. Being a businessman, he believes in Chambers of Commerce. So he heads for the Oshawa Chamber. He can't find it right away, and somehow ends up at city hall.

"Oh well, this will do," he reasons. And he asks the girl at the reception desk for "some information on Oshawa and what facilities it has, because I'm moving here."

Says the girgirl, "that's not my department; do go and see the chamber. It's just across from city hall, a few blocks, through the park, and when you see this sign that says Automotive Museum, you're there."

My friend leaves.

He finds it a little strange there's nothing like a few pamphlets with general information at the receptionist's desk at city hall.

So he's off to the automotive place; the one with the old cars and the big empty parking lot.

And there he gets a few pamphlets, copies of which he gave to me. If you're interested, go through the same routine sometime. And see what you get.

There's no point in going on and on about this. Suffice to say the pamphlets we've got just won't do. They make our city look like a very dull place indeed. Something where there isn't too much of any kind going on. You know better, and I know better.

In other words, the Chamber of Commerce should be equipped with some new, updated and enthusiastic material. It isn't so difficult really, to become enthusiastic over Oshawa. And copies of the new stuff should be available at the desk of all those friendly people who "receive" at city hall.

Let's show our newcomers and our visitors there's more to Oshawa than the obvious scrap heaps they see from the freeway and Hamburger-Alley-Simcoe-Street which they used to make their way into the city.

I guess you can call that my beef of the week.

Now you take Whitby, and you're talking an entirely different kettle of fish. As my daughter put it the other day, "In Whitby there's this great big fancy building, and it's lit up at night, and it's got pictures of Beethoven and all them guys all over the building."

Well, I don't know about Beethoven, but Whitby does have a way with its new residents.

Enough of this serious stuff.

How about this one:

Number One Son comes home Friday and asks me if he can have "all those James Bond pictures in that brown envelope."

I tell him I have no brown envelope from James Bond or even anyone connected with him.

And then he fishes it from the waste basket and it turns out to be one of these federal government department news releases that says right on the unopened envelope: "On her majesty's service."

When I asked why he thought there was something James Bondish in there, he said he first thought it read: "On her majesty's secret service."

Terrible disappointment it was, when inside he found something about a speech by Mitchell Sharp to some group somewhere.

Polish culture on display

The United Council of Polish Organizations in Oshawa is holding an exhibition of art, craft, music and dancing at the Art Gallery, Civic Centre October 2 to 11.

The official opening ceremony will be held Saturday, October 3 at 8 p.m. with a special performance of music, dance and song.

A musical program is planned for each evening. All exhibits are on loan from people of Polish origin living in Oshawa and the surrounding district. The exhibits will represent the art and craft of Poland and its regions. Many treasures, some of them family heirlooms, priceless and irreplacable will be on display.

Included in the exhibition will be a display by the Polish scouts and guides. The Gen. W. Sikorski Polish Veterans' Association will exhibit a display depicting historical events, progress and changes in the Polish Army.

TREASURER HERE

The Oshawa Chamber of Commerce has announced that Charles MacNaughton, Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics will address a major meeting of the Chamber on Wednesday, November 18. The subject of the meeting will be "Oshawa and the effect upon Oshawa of the Province's Toronto Centered Region plan."

Regional government

It's our baby, says McKeough

Why really the Oshawa Area Planning and Development study? Why really regional government? Why one big municipality from Bowmanville to Oshawa to Pickering?

Does it have anything to do at all with the provincial government's "staying in power"? Is it one big unworkable scheme?

These questions come to the fore time and again in Oshawa, Whitby and the district. The average resident is in the dark as to what it's all about. One politician explains it one way, another finds solid reasons in an opposite direction.

Mayors of the municipalities involved make speeches to service clubs and other interested groups to explain why (Just yesterday Mayor Bruce Mackey of Oshawa addressed a joint meeting of the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs on the subject (See story elsewhere in this edition.)

Municipal Affairs Minister McKeough last week came up with a concise explanation of the whole regional government idea

Many of the problems facing urban society today stem from an "erosion of responsibility" in government. McKeough told an international au-

Esther (Jeremiah) VanHorn

Looking for God-fearing people

Esther Van Horn likens herself to the prophet Jeremiah who preached to the nation of Israel for years and found only two God-fearing people.

Esther is a member of the Oshawa Jehovah's Witnesses sect and as such believes she must announce God's kingdom to her fellow man and warn that God in the near future is going to intervene in man's affairs.

"Most people are apathetic, but it's just as the Bible says; the love of the greater number for God will cool off in the last days."

Esther gave this account of the reaction of Oshawa residents as she stood on the corner of Simcoe and King Streets early one morning last week.

Don't push

"Some are interested, though, and it's these ones we want to find. We don't push ourselves on people but we have to go to them even if they're not interested or their blood will be on our shoulders.

"Many people wonder why we keep calling. That's why. They won't be able to say nobody told them."

Esther, as are the other 170 active members of the two Oshawa congregations, is a minister of her religion and strives to give away 10 copies of the Awake and Watchtower magazines a week.

"We do not sell these magazines, but people are welcome to donate five cents a copy which goes towards the cost of printing."

The Witnesses minister said other publications are quite popular with the public since they explain the relevancy of the Bible in today's society.

"Even the clergy are saying the Bible is a myth. People are confused; they don't know who to believe. We have books on the subject and they go very quickly."

Transfusions

The interview inevitably got around to the subject of blood transfusions and the adverse publicity the Witnesses suffer every time they refuse permission to give one to a child.

Esther thumbed through her Bible and turned to Chapter 15 of The Acts where several passages were underlined since, as she admitted, this is a question that frequently comes up.

"In Verse 20 and 29 and in Acts 21, Verse 25, there is the word of God telling us to abstain from blood and not to eat blood. We put this in the same category as fornication which God abhors."

Esther said her religion is often accused of being too literal about these passages, but that the word of God is perfect.

"All we can do is show these people what the Bible says; we even show them in their own Bible If they don't even believe their own Bible, there isn't much we can do."

She added that from a medical standpoint there are other solutions to the problem other than transfusions.

"Medically, it's been found that blood transfusions aren't always life-giving. Everyone knows this."

Clean, modest

The Witnesses minister said that in order to become a spokesman for the religion, a person must follow the Bible's requirements and be morally clean and modest in appearance.

She unwittingly contradicted herself slightly in the next breath, while showing a little of the human side of her nature. when This Week's photographer asked permission to take her picture

"Oh, I don't know," she said, a little flustered "In this wind, my hair's a mess."

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

All week long its been a game of "Lets see if they're on the air yet," and it nearly resulted in a breakdown in the second tv set in my house. The object of the game was to try to see if the elusive ch. 19 was transmitting any kind of signal at all And the urgency in the game was to try to estimate the strength of the incoming signal if and when the boys in the transmitter room at ch. 19 decided to favor the viewing audience with their test pattern

By Friday no confirmed signal had been received by any of us although the resulting rumors of my having seen a color test pattern were rife — how this rumor ever got started is beyond me especially when I don't have a color set — but the fact is I did see a test pattern and I wish someone in the city would confirm this

When 19 did come on with a test pattern on Saturday all doubts about the signal strength vanished The signal was great, even better than expected from the propogation charts but this isn't too hard to realize when you consider where cables antenae are located. Where the signal is hard to receive is in Oshawa itself. Ch. 19 radiates a basically northern signal and reception here will vary on the home antenna from snowy to just passable

Now you may be wondering just why every one in the industry is so excited about 19 coming on the air. Well its simply that this is a forecast of what may be the future of tv. The trend is towards more informative programming; eg, the highest viewing audience is for the big news and information specials — so a change is still occuring in the viewing habits

Ch. 19's programming is aimed in this direction and not all of it will please or impress you but somewhere along the line a program will come up that will catch your fancy. I say this with conviction because the advance promos have scheduled broadcasts from aarvarks to X-rays and one of these is bound to enthuse you

On the local front — ch 8 — things have changed. A new news announcer is warbling the news at the 6-0-clock time slot. H's easy to spot being slightly bald, and slightly rapid in his recitation of the news He's usually dressed in a frumpy sports coat and any one who can firmly identify him will win an all expense paid trip to the Oshawa bus station, one way only. PS he wears glasses

dience at San Diego, Calif

As a result, accountability to the people has been clouded by an unclear definition of where responsibility rests, he told the 56th annual conference of the International City Management Association

"Certainly in Ontario the system of provincial-local government is characterized by a proliferation of so-called responsible bodies both at the provincial and local levels."

These problems, he said, have contributed to the need for a reform of local government in Ontario, a program which he defined as a process of consultation and co-operation between the municipal and provincial levels of government

"In Ontario, we are engaged in a program in which we are emphasizing the importance of a partnership approach" by the two levels of government involved. "We believe we do not have any other choice if we are to have effective government. The province cannot do the job alone."

Mr. McKeough stressed the importance of a provincial-municipal partnership in Ontario but said that ultimately the responsibility for effective change and meaningful reform rests with the provincial government. He said the province recognizes its constitutional responsibility to ensure an effective structure of local government

"In re-organizing local government we are gradually clarifying responsibility and accountability by reducing the numbers of boards and commissions now responsible for many services in the community."

The Minister cited reform of the local system of taxation, Ontario's reassessment program, and its approach to regional development as key factors in establishing a more meaningful system of local government

Mr. McKeough said local government reform will encounter "severe" difficulties during the process of change

"Has anyone, in the pursuit of regionalism come across anything as immovable and sacrosanct as a municipal boundary?" he asked.

"Leadership in this reform must be shared if the provincial and local partnership is to be respected and fostered."

As to the use of public referenda in deciding local reform programs, the Minister suggested this procedure represents "a gross over-simplication of what is a most complex subject"

"To be realistic," he said, "the ultimate responsibility for change does rest, and must be exercised by, the provincial government."

Each reform program is preceded by years of study, discussion, hearings, proposals, negotiation and legislative debate," but then the final decision must rest with the elected representative

"A simple yes or no on a ballot that takes a few minutes does not offer a suitable means of decision-making in this issue," he said

"In Ontario," he continued, "the provincial government has the constitutional responsibility for local government and consequently for its reform. We cannot pass the buck in that respect, nor do we choose to. We have taken the view that at some point the rhetoric must cease and action begin."

Girl reporter takes flying lesson

Steering, handling easiest parts

EDITOR'S NOTE: Elaine Hallam is the latest addition to This Week's editorial staff. To introduce her to our readers, what better way than to send her up in an airplane? She now knows where you-all are, and you'll recognize her when you meet her on the street.

By Elaine Hallam

The first time you actually strap yourself into a two-seater plane and head off into the wild blue yonder can be compared to sitting down to a marvellous feast. Your body and soul say no, but your sense of adventure says GO!

Now I'm not the bravest person in the world but I pride myself in being a good driver and have never had an accident so I decided to branch out into the big times. After all, just what the heck can you run into 3000 feet above sea level over Lake Scugog?

As I strapped myself into the tiny seat of the Cessna 150 I decided to check out the credentials of my instructor, Dave Ashley of the Oshawa Flying Club. Not wishing to appear too obvious I asked if he had served during the war as a pilot. He had been flying since 1941.

My first real faux pas was to place both feet firmly on the two floor pedals, asking "is this the clutch and brake?" Now any half wit would know (for obvious reasons) a plane has no clutch or actual brake. The pedals are turning devices, activated when pressure is applied and moving the plane from left to right.

Now, the most technical thing I know about driving a car is where the gas is pumped in. So when Dave started to explain the huge array of dials, devices and knobs I just nodded knowingly and smiled. After all, who can be bothered with details when the sky beckons?

To instil confidence in the student, Dave places him in the control seat while he sits in the passenger side. Fortunately the aircraft does have dual controls.

Once you're air-borne, the easiest part is steering and handling. This job was given to me and I took over like a trouper. Bustling along at 85 miles per hour the one thing I didn't bargain for was air sickness!

The plane is only five feet wide and there isn't much manoeuvering room so just what does one do? I managed to suppress the urge by concentrating on the flight.

Dave later told me that just that very morning a young boy was up for his fifth lesson and as on previous occasions he had to stick his head out the window at 85 miles an hour to relieve himself.

The actual experience of flying was not frightening at all. I found it to be very peaceful and was awe-struck at the limitless space of clouds and horizon.

Landing right on target, I unhooked my safety belt and crawled out of the plane. My knees are still wobbling but it's only because the tremours from my stomach haven't settled down yet.

Now it's your turn, girls!

Next week we'll take a look and see how Betty Ellison of Oshawa is making out with her flying lessons.

GM announces '71 prices

Lowest Vega to sell at $ 2,122

General Motors of Canada this week announced tentative list prices for all its North American 1971 passenger cars.

The 1971 model pricing represents the largest reduction of the differential between Canadian and U.S. passenger car prices which has been continually reduced during the last six years.

Tentative list prices for the Vega 2300, the new small car which went on sale Monday, are $2,122 for the two-door sedan; $2,232 for the hatchback styled sports coupe; $2,372 for the sporty two-door station wagon; and $2,122 for the Vega panel express truck.

The other new passenger cars were introduced in dealer showrooms yesterday. They cannot be available in quantity until the conclusion of the strike by the United Automobile Workers. At that time the prices of the cars will be reviewed in light of prevailing economic factors and competitive conditions in the marketplace, according to a GM spokesman.

Going hunting?

Gunsmith says stiffer tests would cut down hunter numbers

An Oshawa man who makes his living from hunting would like to see fewer hunters in the bush

Otto Schwartz, a custom gunsmith, feels that almost anybody can get a hunting licence and too many unqualified people are allowed to take guns into the woods

The hunting safety tests aren't strong enough," Schwartz told This Week recently. "If somebody flunks a stiffer test, then he can't get out into the bush and shoot me."

The weary gunsmith was hard at work in his small shop on Simcoe Street South during the interview with This Week. He has been working from 5 a.m. until well after dark for the past month repairing guns

"This is a problem gunsmiths have all over the world. The people who own these guns have all year to get them fixed, but they wait until the last minute."

Just how accommodating Schwartz is to his customers was illustrated at that moment by a knock on the front door of his shop

"I know you don't open until 10, Otto, but could I get some solvent?" asked a man. Despite the fact that it was only 9:05 a.m., Schwartz made the sale, then came back into the rear of the shop to continue working on a faulty rifle.

Offers tips

The gunsmith offered a few hunting tips for those Oshawa residents planning to go after ducks, geese or partridge now that the season has opened.

"Something they should have done already is test their guns. If there is something wrong, the hunter shouldn't try to fix it himself. This can be dangerous. He should take it to a qualified gunsmith Schwartz said he is one of about 10 gunsmiths in Canada who are actually qualified. "There are all sorts of so-called gunsmiths around. All he has to do is pick up a screwdriver and he's in business

A second tip, but one that few hunters will probably follow, is that alcohol and guns don't mix. "People don't have enough respect for guns; if a person drinks while hunting or even goes out with a heavy head, his reflexes are much slower."

Schwartz himself does a great deal of hunting, both of birds and of bigger game. He figures that since he took it up as a hobby in Germany in the late 1930's, he has shot more than 5,000 animals from wild pig to moose, exclusive of birds

"I have a lot of respect for guns and I know how dangerous they can be if handled improperly. I never load my gun until I'm at the place of the hunt. When I go into a duck blind, my gun is empty. I've trained myself to snap my gun shut as I'm about to aim and fire."

About a month before the opening of the duck season, Schwartz was already hard at work preparing his favorite duck pond by building a blind and sowing the pond with grain.

"This gets the ducks coming in to feed and they become used to seeing the blind. Of course, a week before the season, you have to clean out the pond. A baited pond would be closed by the authorities."

Over $100

Twelve gauge shotguns are the most popular and the most dependable guns as far as the Oshawa gunsmith is concerned.

"My generation goes for the manual pump model while the younger generation which is used to having the work done for them like the semi-automatics. To get a fairly good gun, you have to go over $100 new." Schwartz said he wasn't saying this as a businessman, but that there isn't any sense in buying junk. He knows at least 25 hunters in Oshawa who have invested more than $1,500 in guns and another 40 who have spent $1,000 to $1,500.

"We have the best skeet club in Canada and members use a 4.10, a 28 gauge, a 20 gauge and a 12 gauge. The cheapest usually runs around $250 to $300 and some of the members have spares."

North America is credited with building the best pump and semi-automatic shotguns, with Remington, Winchester and Ithaca making the best pumps and Remington and Browning coming up with the best semi-automatics.

"Winchester has lots of problems with its semi-automatic, but they're working on it. If a person wants to buy a side-by-side or over-and-under double barrel, he'd be wise to stick to a European model. England has the best and the most expensive. Then there are pretty good German, Hungarian and Czech models. I'd put the Spanish on the bottom of the list."

Schwartz was critical of hunters who put out a lot of money for a gun and then won't invest $10 or $15 for a good case.

"I've seen people pay $1,700 for a gun and leave it in a plastic case all winter and then have to have the barrel re-blued for about $80. Guns should never be stored in their cases."

Amateurs

Also in for some criticism were the people in Ontario who make the hunting regulations. Schwartz believes they have to be people who have never hunted and don't know much about it.

"For instance, in Southern Ontario, you can't use the old-fashioned 44-40 calibre shell which has a muzzle velocity of 1,310 feet per second. You can actually see it flying, it's so slow.

"But you ARE allowed to use a Winchester magnum 264 calibre shell that looks like an Atlas missile and has a velocity of 3,700 feet per second. That thing goes so fast that you see the flash and hear it hit beside you before you even hear the bang."

"You don't have to be an expert to see this. I just don't understand these people."

She's so involved she nearly disappears!

Jean Todd, volunteer worker at the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal Headquarters in involved! Some days, she's so involved she almost disappears from sight behind the stacks of shoe boxes used to file the 1970 pledge cards.

This year for the first time subscription cards are being prepared for practically every householder and business establishment in the Oshawa-Whitby area. Oshawa Public Utilities have co-operated in supplying cards from their data centre, but these were prepared in June and some people have moved since then.

One of Mrs. Todd's more tedious jobs involves checking addresses on cards and removing duplicates when they occur. Finding the names and addresses of citizens who live in apartment building and aren't listed with O.P.U. is another chore calling for expert sleuthing. Fortunately Mrs. Todd has many many years of business experience to bring to the job and she's doing it as an entirely volunteer service for United Appeal.

At first she objected to any personal publicity saying: "United Appeal is doing as much for me as I am for them". Recent ill health made it important that she find an outside interest with flexible hours, so United Appeal benefits by one skilled volunteer three days a week or more.

Mrs. Todd who has no children to keep her at home enjoys being involved.

Battle of Britain on four wheels

By PETER BROUWER

Mit drei Volkswagens on one side, and mit zwei on the other, one would almost think the Battle of Britain was on again.

Since this is the year of anniversaries of liberations and battles of World War II, British Leyland's idea of dressing up one of their Spitfire sportscars as a real Spitfire is going over big.

If you've seen this funny looking little car making its way through Oshawa, don't wonder any longer. It is NOT one of those new American inventions where you leave the wings at the airport and carry on with all four wheels on the ground on your way into town.

The Spit, see picture, is painted in the original airplane camouflage; on the door there's the emblem that became so well known on Hurricanes and Spitfires during World War II. Then, to top it all off, the five Volkswagens, painted as trophies on the fuselage — oops, fenders — represent a little bit of British humor.

This Spitfire is probably the closest I'll ever come to flying a Spitfire. I've tried the tamer variety of today, and with those I've my hands full.

Quite separate from the decorations, this little Spitfire handles the way I imagine a thoroughbred horse does for a jockey. It reacts quickly and spontaneously to your movements. It's surprisingly peppy on takeoff and the little gear box is a delight to operate. There's plenty of legroom too. The seats are much more comfortable than in a lot of these small sports jobs.

I've been trying to convince the family I need a little car like this one, because the getting in and out of it alone, with the roof down, is bound to take several inches off the waistline, if carried out vigorously.

The Spit, of course, is not quite the equal of its big brother, the TR 6, but there's quite a difference in price too, and this one in my book is better for touring, while the TR 6 has a tendency to bring out the racer in most drivers.

Another excellent feature on this car is the way the entire hood and front fender combination lifts up for easy access to the engine department.

If you're thinking of an inexpensive but spirited sporty car, don't pass this one by. It lives up to its name, even without the wings.

As far as shooting down the German "people's auto" . . . well, the trophy Volkswagens on the front fenders got me several laughs, even from some bug operators. British Leyland gets an A plus for humor on this car.

I'm anxiously waiting now for a World War II version of the new Buick Centurion — will it really have turrets?

This Week staffer Tom Douglas says here's how they did it. He borrowed the machete and the helmet from Al's Sports and Surplus.

Would you believe half a Lancaster and a Spitfire at Oshawa Airport. Note shot down Volkswagens on left front fender.

FEWER CAR KILLINGS; WHAT'S THE CAUSE?

Deaths and injuries due to traffic collisions took a sharp drop in Ontario in the first six months of 1970, and now authorities want to find out just how this happier turn of events came about.

Ontario Department of Transport figures show that 109 fewer people were killed and 1,751 fewer injured than in 1969. This was a reduction of 14.7 percent in the number of deaths and 5.1 percent in the number of injuries. Collisions resulting in injuries or fatalities dropped by 3.9 percent in the same period. An intensive analysis is now underway to pinpoint the reasons for this welcome decrease.

the $19.99 tune-up is here!

An untuned engine is an expensive hang-up. It lacks performance, eats gas and balks at starting. For only 19.99 we'll replace the plugs, points, condenser and rotor and set things up to give you back the performance that makes driving fun again.

But maybe you think it's a little risky trusting a "Discount Store" when it comes to car repairs. Maybe you think a high price means a better job. If you do, then maybe you're paying too much for car service.

We specialize in "Most Needed" car services. Our men are experts and we use only name brand parts. We can save you money, safely. Try us. We're open every night until 10.00 p.m. — and you don't need an appointment.

On Highway No. 2
Between Oshawa & Whitby

For VanLith convincing parents is most difficult

The most difficult task Andrew Van Lith has when dealing with parents of retarded children is convincing them their child is better off in an institution.

Mr. Van Lith, who is the father of a retarded son and the president of the Oshawa and District Association for Retarded Children, had to make that difficult decision himself five years ago.

"My wife and I will never be able to forget the look on our son's face as we left him at the Smith Falls school for retarded children. We cried for many days after," he said.

The five years at the school have changed their son from an uncontrollable and difficult child into a manageable boy of 14 who can now be trained to be useful to society, and who will soon be home to join his family.

But many parents still refuse to believe or admit their child is retarded and would never consider sending them to an institution. "It is the most difficult thing I ever had to do but when I see my son now, I realize it was for the best," says this father.

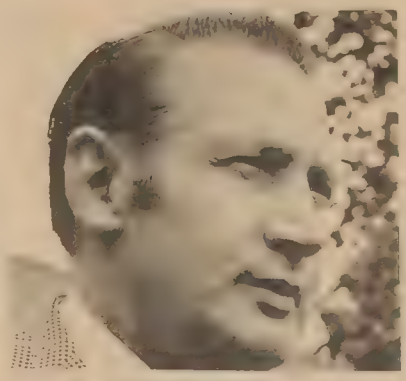
There are many children in the area who are still living with their families and cause considerable hardship.

Hardship

"I know of one couple who haven't been out for 18 years because they simply refuse to trust either relatives or friends to look after their child," he said.

A residence for retarded children is now being constructed to house local and district children for temporary periods.

The burden of a retarded child on his mother is especially traumatic. It is the mother who has to spend 24 hours a day with the child. Sometimes she can't even go shopping or go next door for a cup of coffee with the neighbor.



The mother's nerves are soon frayed and need a rest. According to Mr. Van Lith the best rest she could have would be to admit the child to the residence for four or five weeks. The child would be under constant supervision and care and the mother could relax knowing her child is well-cared for.

1-3 years

It is impossible to admit children to an institution for short periods of time. In fact it often takes from one to three years after making application to actually admitting the child. The length of wait depends upon the urgency and condition of the child.

The Oshawa and District Retarded Children's Association has been given an $80,000 grant from the government to construct the residence and must raise an additional $20,000 on its own. The residence is scheduled to open next spring.

The government is beginning to realize that retarded children should be kept as close to the home as possible.

"I think more and more of these small residences will spring up around the country taking the pressure off the larger institutions," says Mr. Van Lith.

Part of Mr. Van Lith's work consists of visiting parents of retarded children offering them advice on their child's welfare. The parent of a retarded child can actually begin training and exercising the child right from birth. He distributes booklets showing guidelines on how to help the child

"Many parents refuse to believe their child is retarded but if I can get them to just take this book and read it I know I have at least accomplished something," he says.

In his spare time Mr. Van Lith repairs bicycles that citizens have donated. His garage is filled with odds and ends belonging to old bicycles. A new piece here and a new piece there soon transform the wreck into a useable vehicle.

Bikes, toys

He gives the bicycles to the Smith Falls School or the Orillia school for retarded children. They are always in desperate need

The minimum wage is going up.

An announcement on the new Minimum Wage and some improvements of Employment Standards in the area of job security.

As of October 1, 1970, the general minimum wage goes up to $1.50 hour, and the construction minimum to $1.75 hour. Then, on April 1, 1971, the general minimum jumps to $1.65 hour, and construction to $1.90 hour.

If your wage depends on the established minimum, get the whole story on the rising minimum wages by writing or phoning the Regional office of the Ontario Department of Labour nearest you.

At the same time the minimum wage goes up, new regulations come into effect to improve your job security.

For example, if you work for one of an associated group of companies and are assigned to another company in the group for a period of time, you'll get paid for any overtime you work just as if you were still working for the original company. All the other provisions of the Act apply the same way.

If, for any reason, your company closes down, all wages owed to you (up to $2,000) have preferred claim against the assets of the employer.

The same rule covers any vacation pay you may have coming (vacation pay must now be held in trust for you by your employer).

How much vacation are you entitled to? The law says you must get at least one week's paid vacation after your first twelve months of employment, and two week's paid vacation after each of the next twelve months.

Some new teeth in the law.

The Employment Standards Branch has the power to assess any money owing to you, either wages, overtime or vacation pay, and to collect it from your employer on your behalf.

Employers must also pay the Department a 10% penalty for withholding any money from you.

For the whole story on what these changes mean to you, write or phone your nearest Employment Standards Branch.

Is it a virus? Is it an Allergy? For the sake of Lois and Carl the answer must be found

Frank Simpson, Chairman of the Ontario County Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society, didn't mean to get involved . . . at least not this involved.

When they asked him to head the newly-formed chapter, about a year ago, he had just begun a new career in real estate. The hours were erratic, for a good real estate agent works at his job all day every day, and Frank thought the chairmanship of the MS Society too important to take on if he hadn't time to do the job properly.

So somebody else took the job, couldn't handle it because of business pressures and Frank Simpson was asked again. It's hard to refuse when the request comes from a friend and the friend is Carl Disney.

Carl Disney used to own and operate a thriving automobile business — before MS. To him, as to most of us, Multiple Sclerosis was just an unpronounceable name for a mysterious disease. He knows a lot more about it now.

What is it?

Multiple Sclerosis is a disease of the central nervous system. It attacks the protective covering of the nerves of the spinal cord, destroying this sheath, or myelin as it's called medically, and leaving scar tissue in its place. The scar tissue puts the nerve out of commission, much as a frayed electric cord will short circuit an electrical system.

Usually the onset of the disease is mild and difficult to diagnose. It may begin with blurring of the vision, tremours, stiffness of limbs or difficulty with speech. The symptoms may disappear and the patient enjoys a remission which could last for months or even years. Occasionally the symptoms never recur again, but usually the disease is an ever present threat that eventually moves in to stay. The patient suffers progressive difficulty in getting about and may go from a cane to crutches to a wheelchair at the same time deteriorating in speech and vision. The end result may be complete paralysis.

The disease may attack the very young or the old, but strangely and tragically it usually strikes those in the 20 to 40 age group, people like Carl Disney. Active, energetic, successful in business and about to branch out of the automobile business to open a golf course, Carl had to give all this up as MS moved in. Today, in his mid-thirties he manages his investments, is careful not to get over-tired and works as a volunteer for the Society, hoping that research will some day soon find a cure.

Mystery still

But although the disease has been recognized for about 150 years and intensively researched for the past 20, it still remains a mystery. It strikes, regardless of race, sex, occupation or intelligence and yet it appears to be restricted almost entirely to temperate climates. Is weather a factor? Then why is a child born in a temperate climate and moving to a tropical one just as likely to contract the disease as if he had remained in his birthplace? The search for answers goes on.

Approximately one half to three quarters of a million dollars is spent annually on MS research in 50 medical centres around the world, and it's on this research that MS sufferers pin their hope. "Even if it doesn't help me, eventually the research is going to help someone else", says Carl Disney as he spends his precious resources of strength and energy in work for the MS Society.

A second of the nine volunteers in Oshawa is also an MS patient. She is Lois Stuart, a young wife still in her twenties who contracted the disease shortly after she was married, seven years ago. Everyone who knows Lois remarks on her cheerful, vibrant personality. She's the kind of girl who jokes about a recent tumble that earned her a broken shoulder bone, stitches in her chin, a chipped front tooth and a glorious black eye. . .the kind who says to Frank Simpson, sure she'll sell raffle tickets downtown, as long as there's a washroom nearby. Loss of bladder control is just another of the manifestations of MS.

Projects

The raffle tickets like several other projects the Oshawa volunteers are engaged in, come from the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Multiple Sclerosis Society in Toronto, or LAMS. . They have initiated a sale of gourmet cookbooks, Hallowe'en candies and Christmas cards and all the money derived from these goes back to national headquarters for that all-important research.

Local projects are underwritten by funds from the United Appeal. Chief of these is education of the public. "Nine out of ten people don't know what MS is", says Frank Simpson. "They say, 'oh that's what the firemen support'. . .and of course they're confusing it with muscular dystrophy, which is natural enough since the initials are similar." A layman's term for MS, Mr. Simpson suggests, could be "many scars", to remind one of the scar tissue that causes the nerves to short circuit.

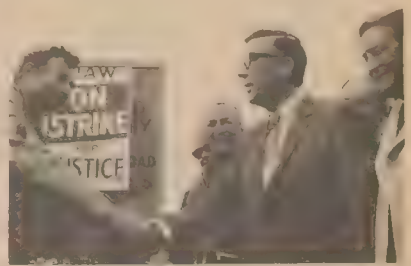
Hoping to help clear up confusion about MS, the local unit has manned an educational display at the Oshawa Fair and also at the Home Show, where promotional material was given away. In the fall they plan to supply speakers for service clubs and Home and School meetings. Lois and Frank have done one half hour radio interview and hope to do more.

Patient care

Patient care is another prime concern of the MS Society and the volunteers are in touch with 25 patients in Oshawa and another 10 or 12 in the area. Since MS is not communicable and so not a reportable disease it's certain that there are many more cases in Ontario County and the volunteers would like to reach all of them. Sometimes relatives or friends put them in touch, and the group is preparing a letter to local medical personnel telling them of the new chapter and what it can offer. This can include such things as supplying a wheelchair if there's financial need, or even a morale-boosting visit. One volunteer who's good at arts and crafts will shortly be visiting patients to help them with handicrafts "We don't want to push ourselves in", they say, "but just knowing people are intersted can help".

The volunteers hope to organize a regular schedule of social outings for MS sufferers, and already they've held a successful bingo at the Thornton Road Community Centre.

Anyone can join the Ontario County Chapter by sending $2 to Box 703 Oshawa. This entitles the member to literature on new research and notices of planned activities, as well as the good feeling that he has contributed something to the fight. Of course larger donations are welcome too, and in the past year about $1500 has been sent on to national headquarters



Need volunteers

But most of all Frank Simpson and his busy volunteers would like more volunteers. People whose special talent may be visiting patients at home or in hospital. People who can promote the sale of Hallowe'en candy or cookbooks or raffle tickets. People without any special skills but just the desire to help others.

Ths Oshawa chapter is very young and still struggling to become established. Their allotted budget is small but their aims are large. . .to help find the key to the mystery. . .the cure for the dread crippling handicap of Multiple Sclerosis. Is it a virus? Is it an allergy? Nobody knows — yet, but for the sake of Lois and Carl and all the others, the answer must be found.

The kindergarten class of Mary Street Public School had a lesson about vegetables last week when they trooped en masse to a farm and picked their favorite vegetable. Later they learned how to cook the different vegetables.

They were all smiles as UAW President Leonard Woodcock visited Oshawa picket lines Monday.

for toys and bicycles

Mr. Van Lith first became involved with volunteer work when he visited his son and realized they had very little in the line of toys and games to play with.

He began to round up old toys and broken bicycles and work on them on his own. He then joined the association and has been working hard ever since.

His dream is to have his son home with him soon and to see the opening of the new residence.

He hopes that in the near future the Board of Education will take over the financial responsibility of training and developing the skills of the retarded child

Katherine Van Hoof found the only way to have her husband meet her demands was to go on strike. A home made sign posted outside her Simcoe Street South home did the trick.

Housewife on strike against her husband

Katherine Van Hoof has taken the philosophies of the Women's Liberation Movement and put them into action. Last week she waged a one-day strike against her husband

Mrs. Van Hoof wants her husband to pay for two night school courses so that she can continue her education in the event that if she has to raise her family on her own she can be self-sufficient

"My husband just could not see the need for my ever having to work. I was thinking of the future — he wasn't," she said

All the explanation and pleading did not win her case so she decided to hit closer to home. She refused to cook any meals for her husband or to do any housework

A large sign, strategically positioned on the front lawn of her home on Simcoe Street South drew a lot of support for Mrs. Van Hoof from passing women

"Many of them wanted to borrow my sign. I

SIDE BY SIDE

OSHAWHIT

Since 1855 when Oshawa was a village and Whitby was a town, the two communities have grown together side by side.

Each has learned from the other's mistakes. They have shared in joint community projects, used each other's recreational facilities, amalgamated their United Appeal campaigns and even elected an Oshawa-Whitby member of parliament.

Now, the biggest separation between the two communities is the actual geographical four mile stretch between Oshawa and Whitby. But, Whitby refuses to accept Oshawa's persuasive arguments that an amalgamated community would better service all the people in the two areas. And Oshawa has come up with some very good arguments on behalf of amalgamation.

Oshawa maintains that Whitby's fears of being swallowed up in the amalgamation are unfounded.

If Whitby residents held on to their enthusiasm, their historical ties and their customs there need not be any fears, Oshawa argues.

The major shopping facilities of the two municipalities are less than one and a half miles apart and while there are no figures to indicate just who shops where, it can be assumed a large number of Whitby residents shop at the Oshawa Shopping

I'm like a hippy, says controller

Shaw would bulldoze drop-in

For the past couple of weeks a number of Oshawa's youth have protested Controller Margaret Shaw's statements made about hippies. Mrs. Shaw couldn't be happier for their protests.

"The attack these young people have made against me is the first bit of interest they have shown. Now they are really beginning to show the citizens of Oshawa they care," says Mrs Shaw.

Con. Shaw said she was glad the kids had finally taken a stand. "They just can't continue to sit in a hole in the wall (the drop-in centre) and say they don't like things the way they are. They must come out and tell us what they want. And if they can do this by attacking me, then I'm happy," says Con. Shaw.

She said she was against the use of the Legion Hall from the very inception of the Drop-In Centre. The city had many more suitable buildings it could lend.

Bulldoze it

"I felt if the youths settled for that dug-out they would never get anything better There is absolutely no stimulation for them and if I had my way I would bulldoze the building," says Mrs Shaw.

Mrs. Shaw has never come face to face with many of the kids who accused her of being responsible for closing down the centre. In fact the kids admit they would not know her if they met her

'I would look forward to meeting these young people face to face. Each of us could explain our own point of view but there is no point in shouting each other down. We must learn to compromise," says Mrs. Shaw

Mrs. Shaw is confident that in seven or eight years some of these young people will themselves be running for municipal office and she's in favor of lowering the voting age to 18 "even if it means being defeated"

She said she objects to the way the advisory committee of the drop-in centre has handled the matter of closing down the centre for a certain

SHORT TAKES

RUMMAGE SALE
The Women's Auxiliary of the J. O'Ruddy Hospital is holding its annual bazaar and rummage sale October 14 from 1:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. The event will be held at the Whitby arena and will feature baking, handicrafts and clothing sales

DONATION
The Seventh Day Adventist Church of Oshawa recently donated more than $1,000 worth of supplies for families in the Sudbury area

SCHOOL OPENINGS
The Ontario County School Board announced the official openings of four new schools including Alden Public School Ajax, Oct. 20, Oct. 22 for the addition to Dunbarton High School, Oct. 28 for Brechin Public School, Nov. 4 for Central Park Senior Public School and Nov. 19 for Lakewoods Junior Public School

NOMINATION
R.L. Gouch, director of public relations for General Motors of Canada Limited is one of 13 candidates who have been nominated for election to the board of governors of Trinity College School, Port Credit. The election will be held Oct. 24

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED
The city is searching for volunteers to serve on a housing standards committee. Their duties will include inspecting any property within the city to determine whether renovation or demolition are in order to maintain a minimum standard among buildings. Three ratepayers will hold office on the committee for three years

CELEBRATIONS
The board of directors of the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce have announced they will spearhead the 1971 celebrations for Col. R.S. McLaughlin's 100th birthday.

TAG DAY
More than $1,350 has been donated to the Ontario County Animal Shelter sponsors of a tag day last weekend. More contributions are expected from Uxbridge and Port Perry

PUBLIC INVITED
The public is invited to a meeting of the traffic committee October 13 to discuss their comments on the parking situation in Oshawa. The committee is seeking to implement a general three-hour maximum parking restriction for the whole city, and would replace present three-hour overnight restrictions and two-hour restrictions for on-street parking in residential areas

MARRIAGE
Mr. and Mrs. Mark A Quesnelle wish to announce the forthcoming marriage of their youngest daughter Margaret Beverly to Terry Cyr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred J. Cyr of Whitby. The marriage will take place Nov. 14 at Holy Cross Church, Oshawa

DONATIONS
A combined effort by the 60-member Oshawa Council of Churches has sent $900 and another $8,000 worth of clothing and furniture to Field, a small village of 600 near Sudbury, hit by a severe storm. Smith Transport Ltd. donated a trailer for use in transporting the supplies to Field.

INSPECTION
Engineers from the Ontario School Board made an inspection of South Simcoe Public School last week and will announce their findings at a later board meeting. Parents had complained of "deplorable" conditions at the school.

TICKET SALE
The Oshawa Little Theatre has announced their subscription campaign has reached the halfway mark with 1,500 tickets being sold to date. Last year's campaign yielded a total house of 92 per cent or about 3,000 patrons for each play

INSTALLATION
Due to technical problems encountered in sewer installation on Bloor St. East an additional $5,800 will be required to complete the job. Poor soil conditions and complications with other underground services were given as the reasons for moving the sewer from the north to the south side of Bloor Street, thus the added expense. The money will come from a special municipal services account.

NO PARKING
Construction work on the city's new police building has forced the removal of most on street parking for at least one year, on the north side of Richmond Street between Simcoe and Church streets

Day care centre is first aim

By Elaine Hallam

No woman alive can deny that there is inequality between the sexes, be it in the form of employment benefits or human rights. Many women choose to ignore this fact, but those who feel strongly about this inequality support the Women's Liberation Movement.

In 1900 women accounted for one eighth of the labor force. The majority of those who worked did so in occupations traditionally associated with domestic choices: dressmaking, laundry and domestic services.

In 1970 over one third of the labor force (approximately 2.5 million women) is made up of women. The female labor force has moved out of the factories and into the schools, universities and business world.

More and more married women are entering the work force but many more are hampered by the lack of day care centres where they can leave their children, confident they will be looked after by professionally trained people.

Barbara Barrett of the Oshawa Womens Liberation movement says there is a very big need for a 24-hour day care centre in Oshawa to facilitate the children of working mothers.

Need centre

Several Oshawa women have joined together to form a Women's Liberation Movement in the area and one of the fields they are most active in is trying to convince the city a day care centre is badly needed.

Spokesman for the group Barbara Barrett said that women in Oshawa especially need a centre because so many of them work shifts. Nurses who work the night shift and whose husbands work the night shift at General Motors need some place where their children may be cared for.

The Women's Lib in Oshawa would like to see a government sponsored 24-hour a day day-care centre for children from the infant stage to school age. The cost to the parents would be calculated on a sliding scale based on income.

They would like to see the province pay 80 per cent and the municipality pay 20 per cent. They have already picked out what they feel is a perfect location — the Children's Aid building which is not in use now and would have the necessary facilities.

Survey need

The family counselling department is now conducting a survey to determine the need for a day-care centre. They are canvassing 1,000 homes on 52 streets. The results are to be put before council in November but the earliest it could be established would be the next budget year.

The Women's Lib differs from the New Feminists in that they deal with the average woman. The New Feminists cater to the working or career girl and have been blamed for their "man-hating" tactics.

The Oshawa Women's Lib like their world-wide counterparts would like to see homemakers being paid for staying home to look after the house and the family.

"Women should be liberated enough to have the time to go out and work and if some women want to stay home they should be able to receive payment. If a woman is in the home she should be there because she wants to and not because she has to," says Mrs. Barrett.

She says the school system still has a long way to go in planning courses for girls and not channeling them into secretarial courses.

"Girls always play the nurse but hardly ever the doctor," says Mrs. Bennett.

The Women's Lib would like to see women paid the same amount of money for doing the same job as men.

Cheap labor

"When there is an excess of work, women are called in because they are considered a cheap labour force and as soon as the work runs out they are released," says Mrs Barrett.

MPP Cliff Pilkey (NDP-Oshawa) has proposed that the Human Rights Code be amended to include sex as one of the forbideen bases of discrimination. In 1967 women averaged an annual income of $2,303 and men averaged $5,331.

Dalton Bales, Ontario minister of labour recently announced that the Women's Equal Employment Opportunity Act will be in force by December 1, 1970. The legislation includes an advertising provision which states that advertisers may not place and publications may not print advertisements limiting a position to a person of one sex or marital status, unless an exemption for the job has first been established.

Many of the philosophies of the Women's Lib movement coincide closely with the policies of the New Democratic Party, such as equal pay, guaranteed minimum income, tax reform etc., which would benefit poor people as well as women

"I think socialism is the answer. Everyone is paid equally and treated equally with no form of oppression. This is the ideal situation for the supporters of Women's Lib," says Mrs. Barrett

"Once women begin to show an interest in their future and push for their demands then and only then will these demands be met," says Mrs. Barrett.

"It's time the social and psychological oppression is lifted from women, time they got out and involved with people and become a productive and active part of society."

period of time.

"I think it is childish to close down the centre for one week and act as if the youths are being punished. If they clean the place up to comply with health regulations then they should be allowed to use it again," says Mrs. Shaw.

Like a hippy

She compares herself to the hippies in many ways. They are a minority in society and she feel she is a minority on Council.

"We are both controversial. I stand up for the things I believe in even though it may cost me votes. Everything they do is controversial."

Mrs. Shaw said she wishes the young people would not misinterpret her feelings about the drop-in centre. As deputy mayor, she closed down the centre recently because complaints from two parents whose children had hepatitis, blamed it on the centre, and demanded it be closed.

"But I'm all for a drop-in centre. They are better off in a place of their own than walking the streets."

"I like most of the young people today but they must begin to live within our society and if they want change they must stand up and be counted for," says Mrs. Shaw

"In the meantime if they want to come and talk to me or they want to continue to strike out against me, that is fine At least I know they are beginning to react to our society."

Like an obstacle

Alderman Gordon Attersley complained to council this week that getting to the General Motors South Plant is "like coming down an obstacle course."

He was referring to detours, construction and paving jobs

Oshawa argues case for merger with Whitby

Centre. Many Oshawa residents in turn, shop at the K-Mart plaza and the Whitby Mall.

These last two shopping areas are located midway between the core residential area of Whitby and the densely populated west end of Oshawa.

Whitby has a present population of 23,000 but a population of between 85,000 and 120,000 is projected for the year 2001. Oshawa feels Whitby could not possibly handle this phenomenal growth rate, while at the same time keeping up the level of standards now provided for Whitby residents.

Services

One of Oshawa's strongest arguments for amalgamation is that with the joint effort of both communities, citizens would be able to continue to enjoy the level of services now existing in Oshawa.

Previous studies in other communities (e.g. Ottawa-Carleton) have indicated that with the amalgamation of two areas the coordination of services by the various municipal departments have resulted in many advantages.

Combining the best staff members from each department would result in a higher calibre of staff. Amalgamation would allow certain departments to buy rather than rent certain machinery.

Amalgamation would allow for the coordination of such services as garbage collection, traffic engineering, construction and maintenance of local roads. Is it logical to have two separate Fire Departments serving the two areas when amalgamation of the two would bring about one strong department?

Half works here

Half of the residents in north and east Whitby work in Oshawa, while 37 per cent of south Whitby residents work there also. More than 94 per cent of Oshawa residents, 78.6 per cent of south Whitby residents and 54.5 per cent of north and east Whitby residents work in the Central City area. These percentages are based on 1964 figures.

In 1969, 215 (14.4 per cent) of the people admitted to the Oshawa General Hospital were Whitby residents. In the first six months of this year following the opening of the new Dr. Joseph O. Ruddy Hospital in Whitby, there were still 162 (10.6 per cent) Whitby residents admitted to the Oshawa General Hospital.

In 1969, 25 per cent of the subscribers to the Oshawa Little Theatre were Whitby residents, and 15 per cent of the active members of the club were Whitby residents.

Last year seven per cent of the new card holders at the Oshawa Public Library were Whitby residents.

Merger

It was decided to amalgamate the Oshawa and Whitby United Appeals in 1968 because there was considerable confusion as to which United Appeal people living in one community, and working in the other, should support.

There was the further problem of double administration in some cases where agencies had administrative offices in both communities. It seemed practical and functional, therefore, to combine the administrative staffs.

Shopping, going to the theatre or visiting the library are every day occurences and are done with little thought as to the closeness of the two communities. These are just a few of the more obvious reasons why the two municipalities should be amalgamated, according to Oshawa's submission to the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study.

If Oshawa and Whitby were to amalgamate, their combined populations would result in higher density grants from the government and based on 1969 population figures this would mean an increase of $67,800. And in addition, amalgamation of local services would result in a lower mill rate.

Oshawa and Whitby are two municipalities seen as twin centres which are increasingly growing together into a single urban complex.

In its next issue, THIS WEEK will take another look at Oshawa's brief to the OAPADS study.

Couple compromises got all kinds of support and several people stopped to see if the sign was for real," says Mrs. Van Hoof.

It didn't take long for her husband to realize she was serious about continuing her education and after discussions and removal of the sign, he conceded.

"Of course, I had to compromise and promise to make breakfast which I normally did not do. But as long as I got my demands I am happy," she said

Mrs. Van Hoof says she is not a firm supporter of the Women's Liberation Movement as a force to motivate other women, but is interested primarily in her own future.

"After all, I don't want to be housewife for the rest of my life and when my children are entering university I will have many years ahead to become a member of the work force."

Mrs. Van Hoof recommends all women follow in her footsteps if their husbands refuse to accept what they feel are reasonable requests.

by peter brouwer

A few years ago there were two editors of small Ontario weeklies in neighboring towns who carried on a lively exchange of blasts and bouquets (not too many of the latter). One was a Liberal and the other a Conservative. Both were what they were very much so.

Now I don't want to play the Conservative, or the Liberal or the NewDem, and I don't want to get started on anything like the feud Laird Miller of Jarvis and Sam Morris of Port Dover had going between them in their newspapers. Besides, I don't know whether Jack is a Liberal or a PC or an NDP-er or what, and of course there's the disadvantage that we're both living and working in the same town, and I do come across him at the Four Corners every so often, or at a press conference called by someone who is anxious to reach all of the people of Oshawa and Whitby.

Anyway, this is to you, Jack Gearin of the Times Staff, and a "good evening" to you too.

As one of your "dear readers" I find that your criticism on occasion can be most destructive, and that on other occasions you are patronizing vitriolic about lost causes. Jack, you read like a cracked record. Get out of your groove. I'll take as an example your comments last week about city treasurer Frank Markson's views on conventions and the funds the city spends on them. And I'll quote one whole paragraph: "We don't share Mr. Markson's convention trail spending philosophy. It may seem like a drop in the bucket overall to the uniniated, but is it? What's the taxpayer's reaction when he sees money squandered needlessly on far-off convention safaris? Does he not wonder how far such wastage extends in municipal spending? True, the convention trail budget is only one aspect of the overall municipal picture; but it's also a reasonably good barometer as to what city hall's spending habits are in other fields. If we don't watch the pennies, we can't save the dollars."

That sounds like the cackling of some tired out old biddy, unsuccessfully scratching for muck. Accentuate the positive, Jack. See the good in people's actions, and see the light for a change. Frank Markson is no dummy. He has served us well in watching the city's coffers.

So what about this convention business?

First. A convention is not a bed of roses. You are away from home, often staying at indifferent hotels. A change of drinking water can give you "the trots". If you go through a time zone, your mental clock goes out of kilter. And you are always, repeat always, personally out of pocket.

Second. What are the positive benefits of attending conventions? With the imminent inception of regional government, our department heads need all the exposure to new ideas, they can obtain if the government transition is to be smooth. Where else can they be exposed to new methods, new approaches to old problems, new accounting techniques, new building techniques, new planning concepts. Certainly not by talking to themselves. It is vitally important that our municipal leaders have the opportunity to keep abreast of the latest changes in technology in an ever changing world. Conventions provide such opportunity. They must not be universally condemned just because they are occasionally abused by some misguided individuals.

Jack, it occurs to me that you might be up to your old pastime of "stirring things up." It appears you are trying to promote wrath in the minds of people less fortunate than those in the city who work. Perhaps you are aiming at those who are presently on strike and who are in the process of counting their dollars most carefully at this time.

To feeble minds, the opportunity of seeing a picture of city hall employees "on the convention trail", blowing tax dollars like there was no tomorrow is perhaps good copy. It isn't, Jack. It's just vindictive and in poor taste.

editorial

Musty, and out of touch with reality

The Board of Education last week deliberated at length about the desirability of allowing one of the schools under its jurisdiction to be used by a group of citizens outside school hours while liquor is being served. The Oshawa Times, in an editorial, came out strongly against issuing the liquor licence to the group while meeting at the school.

It is unfortunate that both the board and the newspaper reached the decision they did. It shows, in our opinion, a complete lack of comprehension as to the realities of the situation.

At present, the utilization of our schools as public buildings is minimal compared with their potential use if the school board members would get off their collective behinds and seek alternative uses outside school hours and during school holidays so that the taxpayers would get better value for their dollars.

To give an example of what we mean, school holidays amount to an average of 12 weeks over the year. This leaves 9 months in which the schools are utilized for approximately eight hours a day for the purpose for which they were designed. In addition, some school buildings are utilized for night school, offering a wide variety of courses. This however, only occurs throughout the winter and spring season so the rest of the year the schools are lying unutilized in the late afternoon and evening. Apart from the cost of extra janitorial services and electric lights, it costs very little more to run the schools, whether they are utilized in the evening or not. Accordingly, the percentage of municipal taxes which are directly a portion for education is extremely high.

If then someone such as a neighbourhood association which is performing excellent volunteer work in the recreation field for youngsters asks for the building, why should they be denied this?

It is manifestly absurd to refuse an application on the grounds that the introduction of liquor in a building utilized by children in their absence sets a bad example for youngsters. This is a phony double standard. Most kids see more of liquor being consumed in their homes and in the movies and on tv than any revelry in their classrooms, in their absence, could possibly corrupt.

The applicants were not asking for a license to indulge in libation during school hours.

Or, is it perhaps that these guardians of our offspring's morals were concerned lest the alcoholic odor of a discarded barmaid's apron, overlooked in the cleanup after the previous nights debauchery, might intoxicate our offspring? The whole reason is out of touch.

Surely, any use which is legal and is of benefit to the community should be allowed in the schools after hours. What is this talk of damage to the board image? What sort of an image do they possess as a result of this farce? We submit it is an image of mustiness and of being out of touch with reality.

B . . r is a new dirty word

You have probably read elsewhere and observed on television that a combination of a flaxen-haired girl holding glasses of br and the word br written underneath constitute a moral danger of indescribable proportions. It is, as far as we can see, of absolutely no use even attempting to get this sort of nonsense wiped off the statute books. The LCBO is here to stay.

However, let's look at the positive side. All you tearaways and young rebels, just think for a moment. We have been given a new no-no word of indescribable potency. If you really want to hit the establishment, where it hurts, make them tear their hair out and gnash their teeth — go and find a blank wall, draw a picture of a busty young lady and write br underneath.

In addition of course you will almost certainly have the moral support of your parents and other mature people in your fight against the establishment and almost certainly the active encouragement of the breweries.

Let's be honest — the most common obscene four letter words have been used so frequently that they have lost their potency but br offers a whole new field to explore.

The question is, of course, how we can now advertise without envoking the swift retribution of the LCBO.

We have a suggestion for the breweries. Why not emulate the pharmaceutical companies who manufacture contraceptives. You will recall that, in order to get around the law which used to forbid advertisement of birth control products they label their products with the warning "these goods are sold for the sole purpose of prevention of disease" or words to that effect.

We all know that wasn't the only use they had. Why not then shouldn't the breweries put a similar notation on the labels of their bottles i.e. "the contents of this bottle are sold on the understanding that it will only be used for the prevention of disease."

Let's be honest. We are constantly being told of the dangers of pollution in our water, mercury pollution in our fish. We are rapidly coming to the conclusion that br is the only safe drink. Accordingly, we are sure that as long as advertisements for Br are published containing this caution, the LCBO would probably have no objection whatsoever as it would then be seen to be doing its duty. While drinking is like the poor, which we will always have with us, they have made damn sure that at least it didn't appear to be enjoyable. Think about it.

Board of Control

The Ontario Municipal Board's decision last week with respect to abolition of Oshawa's Board of Control is regrettable in the extreme.

We are not complaining about the decision itself at this time but as to the apparent manner in which the decision was reached.

To all outward appearances two gentlemen who reside in Toronto, hightailed over to Oshawa, listened to submissions from detractors and advocates of the Board of Control system for two hours and then departed.

Considering the implications of this decision we submit that it is physically impossible in two hours to hear all the evidence pro and con they should have had in their possession to make an intelligent decision.

If the same bungling goes on in Board of Control during the next two years as went on during the last two, the Professional procrastinating, the political infighting — then we regret to inform you that in our opinion the Oshawa taxpayers are going to be out of pocket some extra tens of thousands of dollars come this time two years from now.

Sinclair reads us

Sir:

A couple of weeks ago I heard broadcaster Gordon Sinclair quote from your newspaper in his "Let's be personal" show.

You should send him your newspaper more often. He appreciates radicals.

The story he quoted was that terrible piece on the two kids who defrauded the welfare department out of hundreds of dollars.

Where to?

Sir:

Please let me know just where your reporter Tom Douglas is going in Australia. I have some friends there — libbies, as he would call them. And they could make life quite interesting for him

Editor's note: Wish we knew. But we'll pass along his first postcard so you may follow up.

Look at England

Sir:

What about a government plan to put industrial relations in a legal frame work?

An industrial court could be set up to provide teeth for a vastly expanded labor commission.

A cooling off period could be established and there could be compulsory strike ballots in cases where a strike endangers the national interest.

A registrar could be installed with the power to order a union to change its rules.

They're considering these things in England's tough labor reforms bill. Perhaps it's time we tried it here.

Think about this one

Sir:

Here's a quote from J A Kennedy, QC chairman of the Ontario Municipal Board, which might be of some benefit to Oshawa officials:

"If the planning board's function is to advise council, and that is surely what it should be, then surely members of council should not be on the planning board to join in deliberations and vote on what advice they should receive as councillors. To have councillors doing this is at least incongruous and more likely vicious. Substantially the same reason applies to members of council seeking to sway the advice the planning board will give them as councillors."

As I suggested, let Oshawa think about this one.

The littering minority

Sir:

In reply to "Tenant and Taxpayer" I would like to inform him that he is calling a very small number of students "careless, rude, and untidy". I venture to guess that the number is even thirty, and considering that our enrollment is over 1300, I'd say this "Tenant" is being a bit facetious!

Sure, I agree with him that even 30 is too big a number, but when he labels the whole school as being to blame then he can go live somewhere else!

Mr Dixon, our principal, has done everything in his power, as has Mr. Williams and some of the staff, to stop this bad habit, but some students are not willing to cooperate. This year we have even set up a designated smoking area with garbage cans, but apparently these students like to live dangerously. We have been told countless times to stop the habit and respect other people's property and 1270 of us are!

In the future, please do not blame our principals, staff, or students "who have been taught to respect" by their parents. Rather go and talk to the minority who are destroying a good name for the majority!

He quits

Sir

I quit.

Council highlights

By Peter Brouwer
editor

There were 11 major items discussed, considered, not accepted and/or torpedoed by city council at its meeting Monday.

Here's a brief rundown:

CONTROLLER SHAW withdrew her original notice of motion calling for a plebiscite on the way Oshawa is to be governed. (Board of Control, or no Board of Control.) Her decision to withdraw came after the official decision of the Ontario Municipal Board not to accept Oshawa's bid to kill off the Board of Control in favor of another system.

ALDERMAN HUMPHREYS suggested council representation on the planning board be cut from three members to one, with the other two as private citizens appointed by council. (See also letter in this issue.)

COUNCIL approved a proposal to apply for a change in the city's official plan to allow a go ahead on the proposed tower complex across from the city hall.

BOXING DAY will be on a Saturday this year, and council referred a decision on how to cope with it — holiday wise — to the Board of Control.

THE URBAN RENEWAL SCHEME is now officially on its way to Ottawa to be filed with schemes from other cities until the federal government lifts its present policy of no-money-for-this-type-of-thing. Council approved the forwarding of the Murray Jones Urban Renewal Scheme.

COUNCIL also decided to send its latest brief of strategy surrounding Oshawa's merger with Whitby (see story in this issue) and the city's role in a proposed regional government to the leaders of the two opposition parties at Queen's Park and to a number of cabinet ministers in the Robarts administration.

POLLUTION HUNTERS from the Ontario Water Resources Commission are getting tough with an Oshawa car wash operator who asked council to assist him by extending a sewer to his property. A long council debate ensued. (See story in this issue)

ALDERMAN ATTERSLEY wondered if the city shouldn't consider Toronto's idea of painting those white lines on the newly paved streets at night, instead of during rush hour periods. It will be considered.

A COMPUTERIZED ELECTION it will be this year, at least when it comes to the results, council learned from Roy Barrand, the city's returning officer.

MAYOR MACKEY was asked by Alderman Ross Gibson to report on council's tete-a-tete with Bowmanville, East Whitby and Darlington councillors in connection with regional government. Friday. This meeting was boycotted by Whitby Council. "A good discussion was had by all," sums up the mayor's report.

FOUR NO's were recorded in council's vote to reconstruct Simcoe Street from Richmond to Adelaide.

Contradiction?

Sir:

There's something strange about the NDP leadership convention on Toronto on the weekend. Here's a party that's coming out very strongly against foreign domination of our country by our neighbors to the south.

Large contingents of UAW and other union members played a big role in electing Stephen Lewis the new leader. Labor was solidly behind him. From where are the big union, ie the UAW, controlled?

Just what gives?

Or am I missing something?

G. Palmer.

Sir:

Whatever became of Ed Broadbent, MP Oshawa-Whitby? We haven't seen much of him lately. Is he still in the race for the leadership of his party?

Doug Ferguson.

The other evening we spent some time with friends and during the course of the conversation our ads were brought up. In effect, we were asked if we weren't a little afraid of frightening people talking about solid mahogany dining room suites by Gibbard and the incomparable comfort of Barrymore chairs and chesterfields. Well, we admit, it was a reasonable question and we do frighten a few but we firmly believe beauty is more than just skin deep. Sure, quality costs a little more and unfortunately what you pay a little more for is never seen until much later - when you are still using the item and other things of lesser quality have long since been thrown by the wayside. So, our answer has to be, "No we are not afraid of selling quality", just as you should not be afraid of buying it. (The only trouble is we don't get as many repeat customers).

Thanks for listening - see you next week.

Council turns thumbs down on request to help curb pollution

While pollution and what to do about it, are major items in the news today, it's not too often Oshawa city council gets involved in the issue "It's up to the province," most municipalities shout, and Oshawa is no exception

This week the fight against pollution came to council through the back door

Bouckley's Car Wash on Bond Street has been under pressure from inspectors of the Ontario Water Resources Commission to stop polluting the Oshawa Creek adjacent to its operation Bouckley knows he has to do something. And he comes on sincerely. He wants to do something

Some time ago he approached the Public Works Committee of the city to see if a new sewer could be installed along Bond, so he could hook into it. He would even bend over backwards and pay $5,000 towards the cost of bringing the new sewer line up to his property. (From there the entire cost would be his.) Now that in itself was a generous offer. It's usually the city that brings the sewer up to one's property line, and only from there on is it the property owner's baby

But there was a snag

Alderman Ed McNeely, chairman of the works committee explained it by saying that other than for the Bouckley operation, the Bond Street sewer would not be required. (His committee had asked the planning board about future plans for the street, because those might alter its decision to install a sewer now for Bouckley, which would serve future projects in the same area at a later date. The planning board came back saying the area was planned as greenbelt; a fact that does not agree with the Murray Jones Urban Renewal scheme which calls for high rise apartments in the area.)

McNeely said for $5,800 Bouckley could install a pump to lead to an existing sewer, and his problems would be solved The works chairman explained his committee could not see justification for spending some $20,000 on a new sewer (even with a $5,000 contribution from Bouckley) if it was to serve just the car wash establishment.

Brake downs

Bouckley addressed the council and said he didn't like the idea of a pump, because it could brake down, causing loss of business. He also painted a picture of his 13 employees subsequently being out of a job as a result of such a breakdown

McNeely pooh-poohed that idea as not being realistic, and added that "whole sections of the city" are serviced with pumping stations

Controller Margaret Shaw talked of the city's "moral obligation" to help the car wash operator. She pointed to the Carousel Inn as having been assisted in a pumping station project for its property

Alderman Jim Potticary said all industry pays extra for pollution control measures and advised Bouckley there was provincial government help available to help finance his pump problem

Bouckley said he had gone to see the OWRC but didn't have much luck.

Alderman Gib Murdoch pointed out the new Holiday Inn had been granted considerable assistance in its sewer program, and Alderman McNeely agreed there had "been a lot of money spent to get them down here."

Alderman Gordon Attersley said the idea of building a sewer for just Bouckley would be setting a precedent, and that's why he was against it

Equal treatment

Controller Shaw called for "equal treatment of all," referring to assistance for the Holiday Inn and the Carousel as an example.

Controller C. E. McIlveen found that if it's done for a new industry, Bouckley should get it too, and that besides, public works had admitted this was the best solution.

Alderman Allan Pilkey pointed out the car wash was the creator of the pollution problem and not the city. He added that neighboring Ontario Motor Sales had experienced a similar problem and had been forced to build a sewer at its own expense to Arena Street.

Alderman Ruth Bestwick asked "have we the right to spend the taxpayer's money on this?"

Controller Christine Thomas said she was opposed to taxpayer's money subsidizing any company, large or small, but she wondered whether council should consider a contribution to Bouckley's pumping station.

Alderman Ruth Bestwick asked "have we the "where are we going to find the money for this?"

Alderman Ross Gibson suggested the issue be tabled until Bouckley and council found out about the possibility of provincial grants for this project. But he did not make his suggestion into a motion.

Alderman Pilkey suggested that a subsidy for Bouckley would mean that council could be asked by every industry in Oshawa to assit financially in its pollution control efforts

It turned out that Mr. Bouckley will have to get by with his own pumping station. Council upheld the recommendation of Alderman McNeely's committee that no assistance be given to Bouckley.

Alderman John Humphreys, meanwhile, sat this one out. His law firm is acting on behalf of the Bouckley car wash, and he abstained from the discussion and the vote.

Students getting involved

Oshawa-Whitby high school students are doing something big this year to help support the 1970 United Appeal

A committee of about 12 students representing several high schools in the two cities announced today that they expect to contribute in excess of $4,000 to the campaign fund

A press conference has been scheduled for 4 P.M., on October 13 at the Oshawa Project Youth Centre (Drop-in Centre) at which time a formal announcement of the committee's plans will be made

The United Appeal Youth Committee has met weekly since late in May to develop a fund raising program with specific appeal for young people in the area. The program includes elements of entertainment, involvement and education for high school students on an on-going basis, with a major kick-off slated for later this month

PARADE

Sunday was a special Sunday in the life of Emmanuel Baptist Sunday School. At 9 a.m. the members of the Sunday School escorted by the Oshawa Police Cruisers and led by the Junior Band of the Salvation Army set out on a Sunday School Parade along Evangeline Drive to Stone Street, then along Stone Street to Oxford Street, then into Dwight Avenue to the Church.

We refuse to accept good health, proper weight rules

Crash diet books on the market abound as the average Canadian tries desperately to whittle away the extra poundage that has settled around his middle

He will spend a small fortune sending away for gimmick diet plans, such as the grapefruit juice diet, but all to no avail He may lose a few pounds, but invariably it comes back on within a week or two

Like so many other things, the secret of good health and the maintenance of a proper weight have been offered to him since childhood but he refuses to accept them.

If he would only follow the directions laid down in the Canada Food Rules he has learned about in health classes in elementary school, all his worries would be over.

One serving of meat, fish or poultry is required each day and liver should be eaten occasionally. Eggs, cheese, dried beans or peas may be used in place of meat. Eggs and cheese should be eaten at least three times a week in any case.

In addition, 400 International Units of Vitamin D should be taken by all growing persons and expectant and nursing mothers for healthy bone growth and tooth formation.

by jo aldwinckle

October, — Harvest-Home and Thanksgiving.

The array of fruit, vegetables and good things to eat in our markets should move the most cynical to an awareness of the blessings that produce this bounty; the sun, the snow and rain, the rich earth and honest sweat.

For these things, each of us in our own way, can give thanks, remembering that we have been spared the major disasters, earthquakes, famine, flood and drought that have befallen others less fortunate.

What of them, the homeless and hungry?

In our thanks for our own good fortune we should also give thanks for the United Nations' agencies, UNICEF, FAO (Food and Agriculture Organization), The Red Cross Society and WHO (World Health Organization) that stretch out their strong, loving arms to embrace suffering mankind.

These are the agencies that respond immediately to the call for help from the government of any country by supplying drugs, blankets, food and equipment and also by sending trained workers to guide, teach, comfort and console.

"We never think of UNICEF as a hand-OUT," says Mrs. C. G. Step whose chairmanship of the local committee has made Oshawa UNICEF conscious, "but rather as a hand-UP

"It is the energy of the local committees, springing like tiny rivulets all over the world that finally merges into the main stream at UN headquarters, to be directed where the need is greatest."

"In the less developed regions of the world where poverty, illiteracy and disease are greatest, children and youth under 15 years of age account for more than 40 per cent of the total population. There are over 1000 million children in these countries and if they are to assume a useful and responsible role in the society of tomorrow, the promotion of their welfare is of paramount concern." (U Thant secretary-general U.N.)

Where there is poverty, there is disease. UNICEF and WHO have fought and won a decisive victory over malaria and trachoma in several districts, unfolding hope and a better life for entire villages Disease follows disaster. The Peruvian earthquakes in May left an estimated toll of 60 to 70,000 dead and almost one million homeless. Long after the catastrophe has disappeared from the newspapers, the work of rehabilitation goes on.

It is estimated that it will take at least five years to revitalize Biafra. Years of malnutrition cannot be remedied in a few months. Starved bodies are too weak to work.

In India where caste, religion and superstition have played their part in obstructing the development of the country, the gentle education of youth is UNICEF's approach.

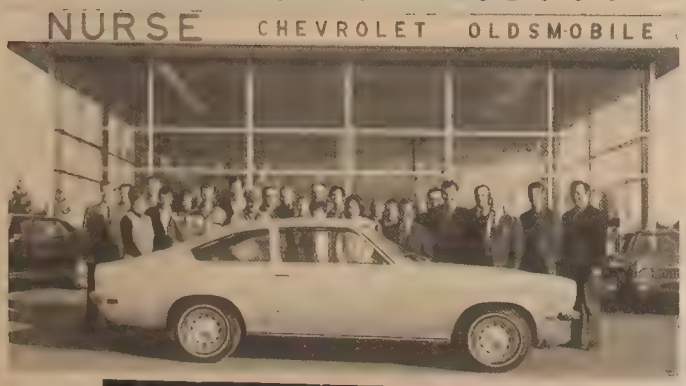
There are not enough schools, trained teachers, health services or employment opportunities to meet the needs of this expanding and potentially dynamic force. UNICEF is turning increasingly to programs designed to prepare youth for active participation in the development of their societies.

Childhood is short in a land where many children work instead of going to school, trapped by the dreaded cycle of poverty, hunger, disease and despair.

Most foods of different cultures are rejected by people to whom they are unfamiliar. The tortillas of Latin America, the chappaties of India, the tempeh of Indonesia, the mealie meal of South Africa would be rejected by most persons not accustomed to them, to say nothing of the maguey worms which are delicacies in parts of Latin America, termites in Australia and Africa, locusts in the Middle East, raw turtle eggs, or the meat from dogs, monkeys, snakes and rats, consumed by various populations.

Conversely, caviar, artichokes, truffles, limburger and roquefort cheese, snails, frog legs, whale steak and blood sausage would be just as distasteful to societies not familiar with them.

Beef steak delights us and is intolerable to an orthodox Hindu. Pork, highly popular with some populations is violently rejected as "unclean" by others.



UNICEF field workers know that they cannot change the habits of the old but they can introduce new healthier ways to the young.

So in the midst of our plenty let us give THANKS for those who are working on our behalf to help our fellowmen. The operative part of the word is GIVING.

Polish queens spend weekend in Oshawa

Seven lovely girls, all queens of their own communities returned to their homes Sunday afternoon after a busy social weekend in Oshawa climaxed by the second annual Queens' Court Ball at the Polish Veterans' Centre

The girls arrived Friday evening and were welcomed by the official hostesses Miss Helen Firka, Miss Polonia of Oshawa 1969; Miss Barbara Bartosik and Miss Lila Horbacwicz, assisted by the official host, Joe Fras

The bevy included Ann Slomka, Hamilton; Ann Pawlowska, Brantford, Maryla-Urszula Pietowski, Mississauga; Lillian Sielieka, Niagara Falls; IreneWolanczuk Toronto, Gloria Bielecki, Windsor Barota Barska, Toronto and Teresa Jordan, Miss Polonia of Oshawa, 1970 On Friday evening they sampled Oshawa's night life

Saturday morning they were taken on a tour of the Nuclear Power Plant at Bay Ridges, returning to the Polish Centre for luncheon during which they were introduced to the presidents of the various Polish organizations and members of the White Eagles Soccer Club by the president, Joseph Czajkowski.

Miss Polonia of Canada, Gloria Bielecki of Windsor, presented a trophy to the White Eagles Club, which sponsored the ball at night. Other trophies were presented to members of the team.

During the Queens' Court Ball each Miss Polonia with her escort was introduced.

Representatives from various Polish communities across Ontario met here on the weekend for a few days of fun and fellowship. The Miss Polonias from left to right are Lillian Sielicki (Niagara Falls), Anna Pawlowska (Brantford), Anna Slomka (Hamilton), Irene Wolanczuk (New Toronto), Teresa Jordan (Oshawa), and Gloria Bielecki (Windsor), Miss Polonia of Canada.

Oshawa presented at Montreal

An informal luncheon was held in Montreal by the Oshawa Business & Industrial Development Commission for about 50 leaders of the banking and transportation world

The Oshawa Business & Industrial Day that was held in Oshawa last year for people from Toronto was repeated for the Montreal business world

The object of this exercise was to make direct contact with decision-making people and convince them of the excellent investment opportunities that lie in Oshawa, the hub of the new Oshawa Metropolitan area.

Mayor, B. V. Mackey, was introduced to the Montreal group by L Small, General Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Montreal

Leaves well-paid job to become social worker

What makes a young advertising man leave a well-paid job to become a social worker with retardates?

Gordon Smith, Director of the sheltered workshop and training centre in Ajax can only say: "I wanted to be of service"

Gordon and his wife Phyllis are both members of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints and Phyllis has a background of working with youth. Perhaps that's why she readily agreed with Gordon's decision to take a substantial cut in income, leave Toronto and move to Oshawa closer to the new job.

The Ajax-Pickering-Whitby Association for Retarded Children had just purchased a building for the workshop, but Gordon had to start from scratch to make it work.

His business and advertising training proved valuable both in devising evaluation and assessment schemes for the workers and recruiting the sort of work his trainees could handle. Local service clubs were helpful in getting the first contracts for the workshop, he recalls.

It's high school elections week

One candidate wants Board consult students

This is the time of year when senior high school students begin their campaigns to run for positions on the student government. Richard Mazar is no exception.

Richard, a grade-13 student at O'Neill Collegiate is running for the position of president of student council and if he is elected he hopes to see a lot of changes take place. He's not too optimistic though, that the students have the power to change many of the conventional attitudes and programs of the school.

For instance, he would like to see students attend school board meetings and feels they should have a voice in what the school board proposes.

"A student voice is needed at these school board meetings. After all, it is our careers and interests they are dealing with," says Richard.

He cites the example of the recent renovation of O'Neill Collegiate as poor communication on the part of the school board.

"The school underwent major renovations and the school board did not even ask the principal, teachers or students what they would like to see done to the school," he charges.

Richard's platforms are typical of a student presidential hopeful. He would like to see Frosh day expanded to one week of fun and frivolity. He would like to see all the high schools combine their student governments into one central agency. He would like to see the junior and senior lunch hours amalgamated so as not to separate these factions of the school.

But he would also like to see the student council become a more influential aspect of the governing of the school and students

Last year the student government did nothing for the students. It wouldn't take a stand either way on any subject and was ineffective," he says.

In the meantime Richard hopes the majority of the 1400 O'Neill students will hop on the Mazar bandwagon and give him a chance to prove himself as an effective leader

The student elections take place tomorrow and Friday

Mayor to service clubs

The real issue environment

Mayor Bruce Mackey has called for an end to exploitation of anti-city feelings and fears about big city domination. He says the real issue in regional government planning is to provide an environment which is conducive to "a quality of life worthy of our citizens."

Speaking to a combined meeting of the Oshawa Rotary and Kiwanis clubs last week he streesed the need for a strong dynamic region and called for strong dynamic city in the region. He talked of combining a number of communities by common ties to form a larger munciipality.

The mayor was referring to Oshawa's desire to encompass the town of Whitby, East Whitby and Darlington townships into one region. This would mean expanding the present 14,000 acres owned by the city to an area of 98,800 acres.

"Our region must have a strong urban and financial core whose physical area of responsibility, extent of authority, political and administrative machinery will allow it to assume a leadership role in providing adequate solutions to both present and anticipated problems of urbanization," says Mayor Mackey.

Mayor Mackey said this region would be better able to reach its potential with a centrally united urban settlement containing no artificial or conventional boundaries of separation.

Discussion Paper Three of the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study has proposed Oshawa be given 36 per cent of the Regional Council representation and Mayor Mackey called this an "injustice". Oshawa has 46 per cent of the region's population.

Betty has taken up flying as a hobby

Women's hobbies are as varied as women themselves. Some sew some sail and some play football and some even fly air planes

Betty Ellison of Oshawa is fulfilling a life-long wish of hers by trying for her private pilot's license. The thought of obtaining her license has always been in the back of her mind but somehow as the years passed she just didn't find time to accomplish the task

Finally last May she took the big step and enrolled at the Oshawa Flying Club as a student Flying was not new to her. She had spent plenty of time in small planes, as a passenger

Mrs. Ellison admits she is not mechanically inclined in the least and if ever she was caught with a flat tire in her sports car she would be quite helpless. Therefore, trying to cope with all the dials and knobs on the dash of an airplane proved to be quite an obstacle at first

A person must receive his license within one year or else face a penalty of putting in an extra 10 hours flying time. As it is to obtain a license the student must put in 35 hours flying time and write an exam.

Every Thursday night Mrs. Ellison attends ground school and takes classes in navigation, meteorology and the art of reading weather reports Flying gives me a feeling of great accomplishment. I'm very satisfied with myself to think I at least have learned to fly a plane," says Mrs. Ellison

She says the most difficult aspect of learning to fly is the landing procedure. It is basically a matter of judgment and the teacher can only guide you because each person sets his eyes on a different target when coming in for a landing

Mrs. Ellison has put in three hours solo flying and is now at the stage of learning forced landing approaches. This entails stalling the plane at a height of 1000 feet above sea level and gliding the plane into a landing, a technique used when pilots have to make an emergency landing

Mrs. Ellison is learning to fly in a Cessna 150 two-seater. For the first few times up she felt a slight bit of air sickness when flying through turbulance. Now she has no problem and thoroughly enjoys it.

She has learned to fly under all conditions. Just last week she was up in a rain storm and flew through thunder clouds.

"You just can't be a fair-weather pilot. You have to learn to fly in all seasons," she says.

She is looking forward to her first cross-country trip. In order to qualify for her license she must make three solo cross-country trips. The student pilot must fly to Hamilton or Toronto, land the plane and then take off again

"This procedure is to familiarize pilots with the procedures of landing and taking off from a strange terminal," said Mrs. Ellison.

Mrs. Ellison's family is understanding and interested in mom's new hobby. Her husband has spent many years in the Air Force and is not interested in flying but her 19-year-old son is intrigued.

"There were times when I thought of giving up because I wasn't doing as well as I expected or wasn't progressing as quickly as I wanted to but when you think of the sport itself it is just as well I take my time," she said.

She attributes most of her success to her patient and understanding instructor, Dave Ashley.

Betty Ellison, one of several Oshawa women training to get her private pilot's license with the Cessna 150 she is learning to fly.

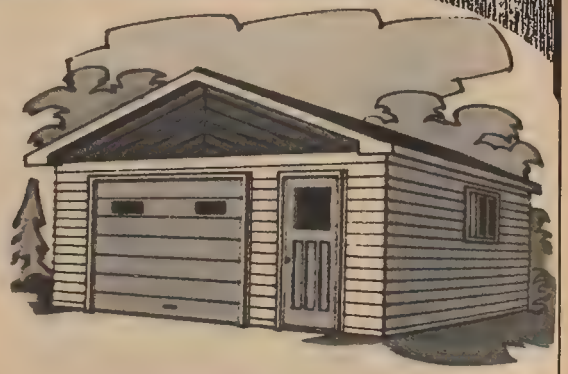
"When I get my license it will be strictly for pleasure. After all there aren't many people who can afford to spend between $12,000 and $15,000 for a small two-seater and then fly it on weekends and holidays," she said.

Oshawa wins top trophy

Michael Gunzel, 19 graduate pilot of the Oshawa Flying Club, was named the winner of the W. F. Tudhope Memorial Trophy as the top pilot of the 42 clubs of the Royal Canadian Flying Clubs Association across Canada

The award was made at the annual meeting of the Royal Canadian Flying Clubs Association held in Brantford

This award is given to the graduate pilot of one of the 42 member clubs of the RCFCA who receives the highest marks in the Ministry of Transport private pilot tests and a special flight test by a representative of the RCFCA



Michael received 97 per cent on the Ministry of Transport tests and 3,990 marks out of a possible 4,800 when tested by the representative of the RCFCA

The Oshawa Flying Club was presented with an Efficiency Award for a full year's operation without a serious accident

80 per cent emotional problems

A new role for the guidance teacher

It came as a big surprise to the trustees of the Ontario County Board of Education last week that 80 per cent of the work done by the guidance teachers in the schools is helping students with emotional problems.

Parents are complaining more and more that they just cannot communicate with their children and the children are looking to other people to share their problems with. The most obvious person is the guidance teacher.

A group of guidance teachers made a presentation to the Board of Education and cleared up a lot of misconceptions that the trustees as elected officials and parents had about the work of a guidance teacher.

No longer is the prime duty of the guidance teacher to assist students with choosing their vocation. Increasingly more and more students are coming to them with problems they just cannot handle themselves or cannot talk to their parents about

Children need assistance in adapting to the modern trends in education, in developing as a person, and in understanding themselves

As a result of our fast-moving and complicated society there is a lack of time for parents and even teachers to sit down with students. Day after day children go unheard. The fact that a counsellor has time and interest to sit down and listen is a big step forward in solving this problem

Reach early

The guidance teachers feel it is imperative to reach children at the earliest stage of their schooling to identify maladjustments in the hopes of preventing delinquency or emotional disturbances.

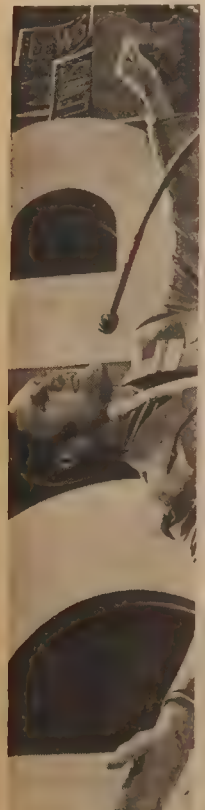
"Guidance services would be more effective if started at the beginning of a child's school life since many of the problems originate in the early years and become more and more difficult to treat as time goes on."

Mrs. Barbara Lindsay, a school teacher at Woodlands Centennial Public School in Dunbarton told board members that 38 out of 48 teaching periods a week she spends in the guidance field.

"They come to me asking advice on personal problems or what course to choose when they enter high school," says Mrs. Lindsay. "Many of the kids want advice as to whether they should leave home, help with drug problems, and help with getting along with their friends. And these are kids in grade six, seven and eight!"

A person in the guidance field must be nurse, mother, father, minister, welfare officer and psychologist. There are 48,733 students enrolled in public and high schools in Ontario County and each has a problem they consider unique

Individuals



Guidance is based on the premise that each person is a unique individual with his own worth and that he can make a contribution to society if he develops his own potentialities and abilities.

Good guidance services don't just happen; they are developed on demand, and they are most effective when supported by the home, the school and the community.

Fred Rhodes, guidance head at Eastdale Collegiate said it is becoming more and more apparent he and his counterparts could be spending more and more time with the students.

"There just is never enough time in one day to help the kids as we would like to. We always drop what we are doing when a student comes for help. There are no appointments in our field," says Mr. Rhodes.

Mr. Rhodes said a good relationship in the home, an understanding communication between parent and child and a little more interest by the parents on behalf of their children would ease the work load of a guidance teacher considerably.

. . .and I promise you, fellow delegates, that if I'm elected your leader, the list of things to be nationalized will be this long. . .

Whitby Arts shows works of Florence McGillivray

Whitby Arts Incorporated is presenting an exhibition of work by Florence McGillivray a one-time resident of Whitby

Miss McGillivray was born in Whitby in 1864, educated there and spent most of her life in the town. For many years she was art teacher at Ontario Ladies' College.

In 1913 she went to Paris where she studied under Simon and Menard On her return from Europe she moved to Ottawa. Many of her landscapes of Newfoundland and Labrador and the New England states were done at this time.

She retired to Toronto in 1935 where she became actively interested in the formation of a pioneer museum at the Guild of All Arts. She died prior to its opening in May 1938. Her funeral was held from her old home in Whitby and she is buried in the Union Cemetery in Oshawa

Miss McGillivray's paintings can be seen at the National Gallery in Ottawa, the Art Gallery of Ontario, Toronto, the Hamilton Art Gallery and galleries at Kitchener, London, Windsor and many other centres.

The exhibition will be open to the public from now until October 18th on weekends from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Cast for 'Never too late' announced by OLT

The Oshawa Little Theatre has announced the names of the cast for its first production of the season. A. T. Elliot, director of "Never Too Late" announced Maureen McDonald and William Reeves will appear as Edith and Harry Lambert a couple who after years of marriage find themselves about to become parents again.

Mrs. McDonald is not a new name to Oshawa theatre goers as she has appeared in many OLT productions, including All In Good Time and The Children Are Listening.

Reeves, a resident of Port Perry is making his debut with the Oshawa Little Theatre in Never Too Late but has a wide theatre background with groups in Hamilton and Windsor. Mary Wilson will portray the Lambert's married daughter Kate and the part of her husband Charlie will be handled by Darcy Smyth, last year's president.

Elliot also announced that Joan Hill, Terry Mann, Bob Jeffs, Joe Mullen and John Liptay will appear in the play which premieres at the Eastdale Theatre, November 18.

Meanwhile, the OLT subscription campaign has reached the half-way mark. Richard Erman the chairman of the campaign and Clare Keith in charge of co-ordination of tickets said that approximately 1,500 subscriptions have been sold to date. Keith emphasized there were still a number of good seats left with the exception of the main floor for Saturday night. Last year's campaign yielded a total house of 90 per cent which drew an audience of 3,000 people for each play.

Involvement, professionalism are keynotes to gallery program

The Robert McLaughlin Gallery is presenting 12 separate programs for the public for the Fall. By professionalism is meant the fact that the Gallery is attempting to bring in the highest quality in the visual arts to Oshawa. There are professional exhibitions such as the upcoming One Man Exhibition' of William Roberts. There are the top lecturers such as David Mirvish and Av Isaacs. There are the films on art coming directly from the Canadian Film Institute.

By involvement is meant the fact that the Gallery considers it is a public institution prepared to serve the public and reflect their interests. This is shown in the present Polish Exhibition of Art, giving the Oshawa public the cultural background of one of the larger ethnic groups in this community.

The Young People's Art Club, the Saturday morning childrens classes, the Young Mother's Figure Drawing class, in which they bring their pre-schoolers to be looked after by babysitters, the Art Mart, Sunday afternoon recitals, the local art shows by the Lyceum Club and the Oshawa and District Art Association, all reflect Community involvement.

If you are interested in the visual arts, there is a program for you.

GALLERY HOURS are: Monday to Friday, 12 - 5 p.m.; Evenings, 7 - 9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 - 5 p.m.; Sunday, 12 - 5 p.m

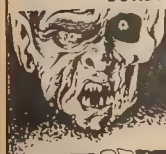
This Saturday is a special day all over North America. It's Newspaperboy Day



We, at This Week, would have preferred it to fall on a Wednesday, because that's when our 320 boys and girls really shine, but we're going along with the Saturday because there are more six-days-a-weekers than our kind.

All the same, whether you do it on Saturday or today or tomorrow, the newspapers are asking you to stop and pause a moment and to perhaps look back at the days when you delivered your paper, or to stop a moment and think of your son or daughter niece or nephew who is now putting in the big effort.

Boys and girls, we salute you all

And especially all 320 of you who deliver this message!

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

The peace and tranquility of the colored countryside is being shattered by the yearly infiltration of that unique species of erect animal called man. The strange ritual sees the homo sapien gathering around ponds, streams, woods, and stubble fields, carrying sticks that thunder and roar upon the command of the two legged, erect standing animal. Dressed in bright, if not gaudy apparel, the erect animal seems occupied with the pursuit of small four legged creatures, flying creatures of the reptile family, and larger animals called deer, bear, and moose. It's obviously some sort of passion that strikes the thinking animal man, for in spite of the inhispitable climatic conditions the man neither gives up his pursuit to seek shelter nor goes home to the comfort of a warming fire

The game that the man is so deeply involved in is called "hunting", and every fall the hunter from Halifax to Port Alberni, and Fort Churchill to Windsor goes out into the wilds to test his superiority over lower forms of life

In Oshawa it's one of the highlights of the social season to go north to "Moose" or slip down to the local Provincial park to "Duck" amidst the soggy bullrushes and water lilies. Not only does this provide entertainment for a few days but for a full year afterwards the repetition of that glorious day of hunting will be embelished with additional facts until the hunter has set himself up as some demigod of the hunting fraternity

Even if the hunter doesn't get his limit the paraphenalia that is the symbol of his prowess is worth at least 4,000 hours of idle conversation in the local bistro. But most of the hunters are confused with the equipment, what size gun to use, the wearing apparel, and even the licence, to be really aware of the right method

That's where Channel 8 comes to the rescue with a series starting shortly on these subjects. The first show will look at the most important and expensive item, the shotgun or rifle that fits the job. A large manufacturer of these delectable items will be present to show the hunting world the full range, from the mass produced firestick to the painstakingly and artisticly constructed custom gun that looks so pretty you wouldn't dare take it out into the bush lest you put a scratch on it

The show will also let you in on the secrets of ballistics — a fancy word for what bullet to use for certain types of conditions and game — and if you're confused by words like semi-jacket and expansion, watch the tv listing for the airing of this show. The producers of this show are members of the Oshawa Skeet club.

Chronicles of Osh

1. And on the first day of the tenth month of the year one thousand nine hundred and seventy the people of the land of Osh were advised by two of the Wise Men from the Holy Mountain of Qupee that the land of Osh was stuck with — as they put it in those days its Sanhedrin, and that the elders of Osh had not given the two women on the Sanhedrin, and the Elder Fin and Charles the Physician, yea, even the Wayward Beevee a chance to show their wares in the marketplace, so to speak.
2. For much had the members of the Sanhedrin shown, but to many it had been incomprehensible and void of direction
3. And there were among the elders of the land of Osh some who were severly taken aback by the decision of the two wise men from the Holy Mountain of Qupee, and there were others who called it in the favorite slogan of the day the democratic process
4. Now on the minds of the elders of Osh there were many more pressing items, as these dealt with the greater glory of Metroboshawhit, the land of the future that was to act not as a bedroom but more as a deterrent to the Land of Tor which was growing and growing muchly to the west of the land of Osh and the land of Whit and the Jax and the Pickets
5. And for many moons during the year one thousand nine hundred and seventy, yea during the previous year, there had been diligent studying by the elders of the lands involved and by their henchmen to show unto the High and Mighty John on the Holy Mountain of Qupee, and unto his servant Darcy the wherewithall of the ways in which the new land of Metroboshawhit should be ruled
6. And all this was called oapads
7. And the Pharaoh of Whit was the big chief of oapads, as he sat on the throne of the oapads council of wise men
8. And oapads had come forth with many parchments of great and not so great ways and means in which the new land of Metroboshawhit and those lands that were afar off should be governed. And behold, the parchment went each unto the various lands gathered under oapads and much diligent studying was done by some, while others, even among the elders of the lands, just filed the parchments to gather dust
9. And the elders of the land of Osh called unto them their henchmen who ruled under them from the Temple of Osh and they called on their henchmen to draft a parchment of Osh which would show unto future generations the wisdom of the elders of Osh and the foresight and the way in which their children's children should walk.
10. And the parchment of Osh called for a joining together of the lands of Osh and Whit, so that the Oshites and the Whitites would be one people
11. But the Whitites, led by their Pharaoh would not buy it. Yea, they would have nothing to do with it, and among them there were some who erected grave stones bearing grave messages unto the elders of the land of Osh
12. And the Wayward Beevee, chief ruler of Osh, called unto a gathering of elders in the land of Osh the elders of East Whit and the Darlings and the Bowmans and the Whitites and others of those who were afar off, to consider amongst themselves, pressless, the things brought forth in the parchment of Osh.
13. But among those who showed there were no Whitites.

14. And the day of reckoning between the Pharaoh of Whit and his henchmen and the elders of Osh, was drawing nigh.

Generals lose opener

Ferguson the big gun?

By Jim Bishop

The Oshawa Generals showed some bright spots in their home opener Sunday night but suffered a late-in-the-game defensive lapse and bowed to the Hamilton Red Wings by a count of 4 to 3. The loss in the first regularly scheduled game of the season spoiled the debut of new mentor Ed Reigle.

Reigle commented after the game. "We only played well in spots, took too many stupid penalties and didn't move the puck properly in parts of the game. We looked good for the first two periods when holding our positions, and then Gilles Gratton was beaten on a bouncing shot and that was the turning point."

Reigle was happy with the play of the John Cook-George Ferguson-Tom Simpson line and with the effort turned in by rookie defensemen Jack Lynch and Doug Ferguson

Generals spotted the Red Wings a one goal lead midway through the first period and then evened the score near the end of the same frame on a picture goal by George Ferguson, standing in the slot. Early in the second, Tom Simpson picked up a perfect pass from John Cook at centre-ice, stickhandled through the defense and beat goalie Mike Viesor with a hard blast. Two minutes later Gary Mahon broke in from his right wing position and beat Viesor with a low drive to the corner to round out the scoring for the Generals

Flurry

After the Generals had their brief flurry of scoring the Wings took over with a goal from a scramble by Jim Schoenfeld Gratton was beaten on a flukey shot that took him by surprise and bounced off his pad into the net leaving the score 3-3 at the end of two periods. In the third, only one goal was scored, and that by Gilbert of the Wings That ended the game scoring with both clubs having several missed chances

It's pretty early in the season to assess a team's chances but on the basis of one game it is obvious that the Gens have a pretty entertaining hockey club. They need some improvement in their over-all defensive play but it's a sure bet that Reigle will be stressing this in upcoming practices. It looks as if big George Ferguson may be the big gun for the team but if Tommy Simpson ever decides to put his big shot to work more often he could be in the running for the club's scoring leadership

On defense, neither Gerry Methe or Warren Anderson, both returnees, looked too impressive but both rookies. Lynch and Doug Ferguson played their positions very capably. Up front, John Cook was the best of the newcomers as he showed aggressiveness in the corners and the ability to move the puck

The Generals, at first glance, probably are not a first-place team, but they showed enough hustle and scrappiness to keep them in the first division once they get their defensive problems solved

FORMER GENERALS

Many former Oshawa Generals have made it to pro hockey including several in the NHL — of course there's Bobby Orr and Wayne Cashman with the Boston Bruins and Danny O'Shea with Minnesota. It looks like Bob Kelly will stick with Philadephia in his first year out of junior ranks. Nick Beverly has been assigned to Hershey of the American League and Hank Nowak with Quebec Aces of the same loop Steve Cardwell is expected to sign with Amarillo of the Western league this week and Dunc Wilson is still with L.A Kings games it looks like the oddsmakers were right in naming the Cincinatti Reds and the Baltimore Orioles as playoff favorites to compete in the World Series beginning Saturday. The Reds defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates twice on the weekend and the Orioles really hammered the Minnesota Twins in both games in the Twin-City

RE-ASSIGNED

Last-minute meetings with the Major League Umpires Association resulted in favorable negotiation and insured that the league playoffs would not be handled by minor leaguers. Wayne Newton of last year's Generals has been reassigned to the Lasco Steelers Jr. B. club who are now operating out of Ajax

Hockey, figure skating

Two new programs planned by Recreation

The Oshawa Recreation Department has announced two new programes for the younger set, beginning this week. For boys, 6 to 12 years of age there will be a 10 week hockey school session and for the girls and boys the department will operate a figure skating class.

Registration begins on Thursday, October 8, for the hockey school which will be held at the North Oshawa Arena and the Harman Park Twin-Pad Arena beginning October 16 through December 18, 1970.

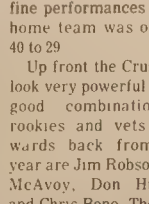
Each boy will receive approximately 50 minutes ice-time in each of the 10 sessions. Assistant Sports Director Glenn Welch has not yet announced the names of the instructors but he said they would be local high school teachers and former area hockey stars.

This school will put emphasis on the fundamentals of the game The instructors intend to teach the basics of teamwork combined with the development of individual skills of skating, shooting and positional play.

As for the figure skating there will be the same 10-week series of instruction. The teachers will hold classes for the beginners as well as the advanced skaters. Again, the instructors will be Oshawa Gold Medalists with a background of teaching experience. These classes will be held on Fridays and Saturdays at the same two ice surfaces.

Registration for both the hockey and the figure skating will be held at the Oshawa Recreation Department's complex at the Civic Auditorium on Thornton's Road South. on Thursday, October 8, from 1 to 3 30 pm and from 7 30 to 8:30 pm. Cost for the 10-week hockey school will be $10 and the figure skating fee will be $8.00 for each child registered. If more than one child is registered in one family however, the cost for each additional child will be just $7. For additional information on these two activities call the Oshawa Recreation Dept at 725-1111.

Crushmen come with pair of wins



By Jim Bishop

The new look Oshawa Crushmen iced a young team this past weekend and came away with a pair of wins on their home ice. Although outshot heavily in both games the Crushmen managed to defeat the Peterboro Don-Byes 5-4 on Saturday and the Orillia Travelways on Monday by a score of 7 to 2

New head coach Jack Armstrong is facing a real problem in goal, and not in the usual fashion. It seems that Armstrong is blessed (or cursed, depending on how you look at it), with a veritable mint of fine young goalies On Saturday, against Peterboro, returnee Tom Christie and Brian Kasubeck turned in outstanding jobs as the Crushmen were outshot 41 to 30. On Monday, against Orillia, Dennis Higgins and Randy Dittmar also turned in fine performances as the home team was outshot 40 to 29

Up front the Crushmen look very powerful with a good combination of rookies and vets Forwards back from last year are Jim Robson, Len McAvoy, Don Hudgin, and Chris Bone The fight for the other spots will be a tough one but it looks like Steve West and Larry Hopkins have the inside track at this point West scored the hat trick on

GM's new Vega

It does everything well

By PETER BROUWER

I still think they should have called it a Chevrolittle, that new package from General Motors. "Vega", named after the star, has been billed by GM as the new little car that "does everything well." It comes as a two-door sedan, a sporty hatchback coupe, a stationwagon or a one-passenger panel express truck.

The 90-horsepower engine is 2,300 cubic centimeters (140 cubic inches) with overhead cam and a die-cast, aluminum-alloy block. Compression ratio is 8 to 1. Lightweight and powerful, the Vega is expected to deliver mileage comparable to any in its class. Wheelbase is 97 inches and overall length 169.7 inches and yet it seats four comfortably.

The foregoing paragraph is from the press release that came with this car. I tried it for a few days last week. Just long enough to get to really like it.

Not only the looks, but the handling of this new little wonder reminded me of the Camaro. It hugs the road, corners more like a sportscar than a small family sedan, and it's nice and heavy. You don't get the feeling you get in a lot of small cars that you're driving a tin can, "and what would happen if I got into a bad accident with this thing."

Vega's unitized body contains a number of firsts in the economy car market.

o The power-flow ventilation system that constantly supplies a controlled supply of outside air to the passenger compartment. The system operates whenever the ignition is on and it uses louvers at the rear of the car to exhaust the air.

o Steel side guard beams in the doors. Vega also has the other Chevrolet safety features found on its big sister.

o Advanced double-panel roof construction for added strength and greater sound isolation.

o Flush lift-up door handles and a radio antenna in the windshield.

Vega's seats are full foam molded with all-vinyl trim in front and rear.

The hatchback Vega tested has a swept back roof and rear deck styling. Its "hatchback" — a wide combination rear window and rear deck extending from roof to bumper — swings up for easy access to the rear compartment. It is counterbalanced and needs no prop for support.

The coupe's rear seat folds down to give full cargo floor and a total of 18.9 cubic feet of luggage area. (In fact, if you left the rear door up, you could move the family refrigerator in this car.) There is a concealed storage area below the floor space for the spare tire and small articles, a feature also on the Vega wagon.

With the two-speed automatic transmission. I found the little four cylinder still had penty of take-off power. Just enough. A lot of little cars equipped with automatic have their acceleration power ruined by the automatic. This one doesn't.

Computer-selected full coil springs at each wheel plus extensive body sound deadening give a smoother, quieter ride than the usual economy car

The Vega engine is the first in the industry to use a new high-silicon aluminum alloy and a recent breakthrough in aluminum casting technique in its lightweight engine block. The result is a large piston displacement engine with high torque output at moderate speeds and good fuel economy. I didn't drive it long enough to arrive at an exact fuel consumption figure, but it shouls be close to 30 miles a gallon

We'll take another look at a Vega soon

Saturday against the Petes and added another on Monday on a beautiful break-away goal late in the second period. Hopkins also added to the two wins with one assist in the first game and three on Monday. Also impressive is the aggressive play of both youngsters.

On defense, Oshawa look reasonably solid with Eric Howard and Scott Willson leading the way. Rookies Rene Beachamin, and Gary Armstrong looked like they could add to the blueline corps.

This year the Crushmen will only be carrying two 19 year-olds in Jim Robson and Len McAvoy. The team will probably start the season with about 10 new players and a whole new look in the front office. The new president is Cliff Maddock, widely known for his past work in minor hockey here in Oshawa. Al Cay is the Vice-president, George Brabin. Treasurer and Dick Snowden is secretary. On the firing line Ralph Cook takes over from Bob Heard as general-manager, Jack Armstrong is coach and Buck Moore will again train the team.

Durham opens try-outs for two teams

Durham College opened tryouts for two varsity teams in the last few days and had good turnouts for both hockey and basketball.

The college also plans to compete in varsity volleyball and lacrosse if there are enough other schools interested in operating lacrosse teams.

Coach Dave Stewart was happy with the number of hopefuls who turned out for the basketball practise at O'Neill Collegiate Thursday. Stewart said he had a number of good-looking players and could look for a few more players coming out for the team

The hockey team had 23 prospects at its opening training session Monday morning at the Auditorium. Most impressive among the group were Bill Barker, over age from last year's Jr. B. Crushmen and a tough young defenseman, Tom Bouckley from Huntsville. Barker, a hard-hitting rearguard is noted for his heads-up defensive style and for his ability to lug the puck out of his own end. Bouckley, a big youngster has played Jr. A lacrosse and Jr. C hockey from his home town in the Muskokas.

by jim bishop

In just two short years the Montreal Expos have put Canada on the big league sports scene. We have always been a power in hockey, but our neighbors to the South have never taken this too seriously except in the original four cities that has National Hockey League teams. Expansion has changed this somewhat but in most areas of the U.S., hockey is still considered a poor relation to baseball and football.

Now, with the arrival of the Expos, at least one Canadian city has shown that we have big league potential.

Not only is Montreal a charming and fun town to visit, but it is really big league in a sporting way. Over three days of last weekend at least 120,000 sports fans turned out for professional sporting events. The Expos drew 90,000 fans for their three-game stand with the St. Louis Cardinals. On the Sunday the crowd at Jarry Park was over 30,000, while the Alouettes of the CFL drew 27,000 and the races at Blue Bonnets grabbed off another 10,000 fans. If that isn't big league, what is?

GENERALS

Here in the Metropolitan area around Toronto you have to have a super winning club to hold the fans.

You can see evidence of this right here in Oshawa with the way the Oshawa Generals drew last hockey season. They had an exciting team, albeit they were close to the bottom of their league and the fans did not respond the way they did when the likes of Bobby Orr, Danny O'shea, and Wayne Cashman were leading the team to the Memorial Cup finals.

We think as long as the team gives it all they've got, and play entertaining hockey, the fans of this area should get off their lazy-boys and head for the rink. Let's face it, where else can you spend a more enjoyable evening for a couple of bucks.

First class

Getting back to the Expos let's just say that they are a first-class organization in every way. There's the way you are treated at the ball park, the comfortable seats, the gorgeous usherettes, the funniest scoreboard in Major League Baseball and the way the club has played this season. . . .Why not consider popping down to Montreal to take in a game?

President John McHale and General Manager Jim Fanning are ecstatic about the attendance — approximately 1.5 million — and the way the team has played ball.

In only the second year of operation the Expos won 73 games, a feat that is almost unbelievable considering that it took the Houston Astros five seasons and last year's World Series Champs, The New York Mets seven years to win that many games.

Fanning said after win number 72 last Sunday that ball fans could look forward to even better things in 1971. The club has a good number of fine young players in the farm system and with some of these players coming up and a couple of off-season trades we may see the Expos in the first division next year.

So from this desk we can only say "Vive les Expos, Vive le Montreal, Vive le Canada".

Vol. 1, No. 21 Single copy 15 cents in oshawa, whitby and area Wednesday, October 14, 1970

Whose responsibility? City? Builder? Railroad?

No fence for 60 ft. DROP to tracks

Will no one take the responsibility of fencing near the CPR tracks behind a new subdivision in west Oshawa? Children are not protected from steep cliffs, rusted barbed wire or overhead wires.

Last summer, within a one week period, two Oshawa youths were killed while trespassing on CNR and CPR property.

Immediately, announcements of tighter security were made. There was not to be a repeat of these tragedies.

However, a young father's concern that his small child may wander over his back-yard and onto CPR property and tumble down a 60 foot drop onto the tracks has gone unnoticed.

Gary Beattie of 328 Vancouver Crescent has phoned the city, the contractor of his new home and CPR to plead with someone to put up a fence (any kind) to protect his child and other neighbourhood children from injuring themselves. But he has received no help and no word of encouragement, he says.

Mr. Beattie moved into his home in late August and has been trying to get help in this matter ever since. The property line of his back yard is met with a section of land owned by CPR. Remains of decayed hunks of wood and coils of rusted barbed wire are all that is left of what used to be a fence preventing people from trespassing onto CPR property.

60 ft. drop

The CPR land is a natural attraction for the young children living nearby. There is a large sand hole which is perfect for children. Only two feet from this hole lies a 60 foot drop onto CPR tracks.

Mr. Beattie complains that overhead wires are within easy reach of taller children and although he has no idea whether the wires are live "it wouldn't take long to find out if a child reached up for them."

Mr. Beattie called the city for help. He was told the responsibility for a fence lay with the builder of his home or the CPR. A call to CPR's engineering department resulted in "the builder knocked it down; let him put it up again". The builder refuses to assume responsibility for the fence

"All I want is for CPR to come and look at the area. I'm even willing to pay half the cost of erecting a new fence," says Mr. Beattie.

At least twelve other home owners are in the same predicament but Mr. Beattie feels a petition with such a few names would not serve to invoke any action. Many of the homes have not been yet occupied in the new subdivision

"If they don't do it now, it won't be done before winter," he adds.

Urban renewal

No funds but face lift goes on

Within the next two years at least four new multi-million dollar buildings will rise on the skyline of Oshawa to transform its image to one of a modern, growing city.

The downtown core area was selected as the number one problem area by Murray B. Jones and Associates in the urban renewal study of the Oshawa area. Almost the entire central business district has been included in this problem area. Many of the buildings have been found obsolete. The inadequate availability of convenient parking has been noted and the mixture of land uses has come under scrutiny

Two years ago the federal government cut out its grants to municipalities for urban renewal

SHORT TAKES

Youth brief

City Council has turned down a four-page brief on improving resources for youth activities in Oshawa after two council committees had studied the brief. The brief was prepared by Anastasius Lakas, a university student and Oshawa resident and called for a drug control centre, seminars between youth and local police and fine art programs.

Boy Scouts

The 7th Oshawa Boy Scout troop will celebrate the 25th anniversary of its "Hands Across the Border" exchange visit program with the Boy Scouts of America on the Oct. 17 weekend. During their stay in Rochester, the Oshawa scouts will stay with American families and participate in various activities.

Deputy-Speaker

Russell C. Honey, Northumberland- Durham MP has been elected deputy-speaker of the Commons replacing Hugh Faulkner. The announcement came after Faulkner's appointment to position of parliamentary-secretary to Gerard Pelletier, state secretary.

La Boutique

The Whitby YMCA has started a new club for girls 14 years and up who are interested in fashion, hair care and styling, good grooming and dating. The series will begin Monday October 19 at 7 p.m. at the Whitby Centennial building under the leadership of Maureen Abbott, Victorian Order of Nurses and Elizabeth Moore, Whitby Y program director.

Study

The Ontario County Separate School Board will investigate the costs of bus transport for children in Oshawa who have to walk more than 1.5 miles to school when they live in a radius of less than 1.5 miles away.

Protest

Students of O'Neill Collegiate held a protest meeting last week to complain about inadequate academic and athletic facilities; paint fumes being locked into the sections of the building which don't have air conditioning windows or ventilation, and poor cafeteria facilites. The petition which is circulating the school is being sent to the Ontario County Board of Education

Tag Day

The Oshawa branch of the Humane Society is holding its annual tag day October 17. The society's mascot "Pete" will be seen throughout the city and people will be asked to give for Pete's sake. The organizers hope to collect more than $600

Slide Show

Miss Jennie Pringle showed slides of her "Wanderings in the Orient" following the October dinner meeting of the Soroptimists' Club. Her pictures of Japan included Expo '70, rice paddies and volcanic craters. Her slides portrayed glimpses of life in Korea, Hong Kong and Hawaii.

Jamboree

The second Bowmanville Recreation Department County and Western Jamboree is being held October 18 in the town hall.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Dalby of Courtice announce the marriage of their daughter Sandra Jean, to Sidney Reyenga, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Reyenga of Tyrone. The marriage is to take place November 17 in Courtice United Church.

Nixon speech

Provincial Opposition Leader Robert Nixon told Oshawa and District Real Estate Board members last week that the Ontario government should establish a "takeover review board" to examine mergers and acquisitions of public and private companies by other countries.

Survey

Oshawa Social Planning Council will hear the results of a survey recently conducted about the unmet needs of children in Ontario County. The survey uncovered need for group foster homes for adolescents, family counselling services, community volunteers, more qualified and specialized staff, training for foster parents and more facilities for emotionally disturbed children.

Contest

DRUM, the monthly magazine produced by Durham College students is holding an essay contest entitled "Which Way, Canada?" and is offering a $150 scholarship to cover the cost of tuition at Durham as the first prize. The contest is open to any person qualified to enter a full-time day program at the college in September 1971 projects and ever since William Paynter, Urban Renewal Co-ordinator for Oshawa, has been trying to somehow complete certain projects anyway.

At last week's council meeting Oshawa's urban renewal scheme, combined with an application for future government grants from Ottawa was approved. It is now a question of wait and see until the federal government finds a new supply of funds to help Oshawa and other cities rebuild.

In the meantime the only development proceeding now is of a private nature. "Our priorities are dictated by private development," says Mr. Paynter.

But there are a number of things "on the go."

Excavation commenced last week on the new police building to be constructed beside Church Street between Richmond and William streets. Estimated cost of the structure is $3 million. The city recently expropriated the Canadian Corps Building at a cost of $85,000. The Canadian Corps is constructing a new building on Athol Street. This building is expected to be completed in the fall of 1971. The Coulter building is also being demolished to make way for the new station.

Council has okayed the site plans for a Twin Tower development on the property bounded by Bond, Richmond and Prince Streets. This $5 million structure will feature a 10 and a 12 storey building with a two-floor commercial mall underneath the towers. The development is the project of Cital Development Company. Completion of this project is expected for 1972 but as yet there is no sign of any start on the complex.

Opposite City Hall, a complex known as the Civic Tower is expected to be completed by 1972. But no ground work has started as yet on this building. It is to be a 10 storey, $2 million complex located on the corner of Athol and Centre.

Five buildings on King Street are being demolished at a cost of $5,000 to make way for a new parking lot. These include Adams Furniture and the former Media One Stop.

"These buildings were in such a state of disrepair we have decided to demolish them and put a parking lot on the properties until we have the money and the plans for a building," says Mr. Paynter.

The commissioner says there is a lot of land in downtown Oshawa which could be put to better use. But until the funds are available, his department can do nothing about these lands.

Immediately outside the core area is the new medical tower on King street East which holds the record as the highest building within the surrounding area. The nine-storey complex is expected to be completed this year at a cost of $1 million.

Mr. Paynter feels part of the reason the government cut off urban renewal funds is that some municipalities went ahead and "demolished whole blocks without any plans in mind for the future"

He hopes that within the next few months Robert Andras, minister of housing, will give the provinces more say in the use of urban renewal funds.

In the meantime the city can only sit back, like all the other municipalities eager to rejuvenate their communities, and wait for the funds to come from the government.

"I think the interest the private developers have shown in the downtown core of Oshawa is indicative of the growth of the area," says Mr. Paynter.

It was topsy turvey for the Oshawa Excavating Company when a falling tree brought down the boom of its truck on Whitby's Perry Street, Friday. Real Estate salesman Bernard Sandbrook took this picture. The driver escaped unhurt.

Improvements to city hall, gallery proposed by civic centre committee

Plans to improve the Oshawa Civic Centre and the Robert McLaughlin Art Gallery have now been submitted to the Board of Directors of the Oshawa District Council for the Arts.

The improvement plan was the work of the ODCA's "Civic Centre Committee" that included Paul Bennett, Wendell Brewster, Philip Lakas and Cyril Taylor.

The project is in three phases involved with the Oshawa Civic Centre and the Robert McLaughlin Art Gallery

Phase one suggests that an information booth be built under the Council Chambers. Beside the booth, there will be display cases for posters and art works.

Phase two at the Civic Centre advises better arrangement of the existing benches, paths to criss-cross the grassy areas and encircle the flower gardens, and umbrella-type tables to be used by office workers during their lunch break.

Phase three concerns the Robert McLaughlin Art Gallery. The recommendation called for flower gardens and development of the area behind the Gallery.

SIDE BY SIDE

OSHAWHIT

It appears Whitby residents just could not care less about the future of Whitby within a proposed regional government scheme. If they do, they just aren't telling.

Mayor Desmond Newman and council are busy preparing the Whitby brief to be presented to the regional government study, October 20 and an aura of mystery surrounds the brief. No one in the administration is prepared to make comment on the brief before it is presented.

One thing appears certain. If the question of amalgamation with Oshawa ever becomes a plebiscite issue there will be the lowest voting turnout on record.

One of This Week's reporters spent a whole day in Whitby last week to find out just how Whitby residents feel about the issue of a merger with Oshawa. Previous public polls have indicated Whitby has varied and ample opinions on questions dealing with capital punishment, pollution and other vital issues. But, ask them a question about the possible future of their home town and you can expect to draw a blank or a curt "no comment".

Those who were willing to make a comment refused to give their names. Comments ranged from a definite "no amalgamation" to a noncommittal "what's best for Whitby is okay by me".

Some residents expressed the fear of being swallowed up by Oshawa and losing their identity. Others felt that what the mayor and council agreed on as policy would "suit me". One man even felt it wasn't his business to make a comment.

Much of the apathy shown can be directly related to the fact that people are not familiar with the OAPADS study and those who have attempted to read it, gave up in disgust.

"It is just too involved for me to follow and understand," commented one lady.

A number of businessmen questioned also refused to make a comment. Jim Kane, president of the Whitby Chamber of Commerce said preliminary discussions had begun with other local chambers of commerce to discuss the possible formation of a regional chamber of commerce.

"In certain areas amalgamation would make our work a lot easier but we would also like to see each chamber maintain a measure of autonomy," he said.

In the meantime while Oshawa civic officials are anxiously awaiting Whitby's brief, and the county town's official position.

A number of public meetings on the issue may create some measure of interest in the issue by Whitby residents next month.

Hang on to control of bus system, is PUC's advice

The Oshawa Public Utilities commission has asked city council to revise the regional government proposal dealing with public transportation.

The PUC says there would be many disadvantages if Oshawa council relinquished control of the city bus system. The commission says for many years the Oshawa bus system is likely to be the only major municipal system required within the region. "Any new transportations systems introduced during the next few years are bound to be on a very small scale compared to the Oshawa system," according to H.F. Baldwin, PUC chairman.

If the responsibility for public transportation is given to the regional council Mr. Baldwin feels its main concern would still be the operation of the Oshawa system. Under these circumstances, he says it would seem "more logical" for the Oshawa system to continue to operate under local jurisdiction.

He points out that if the regional council does administer the public transportation system it would mean rural municipalities would be sharing the burden of providing service to urban municipalities without sharing the benefits for many years.

Save tax

To alleviate the tax burden on non-users of the system the PUC suggests the Regional Council be responsible for coordinating public transportation within the region and possibly the operation of school buses, leaving the municipal councils with the responsibility of their own transit systems.

If in the future, the smaller communities find a need for public transportation the PUC offers two methods of dealing with the requirements.

"The Oshawa system, because of its relatively large size, could supply the service on a cost basis with a proportionately small increase in facilities, or, private firms could be approached to supply the service on a subsidized basis.

Seminar on pollution at college, Saturday

The Oshawa District Labour Council in co-operation with Durham College will be presenting a pollution seminar this Saturday at 9:30 a.m., at the College. This is in conjunction with all Ontario Community Colleges and the Ontario Federation of Labour, who are holding similar projects on the same date.

The seminar, called "Pollution — an Individual Responsibility", emphasizes that all members of the community have an important role to play.

The seminar program includes a 15 minute film featuring the Premier of Ontario and the two opposition leaders endorsing the fight on pollution, a discussion of the problem in this area by a panel of guests, and an open question period for members of the audience.

Guest panelists representing areas of labor, industry, education and the news media will include R. D. Lawrence, editor of the Ajax News Advertiser; Elwood Manery, supervisor of the Durham College chemistry department; Jack Owen, O'Neill Collegiate teacher; Bill Rutherford, Oshawa City Council Planning Committee member; and Ross Scott, automobile emissions control expert from General Motors.

The seminar's aim is to inform the public of pollution dangers in their community and point to measures they can follow to help limit its spread. College officials hope this will be the initial step in a continuing anti-pollution program in the area

A new 15,000 sq. ft. building was officially dedicated in the Farewell Industrial area by Mayor Bruce Mackey last week. Assisting the mayor is Bob Nicol, Industrial Commissioner; Sam Jackson Jr., builder of the complex; Keith Ross, chairman of the Oshawa Business and Industrial Commission; H. K. Jackson and S. D. Jackson, builders.

What is the purpose of a picket line?

What is the purpose of a picket line?

Ask a union member and he would probably tell you it's put there to prevent non-striking personnel from entering the struck premises. What's more, he or she would probably believe this.

But they would be wrong. Under the laws of Ontario, a union has the right to put up a picket line to inform the public that its members are on strike. But also under the law, the strikers have no right to obstruct anyone from entering.

That's why we believe the women striking against the Ontario Board of Education recently were acting a little hasty in harassing administrative personnel who attempted to cross the picket line to get to work.

Such action is understandable since the women were disgruntled over what they considered an unfair offer from the board, but that does not make their action acceptable.

Legally, the board, in such an instance, could take the case to a judge and have an injunction levelled against the union local to limit the number of pickets allowed at each entrance to the premises being picketed.

In the end, good sense prevailed. We have all we can handle strikewise at the moment and the thought of women punching out the cops on the picket line is enough to make a fellow join that group of monks making wine in the mountains in the south of France.

It's nothing short of diabolical, this tax

It was drawn to our attention by a friend of ours that on purchasing a half gross of prophylactics he was asked to pay tax. Our friend was rightly incensed. The pharmacist, in trying to pacify him, suggested stoically that he pretend this was an entertainment tax. This just added fuel to the fire. Entertainment tax indeed.

"I am providing the entertainment," our friend retorted. "I provide the soft lights, the wine, the background music and the girl, so where in heavens name does Mr. McNaughton (Provincial Treasurer) get the right to peer over my shoulder, hand outstretched to demand 5%".

It is nothing short of diabolic.

However, our friend paid up in protest.

As an afterthought he asked the pharmacist whether there is sales tax on the pill.

"Oh no," said the pharmacist.

"What!," said our friend. "Discrimination!"

In fact, this probably must be the most overt form of discrimination it has been our misfortune to come across. It appears that because the pill is a prescription item and prophylactics are not, the men get tax for their jollies and the ladies don't.

This brings us to another point. The manufacturers of these prophylactics are quick to point out that these products are sold "for the prevention of disease". We have no reason to dispute this fact. If it is true, the department of health should be subsizing the sale of these things as it obviously contributes to keeping down the cost of OHSIP. A healthy pop is a happy pop.

We were glad this grave matter was brought to our attention. In turn we would direct it to the attention of MPP Clifford Pilkey so that he may make the strongest possible representation to the government of the day to the effect that the natives of Oshawa — what with all the strikes on and nothing much else to do — are being victimized with a vicious and dastardly tax, and that at a time when they can least afford it. Furthermore, if legislation correcting this situation is not forthcoming, we can only conclude that the High and Mighty John (Robarts) has been fingered by the Woman's Liberation Movement and that this unequitable tax is the result.

Pressing for a cleanup of the lakes

Agreement by Ontario and eight states to press for a clean-up of pollution in the Great Lakes basin was reached at a meeting in Toronto recently convened by the provincial government.

Further action followed at the Federal-Provincial Constitutional Conference in Ottawa recently, to expedite the program, perhaps by overlooking for the present the undefined powers of the province and Ottawa in respect to environmental control.

Premier Robarts is on the right track in asking the federal authorities to forego constitutional rights and responsibilities if necessary in order to launch more effective pollution control measures. He contends that efforts will have to be made now, no matter what the division of powers between the federal government and the provinces might be in this area.

What is required in the long run is a new constitution to clearly define the division of powers in matters related to the control of the environment. But, such a definition could be years away and in the meantime the answer appears to lie in a temporary vesting of authority in the provinces so that bodies such as the Ontario Water Resources Commission can apply uniform pollution control standards with appropriate enforcement. Robarts is thus acting in the tradition of his predecessor, Leslie Frost, in dealing with urgent matters such as pollution. When Frost recognized that something had to be done, he went ahead and did it and worried about the technicalities later.

In regard to a concerted approach to the Great Lakes pollution crisis, the provinces and states at the conference urged a stronger role for the International Joint Commission. Greater participation and support by all levels of government was requested.

Until the commission assumes a stronger role, the provinces and states will continue to be active in exchanging information on environmental problems, reviewing and achieving uniformity of standards, promoting uniform enforcement of standards, and carrying out surveillance of the lakes situation.

Top level heads of states, including premiers, governors or their representatives left no doubt as to their commitment toward a clean-up of the lakes and rivers in the basin. The groundwork laid at the conference should prove valuable in embarking on a program to turn back the tide of pollution in the Great Lakes area.

Now that the kids are back in school

Have you noticed how our offsprings has gone through the last 10 weeks completely healthy, in fact disgustingly so, bristling with energy. And yet, as soon as they go back to school they come down with all manners of ailments.

You would suppose that this is isolated and is perhaps peculiar to your own family unit. This is apparently not so, we hear from friends and colleagues who have children of school age. They too report a marked increase in child ailments.

It would seem there is a connection between child ailments and schools. Could it be that the standard of sanitary and general hygiene is lacking? Groups of people working under similar circumstances i.e. in factories and industrial plants are closeted together for long periods and they do not appear to be affected.

Sir,

We feel your October 7, editorial entitled "Musty, and out of touch with reality," should be commented upon. The phrases which should be challenged are the following; "the utilization of our schools as public buildings is minimal" and "the schools are lying unutilized in the late afternoon and evening."

We are not, by the way, commenting on the fact that liquor should or should not be allowed on school premises.

Since September of 1968, the Oshawa Recreation Department has been making quite extensive use of schools in both the Ontario County Board of Education and the Ontario County Separate School Board. Although various problems have arisen since 1968, a very co-operative arrangement has been in existance and as a result quite extensive use is now being made of elementary and secondary schools throughout the city after the regular school hours. Not only does the city's Recreation Department operate over 65 recreation programs in 26 different schools throughout the city but we are aware and have certain knowledge of utilization by many community organizations and groups. This knowledge is based on the communications we have in one way or another with most of these groups. In fact, we assume direct responsibility in working with the Boards to see that appropriate facilities are made available to various groups.

Let us not forget about: Oshawa Symphony, Oshawa Choral Society, Oshawa Power Squadron, Oshawa Gymnastic Club, Team Handball Clubs, General Motors Basketball League, Oshawa & District Art Association, Oshawa Tennis Club, Boy Scouts, Boy Cubs, Girl Guides, religious groups, Oshawa Junior Symphony, Scandinavian - Canadian Club and many other groups and organizations who regularly use school facilities.

No, the schools are not lying idle in the late afternoon and evening. We, as the City Authority, are very pleased with the co-operation as a result of numerous hours of discussion between both Boards and our own elected representatives who sit on the Recreation Authority and every effort is made to make use of school facilities to their greatest extent.

This letter is written not in criticism but rather as explanation in order that the true situation can be understood.

We congratulate the editor on being concerned with this important area of community area and concern

W. Brewster,
Director of Recreation.

A. Graham Nelson,
Assistant Director

Sir:

To be or not to be.

Is that the reason the mayor is not giving or making public his decision about running for mayor?

If the board of control is abolished, will Bruce run for mayor and if it isn't will he give as an excuse that it takes too much time away from his family and business?

Hasn't Bruce Mackey been mayor long enough to know how much of his time it takes to be mayor?

How about it Bruce?

E. Rundle.

Sir:

You people and your Oshawhit. You make me sick. Is your newspaper trying to ram this name down our Whitby throats?

And do you think that even Oshawa people appreciate it?

"Oshawhit" sounds like something everybody would be in one helluva rush to get away from.

So how about one of these: Woshawa or Whitbosh or Witshawa or Oshitby or Eight Corners?

The last one is probably the most suitable name, and it offers a thorough historical connection. Both centres have what is lovingly called by those who have always belonged here "Four Corners." By making it eight, two for each, it would appear to me that all the natives would be happy. I know I would be.

J. E. Singer.

THE EDITOR.

Sex is on its way out.

To the women: Girls, somebody is listening.

To the men: Your tax dollars have helped to create a Women's Bureau in the Department of Labour.

Just recently this newspaper received a news release from this Women's Bureau, setting out the guidelines for newspapers pertaining to job advertising.

The guidelines are a part of the Women's Equal Employment Opportunity Act, which will be administered in Ontario by the Women's Bureau. The act is expected to be in force by December 1.

To quote from the press release:

"The legislation includes an advertising provision which states that advertisers may not place, and publications may not print advertisements limiting a position to a person of one sex or marital status, unless an exemption for the job has first been established."

There will be doubting Thomases, but rest assured that men will have nothing to say about whether an exemption is justified. Exemptions will be determined by the Women's Bureau and it is not run by a man. The authority at the bureau is in women's hands.

All this is bound to result in some interesting telephone conversations in newspaper classified offices, come Dec. 2 when the Bureau officially takes over.

Ring.

"Uh, is this the classified department?"

"Yes sir. May I help you?"

"I want to place an ad."

"Of course, sir, what sort of ad?"

"Female help wanted, I guess."

"Oh, I'm sorry sir. We can't do that."

"You can't do what"

"We can't say female sir. It's against the law."

"Whaddaya mean? It's gotta be female."

"I'm sorry, sir, but equal employment works both ways, the government says. What sort of job was it?"

"Well, uh, to tell the truth, it's a topless dancer."

"Oh, well . . ."

"What can I do? I have to get a replacement."

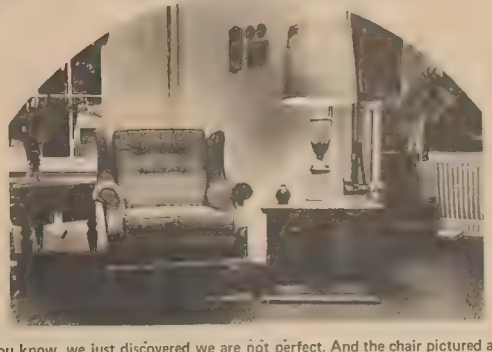
"Well, maybe you could call the Women's Bureau in the morning and get an exemption."

"I can't wait. I gotta get the ad in fast."

"Well, sir, we can just place it in the help wanted column."

"Yeah, okay. Just say, "Topless dancer, between 21 and 30. No exp-".

"Oh, I'm sorry sir. But we're not allowed to discriminate by age either."



"Wonderful. Just what can I say?"

"Well, sir, you can certainly require that the person is capable of doing the job for which you are advertising."

"Sure. How about 'Topless dancer who can keep time to the beat and work nights'?"

"Yes sir, I think that might cover it."

I don't feel nearly as sorry for the classified ad taker as for the construction foreman who has to reject an application for work as a laborer by a 103-pound lass who's six months pregnant. After all, it's her perogative to apply for the job.

You know, we just discovered we are not perfect. And the chair pictured above which is part of a chesterfield and chair suite, is why. The style is lovely, the comfort is all you can ask for but we have evidently pulled a rock on the colour. It is done in a soft aqua and gold matellasse and we feel it will blend beautifully with any number of the more popular decors. So — — instead of the regular price of $538.00 for the two pieces, we would like to offer it at the very attractive figure of $395.00. It might just be the perfect time to pick up furniture for that bedroom you are converting to a T.V. room or even for the family room where you want something for durability rather than elegance. Since there is only the one set, we would suggest you see it at your earliest convenience to avoid disappointment.

Well — there we have said it — even we who are supposed to know, every once in a great while, have a mental collapse. But — c'est la vie.

Thanks

The kids and Conspiracy plan to raise $4,000 for Uni Appeal

The youth of Oshawa and Whitby are combining forces to raise money for the United Appeal by promoting a massive concert

Starring in the concert is "The Perth County Conspiracy", a group of young people who live in the Stratford area. The group, all members of a commune in Perth County will be making their first major public appearance at the concert in the Civic Auditorium

Approximately 30 of the 100 members are expected to perform. They specialize in folk, audience participation and lighting techniques. Their appearance in Oshawa will be in conjunction with their first album to be released by Columbia records

A committee of 15 high school students has been working on this project since May. Organizers hope all 3,500 seats in the arena will be sold out Tickets ($2) are being sold in all high schools in Oshawa and Whitby

The Perth County Conspiracy is a unique group Members live on a large communal farm outside Stratford and earn their livelihood by farming and operating a coffee house in Stratford. The group is made up of men, women and children. Most of the musicians are self-taught. They will give two 55 minute performances

The co-chairmen of the event, Linda Pesarchuk and Jim Balzan are anxious to make this an annual fund-raising event They hope to raise $4,000 for the United Appeal

The concert will be held October 22 at the Oshawa Arena, 8 p.m. — Tickets may be purchased from high school representatives or at the door.

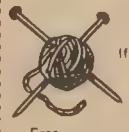
English for seniors

The Ontario County Board of Education is offering new Canadian senior citizens an opportunity to learn English and to become socially more involved through an introductory English course.

The course is given at the Senior Citizens Drop-in Centre, John Street, and is open to anyone 58 years of age or over, living in Oshawa or area.

Interested students are asked to register at 1 p.m. October 14 at the drop-in centre.

Polish ex at art gallery



The Polish Exhibition of Arts and Crafts, prepared under the auspices of The United Council of Polish Organizations last week proved a successful venture.

The exhibition was officially opened by Mrs. Mary Schneider, after a banquet held in the Polish Veterans' Centre Red Room.

Most of the exhibits for the display have been collected from the Polish community at large Paintings and sculptures were by well-known artists — Mrs. Mary Schneider, Mieczyslaw Podgrabinski, and Edward Koniuszy. All three are graduates of The Academy of Fine Arts in Warsaw Mrs. Schneider is known internationally and has exhibited across the world. She is director of the Mary and Roman Schneider School of Fine Arts in Actinolite, Ontario. Podgrabinski was a teacher at the Warsaw College of Art for 10 years, has won many awards for sculpture, medals and posters in Warsaw, Paris and Edinburgh. Koniuszy's work has been exhibited both abroad and in Canada. As recently as September of this year, some of his work was displayed in "This Season of Man" at the Oshawa Art Gallery, prepared by the Sculptors' Society of Canada.

The Gallery was also well attended on Sunday afternoon when a recital was given of Chopin music by Elizabeth Lambert and Stephen Fiess and a vocal recital by Elsie Drygala accompanied at the piano by Sharon Perkins.

Tuesday's musical program consisted of a concert by St. Hedwig's Glee Club, directed by Sister Regina-Mary, while Wednesday was devoted to the Polish Veterans.

WE ARE GLAD TO OBLIGE

Because a pharmacy is intimately involved with health, the service it must provide goes much beyond any possible profit motive or advantage over a competitor. The best example of this pharmacy ethic is the cooperation between ordinarily competing pharmacies when time is an urgent factor.

Although we usually have most prescribed drugs in stock, or can get a medicine delivered to us the same day, we occasionally must have it that same hour. When this happens we will ask another pharmacy to "oblige" us and let us borrow from him the needed drug until we can replace it. Other pharmacies will follow the same procedure in getting an urgently needed medicine from us. The health of the customer must always be the primary concern of every pharmacist.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service.

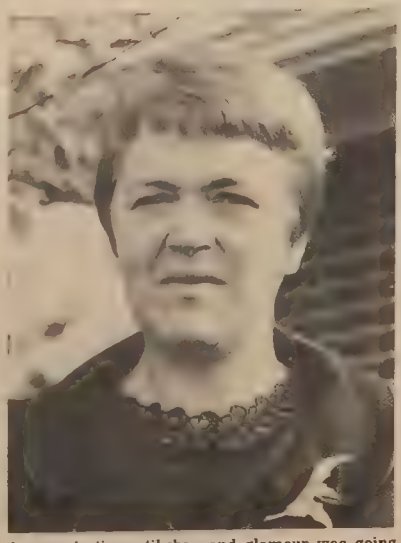
She's too busy

Elizabeth Oscapella hasn't time for a full-time job

By Elaine Hallam
Staff Reporter

Elizabeth Oscapella just cannot find the time for a full-time job. She is much too busy looking after her family, arranging fashion shows, sewing costumes for amateur groups, teaching night school and attending university courses.



In fact, her full-time job consists of a whole series of part-time jobs. She says she has to keep busy to keep up with her busy family. Her husband teaches music in 28 schools in Oshawa and is active in organizing musical concerts in the art gallery. One son attends university and the other is completing grade 13 this year.

"They are all extremely talented in the music field, so I have to find other intersts to keep me busy," says Mrs. Oscapella.

All her outside intersts are based on her first love "fashion". Some of her fondest memories are of the years she spent in Stratford, Ontario designing and sewing costumes for the Stratford Shakespearean Festivals.

Always seeking a challenge in whatever she does, she chose to make the male costumes and some of her most famous models were Christopher Plummer, William Shatner, Lloyd Bochner and Don Davis.

She made costumes for the very first Stratford festival and stayed with the organization until she moved to Oshawa with her family in 1960.

Backstage

"While all the glitter and glamour was going on out front, we stayed backstage getting the next performer ready for his number."

Once in Oshawa it didn't take Mrs. Oscapella long to find something else to keep her busy. She teaches dress designing and pattern layout at Centennial College two nights a week, and teaches one night a week at McLaughlin High School.

Her talent for dress designing and sewing was cultivated when she was very young. While other girls spent their holidays at camp she went to a handicraft school in Austria where she lived at the time.

She apprenticed in Toronto but in 1938 went to Berlin to study dress making. She returned to Toronto where she was a bridal counsellor to Simpson Sears.

"I love the dramatics of a wedding and it's a time when a designer can really express her creativity in colors and designs."

Now that she is living in Oshawa she transfers her creativity from weddings to fashion shows, and costume designing. Her sons volunteer her services for school plays. . .

Planning

Always looking for something new to try Mrs. Oscapella has set her mind on taking a course in program planning.

"There must be an easier method of organizing my time and events so I have decided when I'm finished with my present commitments I will take

Cops and kids rap, find smaller gap

Oshawa police and the kids got together Friday for a conference on youth/police relations and found the gap between the two groups was not as wide as they had thought.

The "youth/police rap session", sponsored by the Oshawa Police department, Project Youth, the drop-in centre, the Family Counselling Service and the Department of Recreation, resulted in a unamimous opinion from both sides that communication was the basic problem between the two groups.

Insp. Norm Smythe said: "I was surprised to find there really wasn't that much difference between us and the youth."

One young man expressed the feeling that the police had a job to do in arresting people and that they did this in a professional capacity and not on a personal level This statement drew support from others

Insp. Smythe said he would like to see the young people lose their "fear of police". Police officers come to the drop-in centre now only when they are needed or to make routine checks.

While the teenagers said they felt the police were obliged to enforce the law they said they were very seldom "harassed" by the police while using Memorial Park.

The issue of stereotypes arose and both sides agreed they had preconceived ideas of each other. Police often view hippies as slovenly dressed and adorned with long hair, while youth view police as "pigs". Both sides felt many of these ideas came from the United States and did not exist universally.

Miss Dale Perrin of the Family Counselling Services said the drop-in centre has been experiencing "growing pains", but that attitudes between the youth and police were getting better all the time.

The day-long rap session ended in unanimous agreement that a police-youth liason committee be set up to further communication between the two groups.

The committee will be composed of three volunteers from each of the police department, the adult volunteer workers and the youth committee.

Insp. Smythe said he felt the good feeling between police and youth could be amplified if "these type of talk sessions continued".

The youths, however, did not endorse a recommendation that young officers should be encouraged to attend the Drop-in centre to talk informally and get to know the youths in the Centre.

They did endorse further talk sessions and the recommendation that in-service training for young police officers should include regular discussions with youths in order to try to understand youth ideas and values.

"We must break down the barriers between youth and police and begin to view them as people," said Rev. T. Gemmell, chairman of the drop-in centre advisory board. "It is hoped this committee will do this job".

Four Oshawa softball titles

City softball fans and executives have every right to be elated as Oshawa wound up the Thanksgiving weekend with no less than four OASA All-Ontario championships.

Scugog Cleaners defeated Grimsby to win the OASA Jr. A crown 2 games to 1. Scugogs won their opener 1-0, lost the second by an identical score and came back to win the deciding match 5 to 4.

In OASA Sr. B, Gale Lumber won a remarkable fifth consecutive championship as they beat Sault Ste. Marie two straight by scores of 7-2 and 5-0 up in the Sault. Ron Taylor was the winner in the opener and Larry Marshall threw a no-hitter to cap off a brilliant season for the Gale boys.

Bunny's also travelled to the Soo for their Intermediate AA finals and defeated the Black Knights 2 games to 1. Bunny's took the first game handily by a score of 11 to 1, faltered in the second 4-2 and then came back to take the rubber match by a count of 3-2. Don Calder pitched both wins for the Bunny's squad.

The only final series to be played in Oshawa was the OASA Sr. A final and in that one Tony's also defeated a Sault Ste. Marie team by 2 games to 1. Tony's won their first game 2 to 0, lost the second 3-1 and came back on Sunday morning to wallop the Soo club by 10 runs to one. Big Pete Landers, who has to be the best chucker in the province was again the hero of the whole piece as he pitched all three games for the Caterers.

From the sports desk of THIS WEEK, congratulations to the four clubs involved and to the Oshawa City and District Softball Association for a most

Ontario Games

Athletes from 11 Ontario regions will compete in the Province of Ontario Games to be held in Etobicoke in December.

Dates for the Games are December 28, 29 and 30. Most Ontario sports bodies will use the Games to select the Ontario team for the Canada Winter Games, scheduled to be held in Saskatoon next February.

More than 1,100 athletes will compete in 16 sports at the Ontario event.

DONALD M. PATERSON,
Regional Government Study Principal

by jo aldwinckle

Even in a soft shirt and without a tie, Hardy Amies gives the impression of being impeccably dressed; the traditional Englishman, at ease anywhere in the world. His influence in men's and women's fashion is equally world-wide.

His clientele, headed by the Queen herself, includes members of the nobility, the wives of distinguished industrialists and financiers and many representatives of the stage and screen.

Hardy Amies was in Toronto last week and I had an engaging conversation with him in his hotel suite.

We talked about London, Munich, Koblenz and the castles on the Rhine until I steered the conversation to the mirror of fashion.

"The story for spring," he said, "is all soft colors, — I call them pre-Raphaelite colors, and drapey fabrics. We don't discuss length any more because the accepted length is three inches below the knee.

"This length is variable. The hem should caress the calf; the natural waist must be defined and the dress itself must flow. Silk crepe is the best material but is expensive. Cheaper synthetics can produce a fluid effect if properly cut. The unyielding, cardboard look has gone. You'll see a lot more maxis this winter, too."

"What about fashions for men?"

Mr. Amies was wearing fawn trousers with outside seaming, slightly flared from the knee down and with deep cuffs.

"This is the coming silhouette," he said, "and with it, a raised heel on slip-on style shoe or boot.

"The new jackets have deeper openings with wide notched reveres and two buttons, the lower one unfastened."

He put on a jacket in matching fawn, brown and grey check, bound in grey on all edges including the patch pockets which were bias-cut, deep and rather narrow.

He then changed it for a chestnut brown, flat-knit semi-sport jacket, buttoned to the neck with a small round collar and tie belt.

"Very comfortable," he commented, "and suitable for a senior executive to wear when he drops into the office on a Saturday morning."

"What about jersey for men's wear?"

"Jersey is fine for the trim figure. I have a tunic and pants in royal blue knit that I enjoy wearing at home, but a well-tailored, canvassed, worsted suit is essential to disguise figure faults."

"What about after-five wear for men?"

"Depends on the occasion. For a dinner party at home if the hostess is informal her husband might wear red velvet pants and a rich silk shirt open at the neck. For a theatre first night he would be well-dressed in a dinner jacket with a black and white printed silk shirt. With a black tie, I insist that a white shirt is the utmost in elegance."

Hardy Amies loves ties and cravats.

"Just under the chin is the eye-catching area and should express personality . . "

He is introducing silk foulards, five-and-a-half to six inches wide in gorgeous prints.

Involving all the people is aim of art gallery

By Elaine Hallam
This Week Staff

Paul Bennett, director of the Robert McLaughlin Gallery knows he has no hope of involving the majority of citizens in art. But by reaching out to key people in the community, he hopes the next generation will take an active role in art appreciation in Oshawa

Mr Bennett sees the art gallery as an educational institution and by involving teachers in the programs he hopes to reach students — the potential market of tomorrow

"The old-fashioned idea of an art gallery has changed now. The director works with people and the curator deals with pieces of art. I am both, but primarily I am interested in people," says Mr. Bennett

He feels the way to reach the public is through involvement. To his knowledge he has introduced the first program ever for housewives in any gallery in Ontario. To provide the young mothers with a creative hobby and a chance to express their artistic talents, a class is being held one morning a week. Pre-schoolers are looked after by two women from the Senior Citizen's club.

Segments of the population have shown interest in the gallery by arranging to have showings of their native artifacts. Last week the Polish community displayed an exhibit, which proved popular.

An indication of Mr. Bennett's success in involving the community can be measured through attendance figures. May, 1970 was the peak month this year with 9,863 people visiting the gallery.

On the average attendance is up 1,000 people per month as compared to the 1969 figures.

Lecturers

In an effort to offer art lovers the best Mr. Bennett engages top lecturers and pays them good money. "Oshawa deserves good people, so we just don't offer the lecturer a cup of tea and cookies. We pay them good money and we get good lecturers."

Mr. Bennett's aim is to collect as many Painters Eleven works of art as possible and to have the McLaughlin Gallery become the centre of these works.

Alexandra Luke, the wife of the donor of the gallery Ewart McLaughlin, was a member of the Painters Eleven. The group was formed in 1953 and introduced abstract expressionism into the visual arts scene in Ontario.

The gallery has decided to collect the papers, notebooks, early sketches and paintings by the Painters Eleven and so become known as a centre of study for the group.

Seven of the eleven artists are still living, and include Harold Town, Jack Bush and William Ronald. The gallery has 25 pieces of their work in its permanent collection.

Busy man

Paul Bennett is an extremely busy man who works five days a week and four nights. He is responsible for all the exhibits in the gallery and maintains a schedule of lectures to other galleries.

He manages to take a day off every three weeks to visit the commercial galleries to keep up with contemporary art. He lives in Toronto and commutes to Oshawa daily.

"People keep asking me when I'm going to move to Oshawa but by living in Toronto I maintain my contacts with other artists and promoters and with a little public relations here and there, I sometimes manage to get excellent showings for the gallery."

As a matter of fact, public relations is taking up more and more of the director's time. People are constantly asking him where they can get an evaluation of their treasures, what school to send their daughter to, and arranging coverage for gallery showings.

The new gallery has been open approximately a year and a half and Mr. Bennett feels it is too soon to ask for money for expansion of facilities. He would like to have $40,000 to buy some original works of the Painters Eleven. He would also like to see an auditorium built to hold public meetings and work rooms added on to the present building.

Busy, busy

"I would like to see the gallery so busy that the visitors themselves would complain and ask for larger facilities. This can only be done by offering valid programs of interest to a wide section of the public."

Mr. Bennett has arranged a full schedule of professional exhibitions

Lecture series provides exciting program

By Paul Bennett

The Robert McLaughlin Gallery is providing a series of lectures this Fall to assist in developing the sensitivity of people viewing art.

The first sensory awareness workshop by Miss Anna Palo-Heimo, proved successful. It will be followed by a second workshop on October 21.

On October 14 the subject is going to be "underground films" with a lecture. Miss Sharon Singer, of Toronto, is going to discuss the difference between the underground film and the Hollywood film, the history of underground films and how to make your own underground film. She is bringing an exciting hour of films, including 'Craven Sluck' by the Kuchar Bros. 20 minutes, colour — a parody of Hollywood film; 'Fist Fight' by Robert Breer, colour and black and white, 11 minutes, a subliminal film with strong visual impact; 'Son of Dada' by Richard Preston, 12 minutes, an animated satire against the American status quo; and finally 'Offon" by Scott Bartlett, 10 minutes, which uses computors and video tapes and is like the psychedelic section of the 2001 Space Odyssey. All these films are American, Bartlett is Canadian and now lives in California.

November 4 will bring a lecture by Professor John Lee, a sociologist from the University of Toronto, entitled "In Touch with Art". Professor Lee states that art seems to be a necessary activity of every civilization, and yet somehow, above the ordinary craft level, art continues to be regarded as a luxury rather than an essential for human existence. Is this because most of us are out of touch with the art around us? Works of art are put 'on exhibit' but we cannot touch them unless we buy them. In this evening session the audience will trace the history of inhibition of art from ancient time to the present day, and will engage in some practical experiences aimed at helping those present become more in touch with art

OSO to honor Beethoven

The Oshawa Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Jacob Groob is presenting the first concert of its 13th Season, on October 25, at Eastdale Auditorium.

The all Beethoven concert honors the 200th anniversary of the great composer's birth. The orchestra will perform Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A major. The guest artist Miss Bonnie Silver, a noted young pianist from Toronto will play Beethoven's piano Concerto No. 4 in G major. Director Groob will play the violin soloist in Beethoven's Romance No. 2 in F major for violin and orchestra.

Roy Barrand, subscription chairman is enthusiastic about the increased local interest in the orchestra. The sale of subscription tickets, which includes four concerts, has doubled over that of last season.

throughout this year. Between now and next June there will be 27 different shows on view at the gallery. These will range from a large prestige exhibition of sculpture called "3 D into the 70's" produced by the Art Gallery of Ontario, to an exhibition on "Charles Fothergill, 1782-1840" produced by the McLaughlin Gallery.

At present the value of the permanent collection stands at $121,150. There are more than 100 works in the collection.

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

Local origination is one of the hardest terms of reference for the cable operators to define. Take a music show that has the local band performing on tv. While all the members of the group come from the immediate vicinity they are probably hooked up with some recording company in the big city that has the group copywritten. The problem comes from the record people. They want cold cash for the group to appear on the air and since all Canadian cable companies are non-profit, this presents a problem. We, the cable casters, simply cannot afford to have this group on the air in spite of the many please from the viewers

Nor can we afford to make the half hour special that has become common on the regular tv, simply because it costs too much to make without the financial support the commercial stations receive. So the term local origination becomes more restrictive than is fully realized

What the cable companies can do is the truly localized event such as parades, sports on the junior level and news events that are of interest to this locale only. This is where the viewer himself must help out or at least inform the cablecast personnel of events of local interest. To this date that information hasn't been forthcoming in any great amount, so many interesting events have been missed simply because we didn't know about them in time

Well, it's easy enough to solve. If you are a member of an organization or service club just phone or write in what's going to happen. Even schools should get involved in this program. Parents are vitally interested in the student activities and it's so simple to sit home and see and hear the event on the television set

Now that hockey is coming into its own, all those coaches or parents who are connected with teams should give us a call. At least one game a week is planned for this area from the tiny tykes to the bigger junior B's but the only way this can be accomplished is by you letting us know about it.

Cablecast 8 is for all purposes your means of communication. Use it for yourself and don't feel selfish about it. After all, that's what local origination is all about

Boy can take advantage of both

Hockey vs education

By Jim Bishop
sports editor

In a few short years the teams in the Jr. A calibre groups across the country have had to reassess just what they had to offer a teenager.

Just a couple of years back the Jr. A clubs were so demanding in their schedules that a young hockey player had to make a choice too early between possibly developing into a pro hockey player or getting an education. Not so today; the Jr. A loops have seen the competition from the American colleges and have done something about it to keep the young men in Canada and to keep up the calibre of hockey that fans have always expected from the teams.

In the last two or three years at least three excellent prospects have left Oshawa via the American Scholarship route — John Clayton, Pete McNamee and Bill Prentice. But this is a general thing throughout the amateur hockey world.

Of course, the education picture has changed considerably in the local areas since Centennial Year with the advent of the community college, and now the teams have handy schools at which their charges can attend thus satisfying both athletic and educational needs. At present The Generals have Terry O'Reilly and Warren Anderson enrolled at University of Toronto and Jumpin' Jack Lynch and Dennis Howard at Durham College, in Oshawa.

Bassin

One man in Oshawa who made a successful compromise between hockey and education is Sherwood Bassin, a teacher at Durham.

Sherry, as he is known, was born in Saskatchewan and played High School hockey and then moved on to the University of Manitoba where he played on the hockey team for one year. He was scouted by the University of North Dakota and transferred there on a hockey scholarship. Because he wanted to take a course in Pharmacy he had to transfer to another campus and wound up coaching, playing and refereeing local hockey in and around Grand Forks N.D.

Bassin now feels that because someone noticed his hockey ability he had the opportunity to go to a big school and ended up with three degrees. He has a Masters in Pharmacy and Hospital Administration, a Registered Pharmacist's degree and a Juris Doctor in Law. Bassin has passed the Bar in the U.S. but as yet not in Canada. He now teaches Business Law courses to the regular students at Durham, Pharmacology to students in the Medical Secretaries course, and at Durham's evening extension courses he teaches Business Law, Industrial Legislation and Hospital Management.

Although a busy man in the academic world, Bassin still returns to his first love, hockey. At present he coaches a Midget A team and assists with the coaching and managing of the Toronto Red Raiders of the Metro Jr. B league.

As a man who has seen both sides of the education-versus-hockey conflict, Bassin has some very decided ideas about the subject. He says, "At one time I looked upon Jr. A hockey teams with disfavor because they were so demanding and offered very few opportunities for getting an education. Now my attitude is somewhat reversed; due to the fact that the Jr. A clubs have recognized the competition from the American schools and have encouraged the teenage players to take advantage of educational possibilities as well as further their hockey abilities. I am convinced that

Royal banker wants a piece of the action

The Royal Bank of Canada wants a piece of the action or at least some of the city's banking business.

In a letter to city council, W. D. Dobson, manager of the downtown branch of the Royal Bank of Canada asked why his bank, which has been in Oshawa for well over 50 years does not enjoy a share of the city's accounts.

Mr. Dobson wrote that in regard to payment of taxes, his bank is second only to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, and that the head office of the Royal Bank hold $192,000 City of Oshawa debentures.

City Clerk Roy Barrand said that up until 1909 there was no bylaw as to which bank the city could borrow from. The first mention of a bank was in 1909 when a bylaw stated the city's banking business should go to the Western Bank of Canada which has been established in Oshawa in 1874.

In 1909 the Western Bank of Canada amalgamated with the Standard Bank of Commerce, which some years later became the Bank of Commerce, which later became the Imperial Bank of Commerce. A 1930 bylaw states the Imperial Bank of Commerce was the bank the city should deal with.

According to Mr. Barrand the city has been dealing with the Imperial Bank of Commerce in one form or another since its inception.

The matter was referred to Board of Control to deal with.

Boy, Hockey

if a boy will discipline himself accordingly he does not have to put all his eggs in one basket and can take advantage of both possibilities, he can become a respected individual in both endeavors."

Scholarships

Bassin is still somewhat American scholarship-oriented, but certainly respects the progress that the Jr. A clubs are making in looking after the best interests of their players.

Recently, there has been a large increase of college-trained players make the jump to the NHL. Two of the shining examples are Keith Magnusson of the Chicago Black Hawks and Gary Croteau of the Oakland Seals.

It appears that it is not out of the realm of possibility that in a few years hockey at the top pro levels will be played by successful graduates in all branches of Arts and Sciences. It must be left up to the Junior teams to not only provide the places where a boy may develop into a top-notch hockey player but also to provide him with the means to successfully support himself after his hockey days are over.

First point of season

Generals finally on board

By Jim Bishop

The Oshawa Generals finally got on the scoreboard in the OHA Jr. A Major race on Thanksgiving night as they pulled off a 2-2 tie with the big, rough Toronto Marlboros. This was the first point the Gens have picked up in the new season as they bowed to the Montreal Jr. Canadiens on Saturday and the Hamilton Red Wings in the opening game of the schedule the previous weekend

On Saturday the Generals gave the mighty Habs a real good run for their money but came up on the short end by a score of 4 to 3, their second straight loss by the same identical score.

The Oshawa boys really looked like they came to play in the first period of Saturday's game as they outskated the Habs and outshot them 15 to 5 Generals took a one-goal lead on Methe's power play goal from Mahon and Seiling at the 16 - minute mark and the score stayed that way for the rest of the period.

In the second it looked as if the Canadiens were going to run Oshawa right out of the rink until big rookie, Jumpin' Jack Lynch tied the score for the Generals with two powerplay goals in the last minute. (When I call him Jumpin' Jack, I mean it. It's worth the price of admission just to watch the histrionics this boy goes through when he scores a goal). The little Montreal speedster Robert LaLonde and Richard Lemieux had put the Canadiens ahead earlier in the period.

In the third, the Generals held their own until they started to tire in the latter stages of the frame and Richard Martin put the Baby Habs ahead to stay with two goals in just under three minutes.

On Monday night the fans saw as exciting a game as they probably will see all season. Although the Generals were outshot 43 to 19 it was no indication of the play. They finished the first period leading 2 to 1 on goals by Don Seiling and Doug Ferguson, both rookies. Bill Harris gave Marlies their only tally of the period at the 13-minute mark. Steve Vickers pulled Toronto even late in the second and the game finished that way, although both teams had a multitude of scoring chances.

Generals fans have good reason to be encouraged after the way this young club played in both weekend games against two of the top clubs that they will meet this year. The play of both goalies, Gilles Gratton and Teddy McComb has been excellent. McComb took over for Gratton early in the second period Saturday when Gratton was the victim of a goalmouth pileup and was cut by a stick. Coach Reigle started McComb on Monday and he responded with a sparkling display and earned himself the first pick of the three stars.

Other encouraging signs are the hitting and forechecking of the Generals. Simpson and Sullivan were showing quite a bit of muscle in both games, but particularly in Monday's game. The line of Seiling, George Ferguson and John Cook continues to be the most dangerous and the defense pair of Anderson and Doug Ferguson the most reliable.

Played well

Reigle thought the club played well even though it was short of bench strength. There are a couple of injuries on the team and Doug Ferguson is suffering from a bad case of tonsillitis. Reigle was pleased with the aggressive play of some of the veterans and the way that the team stayed up throughout both contests and didn't quit. The club is looking forward to the arrival of Brian Thorne this week from the St. Catherines camp. Thorne is described as an excellent checker and should be an asset.

The Generals now meet the Peterboro Petes in a home and home series starting this Thursday night in Peterboro then return home for the second half of the series on Sunday at the Auditorium. A couple of wins against the Petes should give the Gens a real psychological lift and leave them in good shape in the league standings.

by jim bishop

Is the OHA going to wait until some teenage hockey player is killed or maimed for life before it will instruct referees to crack down on some of the more aggressive (or animalistic may be a better word) players?

This past weekend we saw Alan Globensky of the Montreal Jr. Canadiens elbow Terry O'Reilly's face into the end of the boards and Marlie's Steve Durbano spear goalie Ted McComb in the abdomen after the whistle had blown to stop play

Globensky escaped punishment altogether and Durbano was assessed a five-minute major penalty for his little touch of gentility

We are not suggesting they make a cream-puff game out of Jr. A hockey but we are saying that there should be at least a match misconduct and a review by the OHA executive for these deliberate attempts to injure

Maybe, also, the answer lies in hiring more competent officials than have appeared here in the last two games

Referee Bob Kolari had trouble keeping up with the play all night on Saturday and it was not surprising that Globensky was not given a penalty when he drilled O'Reilly. It would seem that Globensky's chief claim to fame in hockey is to decommission other players who have some ability, either by injuring them in some way or by starting a fight with them to take them off the ice via the penalty route.

We are also suggesting that some kind of reprimand be given coaches for ordering their players to take out an opposing player in this manner.

After all, these players are just teenagers and there is such a thing in this world as sportsmanship and character-molding.

Maybe when there are thousands of dollars at stake, as there are in the NHL, it's okay to give the other guy everything you can, but certainly not in Junior hockey where the boys are playing just for spending money and expenses and are only in the 15 to 20 year old age bracket.

Crushmen split pair

The Oshawa Crushmen split a pair of games on the weekend. They suffered a defeat at the hands of the Peterboro Don-Byes on Saturday by a score of 10 to 3. In that one Hopkins, Robson and Steve West scored for the Crushmen

On Monday night in Cobourg, the Oshawa crew won a fight-filled battle against the Cougars, 6-5. There were several fights and major penalties in the contest with Scott Willson and Len McAvoy picking up game misconducts. The Generals will do well to keep their eye on young Steve West of Orono. West scored twice in this game, giving him a total of 7 in the last 4 games. Other scorers for Oshawa were Len McAvoy, Don Hudgin, Randy Rogers and Rene Beauchamin.

The Crushmen open their regular home schedule this Saturday night when they entertain the same Cobourg club at the Civic Auditorium at 7:15 pm

Legions hosts 350 at baseball awards night

By Jim Bishop

Canadian Legion Branch 43 and the executive of the Legion Minor Baseball Association last week hosted 250 young ballplayers and about 100 coaches, managers, sponsors, trainers, executives and parents at their annual baseball season windup night. Alex Walker, chairman of the Legion's baseball committee expressed pride in the accomplishments of the baseball program which has about 450 kids playing the game every summer.

Don Allman emceed the proceedings, highlighted by the presentation of team and individual trophies and awards. Team trophies were presented to the champions in each of the House League divisions and for out-of-town titles.

In the Tyke division, the Luke White Trophy was presented to Dick Crouse of the Local 205L team and the Robert Kirk Trophy went to the Jolly Buccaneer PeeWees. In PeeWee 'Zone F' the Legion Trophy was won by Red Barn Restaurant PeeWees. The EOBA Jr Trophy was presented to Gary Tutin, captain of the Oshawa Junior Legionnaires for winning the EOBA junior championship. The Arnold Wade Memorial Trophy was presented by Grant Wade to Gord Johnson and Dave Waite of the Senior Legionnaires for winning the Intermediate title in that same group.

Individual trophies went to Gary Lewis, Matt Masternick, Glenn Kirkham, Gary Tutin, Pat Watters and Barry Coe. Gary Lewis won the Dillabough Trophy as the Most Valuable Player in the PeeWee house league. In the final series of the city championship Lewis pitched all three winning games for his team and on three consecutive nights. Matt Masternick was the Outstanding Midget Player and received the Nibs McComb Memorial Trophy. Glenn Kirkham was the recipient of the Sebe Claus Memorial Trophy as the MVP in the Bantam house league. The last three awards were all batting trophies. Jerry Coe was the Midget Batting champ and Gary Tutin received the Blanche Norton Memorial Trophy for leading Oshawa batters in the Leaside Junior League. Pat Watters was the EOBA Intermediate batting champ

This year the Legion sponsored 23 teams for over 400 boys and men with the ages of the players ranging from eight years old to a couple of players around the 35 year old mark. This sea-event starts.

Claire Rich, Chairman of the Dunlop Bonspiel Committee, said, "We want the local curlers to have a chance to compete in this prestigious Bonspiel. Any rink from Division 5 which covers an area in a radius of 25 miles of Whitby will be eligible to enter the qualifying playoffs and depending on the number of entrants for this, we will allocate places in the draw for the Dunlop. We will have two Whitby rinks and, if we receive over 20 other entrants, six outside rinks going into the final draw along with the top-class invited rinks."

Invitations have been mailed to all the leading rinks throughout Ontario, in addition to selected rinks in Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces. As in the four previous years of the Dunlop there will be 16 rinks in qualifying play on Saturdays, October 31, November 7 and 14 and Friday, November 20, with 24 rinks in the finals on Saturday, November 21.

Jean is involved

Jean Gaskell was a Brownie and then a Guide when she lived in England as a child. Now a grandmother twice over, she's more involved in Guiding than ever. She has just become Administrator and Co-ordinator of the Oshawa Girl Guides which means she's Administrator of three Divisions, involving more than 2000 girls.

It's a big job but Mrs. Gaskell has had 20 years experience in Guiding in Oshawa. She was Brown Owl with the 4th Brownie Pack in Westmount for 11 years — a job she took on only until "they could find someone younger".

Then she spent six years as district commissioner and three as division commissioner before her latest promotion. Somewhere along the way she found time to be president of the Home and School council for three years, and she's also an Honorary Life President of the Westmount Home and School.

Her whole family is involved. John Gaskell, Jean's husband stays in the background, she says, but has always been there when he was needed, ever since the days when the Brownies met in a one room school and he used to light the fire for them. Daughter Sandra was a leader in the Air Ranger and a Mate in the Sea Rangers. Brian was a Sea Cadet. Elizabeth was a Brown Owl though she has switched loyalties now that she has two sons in Cubs. Meanwhile "they" have long ago stopped looking for someone younger than Jean Gaskell to replace her. There probably isn't any such person.

Maybe you can't volunteer time and energy as Jean Gaskell does but your dollars will work for the cause too. GIVE when the United Appeal Canvasser calls on you!

Legion baseball

son marks the 23rd consecutive year that the Legion has been involved in Minor baseball and they are quick to point out that in all that time, only two players have been in any trouble with the law. This is certainly a credit to the Legion as well as the city of Oshawa.

Plans are already underway for next season and it looks like at least one or two new teams will be added. There is speculation that Kinsmen Stadium will be turned over for the exclusive use of baseball and this will certainly be a much better facility than baseball has had for a number of years

There was a feeling prevailing at the windup affair that Oshawa sports fans are returning to the baseball fold. The opinion of local baseball men is that the Montreal Expos are responsible in large measure for this

The Oshawa Legion Minor Baseball Association executive consisted this year of President Jim Lutton, Vice-presidents Ted McComb and Bill Watters, Secretary Art Perry, and Directors Tony Jones and John Soltas.

CITY OF OSHAWA

CLEANUP WEEK

The week of October 19th to October 23rd inclusive, has been designated as Cleanup Week in the City of Oshawa, and arrangements have been made for the collection from private residences, on their usual garbage day of all discarded household accumulations of furniture, clothing, rubbish resulting from the cleaning up of grounds or from minor household repairs, and domestic waste material such as paper, rags, cartons, packing cases and bottles.

All materials to be collected should be put out during the above-mentioned week only, and at the same time and in the regular collection.

MATERIALS NOT INCLUDED IN THIS COLLECTION

Large quantities of waste building material and waste food products (in excess of the normal amount handled in regular garbage collections) are not included in this collection.

This special collection applies only to private households and not to apartments, stores, businesses or industries.

Arts secretariat proposed in brief

The Oshawa and District Council for the Arts feels that a new post should be established for the co-ordination and the encouragement of the arts in this area

The ODCA will submit a brief to Mayor Bruce V. Mackey in hopes that he will endorse the new position.

The proposed secretariat would consist of a paid co-ordinator and a part-time secretarial assistant

The need for the new secretariat has arisen because of the continuing growth of cultural activities in Oshawa, says the ODCA

Credit and the student

Ontario high school students will soon be learning about the dangers of over-extended credit buying through an animated film produced by students and underwritten by the Ontario Department of Financial and Commercial Affairs

The animated five-minute film, entitled "Pay Later" is the work of two Ottawa high school students, Kiloran German, 17, and David Grimes, 19. While still in Grade 13, the young filmmakers wrote the script and did the animation work. They used the camera facilities at Gloucester High School in Ottawa and had the films produced locally

Get us out of the mess

Sir:

It appears that at this point in time there are a number of Oshawa politicians considering retirement from the municipal scene this December.

I hear from a good source that neither Mayor Mackey nor Controller McIlveen nor Aldermen Gibson and Murdoch, and perhaps one of two others, are going to stand for election.

It would indeed be sad for the city to see these people retire. Perhaps they are taking criticism of their action too seriously while not taking serious enough their obligation to the city

We would like to put it to the retirees this way: "Gentlemen, you got us into this mess — now get us out."

Ray T. Payer.

Here's a hair piece

Sir:

Since you are encouraging people to write you letters to express their opinions, and since Monday is a holiday which cuts into the production schedule of a weekly newspaper in a bad way, I will sit down and write you a short epistle

While attending a council meeting the other night, it struck me that one of our dearly beloved controllers has been taking matters much too seriously, and the whole thing, in a way, appears to have gone to her head

I am referring to our Mrs. Shaw, the girl known to you sir, and to the multitudes of Oshawa, as a good looking blonde.

Well, at the recent meeting of city council, I found the blonde had turned several shades, to a blueish gray

I would advise you, sir, and your colleagues, and members of council, to lay off. We need all the color we can get at our city hall. There's too much gray area as it is Peter Brouwer.

Prayer for a nation

Lord, we are confused and shaken and deeply worried by the events of the past two weeks and we are turning to you, as we have done over the centuries to find new confidence and strength and security.

We have been so blind and so busy in our own house, Lord, that we have forgotten about our neighbor's. Our pre-occupation with ourselves was such that now we cannot even begin to understand this feeling of rebellion against us. Please forgive.

We have read our newspapers, Lord, we've listened to our political leaders, we've watched them on television, we have voted them into office or out of office, and when we read in our newspapers, Lord, that the things that are now confusing us were confusing people of other lands, we sat back smugly, saying "it cannot, no, it will not happen here, for we are a civilized nation." And when we went out to vote for our political leaders, Lord, we impressed upon them that what we were interested in most was material progress. We never even mentioned the social or spiritual things.

And Lord, when some of our neighbors, in the next province over, began to feel the pinch of our ignorance of their dilemma we failed to listen to their reasoning. We lent them half an ear, not a whole one.

And we have nightmares today, Lord, because among our neighbors there were some who began to have nightmares years ago, and whose nightmares developed into twisted thinking and a total loss of perspective and finally into violence of the lowest and meanest degree.

Please Lord, we pray, give us perspective and let us not tar our neighbors with this brush of mean violence. Please let us not get all mixed up by the events of the past few weeks. Let our smugness be replaced by insight and understanding. Help us to root out the cancer in our society that has brought us our national nightmare.

Our neighbors, like us, want to be masters in their own house, Lord. They want most of all equality with the rest of our nation. Please make us understand

We pray Lord, for the Cross family and the Laporte family. We pray for all our political leaders, also those of the Parti Quebecois. Give them all wisdom and courage

We pray for our neighbors in Quebec. Make us all see that we are our brother's keeper and that is we love our neighbor — not with a benevolent love but with a consumate love — this neighbor will return our love and join in our prayer, because by ourselves we are impotent.

MACKEY BOWS OUT

Mayor Bruce Mackey announced yesterday he will not seek the position of mayor in the next election. But he has not ruled out the possibility of running for alderman.

"My principal reason for this decision is the great amount of time I find that I must be absent from my young family in performing the enormous obligations required to fulfill the role of Mayor as I see it for the City of Oshawa."

Mayor Mackey would not say if he would support another mayoralty candidate but did say there was more than one person on council who could fulfil the position.

He stressed that his reasons for not running for mayor were "strictly personal".

"Politically, I have every reason to run again."

The Mayor said there is a great deal of unfinished business before Council before the end of the year and he would "direct his full energies toward finishing this business."

"I'm going to miss campaigning very much. I always campaigned very hard and enjoyed it thoroughly," said Mayor Mackey.

"I haven't decided if I will run for alderman but I will definitely not run for Board of Control."

The news of Mayor Mackey's decision not to run did not come as a surprise to most of city council.

One of his most frequent adversaries on council, Con. Margaret Shaw expressed sorrow at his decision and said "I have always found him a good person to work with. He is conscientious and has a lot to contribute." Con. Shaw said "she realized the long hours a dedicated person must put in to do his work properly."

Con. Christine Thomas praised the work of Mayor Mackey and wished him "all the success" in the future.

Mackey: strictly personal reasons

"I feel he has grasped so much knowledge about regional government and has made a lot of good contributions. He could have been of great benefit to Oshawa if he had decided to serve a second term," Con. Thomas said.

Con. Charles McIlveen said he was sorry to hear the mayor's decision and said if he had decided to run "nobody would have stood a chance against him". He has done a tremendous job."

Con. Finlay Dafoe would make no comment.

Alderman Ross Gibson said he felt the mayor's decision comes as a great shock to the community.

"I admire him for placing his family ahead of his political career but I do feel this will be the end of the prospects of a brilliant political career for him," said Ald. Gibson.

"Oshawa is losing a tremendously active politician who always had the interests of the community in mind. I hope he won't completely drop out of local politics."

Ald. Ruth Bestwick said Mayor Mackey's youth added a lot to the "tremendous job he has done". "I'm sorry to hear of his decision."

Alderman Edward McNeely termed the mayor's decision "not unexpected" but said "it would be nice if he did feel he could carry on". Ald. McNeely has been the cause of some speculation that he might run for the position of mayor but would only say that he was not sure he could run even if he wanted to, many of the reasons being the same as the mayor's decision to retire.

Alderman Alice Reardon said that she could see the mayor's decision "coming" but hoped he would consider running for another position. "He has a lot to offer the community."

Ald. Allan Pilkey said the citizens of Oshawa owe the mayor a vote of thanks for stepping into the mayor's chair. "I think the citizens should thank him for his time and effort during the last year and a half."

Ald. Norman Down called Mayor Mackey "a real good mayor who has done a first class job." He said he had expected the mayor to seek another term.

Ald. Potticary, Humphreys and Attersley were not available for comment.

Mayor Mackey was first elected to council in 1966 as an alderman. He polled the second highest number of votes for any position on council.

In 1968 Mayor Mackey successfully ran for election to Board of Control at that time drawing the highest number of votes of any of the 40 other candidates for municipal office.

He came to his present position as mayor in October 1969 when he took over from ailing Mayor Hayward Murdoch and he was officially sworn into the office on November 3, 1969.

Is city's merger bid too many eggs in one basket?

Regional government consultant Donald Paterson last week cautioned Oshawa in its bid for amalgamation with Whitby and pointed out cases where two municipalities could do the job as well as one.

Mayor Bruce Mackey presented the city's brief to the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study executive on Friday and was told by Mr. Paterson that "Oshawa may be placing too many eggs in one basket" in its amalgamation bid.

One of the main arguments for amalgamation that Oshawa presented in its brief, is the "high standard of services" that have been built up over the years by the people of Oshawa. These services, Oshawa contends, could be shared with Whitby.

Mr. Paterson took exception to this argument saying it was not so much an effort by the people as it was by industry. "I think it is a corporate rather than a personal effort," he said.

Bothered . . .

Mr. Paterson termed the Oshawa brief "one of the most important briefs" and told the council members present that the question that bothered him the most about the brief was the question of amalgamation.

"This issue is woven neatly throughout the brief and it has bothered me somewhat."

Oshawa had listed in its brief the social, economic and cultural advantages of amalgamation and Mr. Paterson questioned whether these advantages could not "be true even with two municipalities".

Mayor Mackey offered a rebuttal to this statement saying that with the two municipalities there could be some competition for industrial development and that this results in wasteful confrontation.

"Some competition is not a bad thing but to try and outdo each other is wasteful," Mayor Mackey said.

City treasurer Frank Markson said: "Why not capitalize on the unifying components?"

Mr. Paterson suggested that Oshawa not ignore other alternatives to amalgamation to fall back on, if the amalgamation proposal is turned down. While he was cautious not to give away his feelings on the amalgamation question Mr. Paterson did not leave the audience with the feeling the idea was a sure bet for Oshawa.

Mayor Mackey told Mr. Paterson if the merger between Oshawa and Whitby was not accomplished council would oppose a merger between Ajax and Pickering.

Political access

The matter of "political access" was introduced and Mayor Mackey said this issue was given considerable weight in Discussion Paper Three, which invited the current series of local briefs, as a factor against amalgamation.

Political access refers to the availability and access of the public to the governing body and vice versa.

"Access is a two-way street and includes the access the elected representatives have to the area they represent and the access the voter has to his elected representative," said Mr. Paterson.

He added that in his opinion there was too much access and too little service in the northern area but that the urban area was closer to an ideal balance. He said the ideal situation would be a balance of access versus municipal services.

Mr. Paterson quoted a recent British study that said to obtain maximum balance between servicing and access a municipality should ideally be between 100,000 and 250,000 in population.

Mayor Mackey raised a second issue of representation by population on the regional council. As it now stands, if amalgamation with Whitby takes place, the two municipalities would have 14 out of 30 seats on the council.

Discussion Paper Three recommends Oshawa have 36.5 per cent representation even though it has 46.1 per cent of the total regional population.

When questioned by Mr. Paterson as to the exact number of representatives that would satisfy Oshawa, Mayor Mackey said he would have to take the matter back to council for further discsssion.

Oshawa will have a chance to offer rebuttals to Mr. Paterson's arguments during the week of October 26.

WANTED

by the citizens of Oshawa,

CHIEF MAGISTRATE

The candidate

The successful candidate will be a mature individual who has a clearly demonstratable record of success in the field of executive branches of elected representation and allied discipline.

Above all, the man chosen should be a self-starter and possess an outstanding ability to communicate and project his ideas to others.

Tough mindedness in the presence of sacred cows is a pre-requisite for our man.

He must be an individual who can talk with kings and princes and never lose the common touch. In addition, a recognized diploma in forestry would be a distinct asset, since there is much dead wood to be cleared before the infusion of new ideas, which we expect from him can take hold and grow to fruition.

The challenge

To direct the entire financial and administrative activities of a growing city.

To pull together into a tight and incisive unit, a group of presently independent fiefdoms (go ahead, look it up in the Oxford dictionary) otherwise known as city hall departments. (The successful candidate will have carte blanche to liquidate those fiefs who fail to adapt themselves to the candidate's policy decisions.)

To be able to successfully make his presence felt at both the federal and provincial levels of government.

It is entirely possible that the successful candidate will preside over the demise of municipal government as it is presently structured and that he will be instrumental in evolving and implementing regional government within the life of his contract.

In brief, the chosen mayor is to act in many respects as a city manager.

The job

The salary will be $27,350 (see page four) with increments to be negotiated annually.

The expense account will be sufficient. Under no circumstances will the candidate be expected to subsidize his out-of-pocket expenses from his own salary.

The longest, sleekest and sexiest available General Motors limousine will be provided for the successful candidate's use.

The existing office provided for the chief magistrate is already in keeping with the image the city wishes to project.

The successful candidate will be provided a free parking space in the city hall basement garage

Applicants are to appear in person at city hall, November 23 with two referees to act as nominator and seconder. The position will be officially awarded on December 5.

Despite the foregoing, the City of Oshawa is an equal opportunity employer.

What's the solution?

A rat is ugly in its looks and ways.

So says our favourite animal book.

And, it adds, "the rat has always lived close to man, feeding on his supplies, a threat to his wife and children, and one who spreads disease among his own numbers."

THIS WEEK's Frank Rutter shows his contempt for the FLQ and its methods of trashcan memos in the cartoon next to this column.

With rats we associate extermination.

And we firmly believe that the attitude of extermination by our government officials has been the only way out of the national crisis facing Canada. But we need most of all a solution of extermination by enlightenment.

Among our politicians at Ottawa — and there are some for whom we have had little praise — there are some wise men after all. Thank God.

It became obvious on the weekend that there was more than meets the eye behind the government decision to invoke the War Measures Act. It is up to the government to keep us fully informed of the reasons behind its actions as is possible under the circumstances.

The events of the past two weeks are a national shame. They have shaken us all to the core. They made all the little things that we usually worry about so totally insignificant.

It is now up to all of us not to return to our complacency but to actively help seek a solution to the problems that are threatening to ruin our country — not only in Quebec, but right here is Oshawa.

Don't say 'it couldn't happen in Oshawa.' It could.

All over the world the have-nots are confronting the have's.

What are we, who have, going to do about it?

In the solution to this question lies the answer.

Think about it.

Sir,

I am writing you a protest letter. (By the way, it is my first letter to a newspaper).

As a newcomer to Oshawa, I was invited by a well meaning friend, to a night out to view the available night life in our fair city

While I stayed within the city limits of Oshawa, I was offered a very acceptable, if rather loud, form of entertainment.

However, towards midnight, last Friday, we moved on to Whitby There, at a local hostelry, my friends and I were subjected to what I can only describe as an insult to our intelligence, and our dignity. Masquerading as entertainers were a couple of very tired "Performers" in the shape of a female impersonator (whose only claim to fame seemed to be a coarse exchange of abusive personalities between this person and a group of (in my opinion justified) hecklers in the audience) and a boring, ill voluptuous stripper.

I have seen many "Earthy" shows in my time, and have been entertained . . . to a greater or lesser degree by them, and I consider that they have their place in the entertainment world, but . . . this!

I really do not consider this type of "Bathroom wall" performance has any place in our community. I would rather expect to find this in some basement clip joint in the Southern States of America and, Frankly, I believe the proprietors of this establishment should be censured publicly for what we consider to be an insult to the intelligence of the residents of this area. A boycott of this fleshpot by the local people would be the least I would consider to be justifiable in the light of what they consider to be What we deserve as a fair return for the money we shell out for drinks and food in return for this "Show"

Incidentally, it will be a long time before the Spruce Villa enjoys the privelege of my patronage.

New Oshawaitbian

Sir:

"Let's support the Generals! Yes, all you Oshawa people get out there and support your team!"

Does this phrase sound familiar? It is a common quote used by local radio stations to boost the popularity of Oshawa's own Junior A team.

Perhaps, years ago, Oshawa residents did not need to be bribed, in order to support their club; but lately the situation looks dim, and I blame this on the General's Organization myself, since it is not an entirely constructed Oshawa product.

Maybe it is unfair to lose faith in the Generals, but they have failed to prove their worth, time and time again. But it is not unfair to lose faith in the club itself, since it is fast becoming a patchwork team. By this I mean that most of the

Oshawa needs a full-time mayor

While the help wanted ad on page three of this issue may give you cause for a giggle, we regret to advise you that with the strong possibility of Bruce Mackey not running again for the office of mayor, the position as it relates to the future well-being of the city, is grim. The reason for our pessimism should not be difficult to comprehend.

The position of mayor in a growing community like Oshawa is extremely time consuming, very frustrating and in the final analysis a most thankless task.

Accordingly, any thinking man with the ability this post deserves, will not even consider entering an election, as the remuneration and terms of reference presently stand in respect to the position of mayor.

We believe it is most important at this stage of the city's development — it is necessary — that its mayor spend as much time as possible on city business, if our municipal machinery is indeed to operate effectively.

A salary of $10,000 is completely unrealistic in view of the time required each day to keep on top of the job. This has been realized by other municipalities at a similar stage of their growth. Look at London or Hamilton. These centres have full-time mayors who earn a salary commensurate with their position.

And it's no use for the dogs in the manger to bleat that the mayor's already being paid far too much. As the saying goes, you get what you pay for. The only class of person to whom the position as it presently stands, would seem attractive, is:

1. The person whose total remuneration from all sources is less than $10,000 a year, or

1. The retired or semi-retired person who has given the best years of his life in other fields and to whom the position is attractive as a make-work mental exercise or an absorbing hobby.

Frankly, in our opinion the job is far too important to confine its attractiveness to these two groups of people. In fact, we would go so far as to recommend to our readers that if a candidate applies and falls into either of the two aforementioned groups, he should be politely, but firmly given the bum's rush. (This goes for aldermen and controllers in the same category, but more about that in the next few weeks.)

Having delivered our criticism of the present setup, it is only fair we should suggest a better hole to go to. So here goes:

Oshawa's whole thinking in regard to the position of mayor should be revamped by the present council before nomination day, so that we will be able to attract the very best candidate for the job. In this context the salary for a full-time mayor — 24 hours a day if the situation warrants it — should be a minimum of $27,350 a year. And that, plus expenses of up to $12,000 a year. Any less than this figure would be placing our full-time mayor in a lower category than the industrial commissioner of an adjacent municipality.

In addition, there should be liberal fringe benefits. It goes without saying that a suitable limousine in keeping with the position of Oshawa's official representative be provided. (It is noteworthy in this context that the mayor of good old Montreal is provided with a top-of-the-line Ford vehicle by the Ford Motor Company every year. For GM's Canadian base of operations nothing shorter than, or short of, a GM limousine would be fitting. And no doubt this could be arranged on short order.

If you've stayed with us to this point of the debate, and you were thinking "spheres", just go back to the fact that if you go into the marketplace cheap, you shouldn't be surprised if you do end up with a cheap, shoddy article.

For our money, and because we're proud of this city, we're prepared to go on record as saying that only the best is good enough for Oshawa.

Think about it.

Sir

When is this madness rampant in Quebec going to stop? Starting back in 1963 when mail boxes were bombed because they were a symbol of the Crown and dozens of innocent people killed and injured where was the cry for sanity. When the flag of Canada was burned and replaced with the French Fleur de Lis most French Canadians cheered. The Jean Baptiste day riots were accepted with little real condemnation. Politicians before the last election in Quebec turned their heads and allowed permissive attacks on the Anglo-Saxon minority in fear of losing the votes of the separatists. When the English controlled stock exchange in Montreal was bombed where were the voices of the French majority? When the statue of General Wolfe was bombed where again were the voices of reason? When the separatists assailed the Anglo-Saxon minority with vitriolic hate where were the voices of Quebec? With almost 30 percent of the popular vote in the last Que. election going to the separatists one can easily see how separatist terror organizations like the FLQ get their start. Hitler it is claimed had only 7 per cent of the people behind him when he came to power.

Madness breeds madness. Plane hijackings, now kidnappings. Soon no one will be safe from terror.

Meanwhile our brave Prime Minister rides around in a bullet proof Cadillac (made for Queen to visit her loyal subjects in Quebec at Expo 67) and brags about curtailing our civil liberties and use of the army to protect the politicians. No weak-kneed bleedin' heart is Mr. Trudeau, he's a real Napoleon Bonaparte. The FLQ and their 130 members must be laughing it up when they read the P.M.s threats. After all he was the only man who could put Quebec in its place . . . or so he was billed by his own colleagues during the election. And the naive Anglo-Saxons bought it hook line and sinker.

When British diplomat Cross was kidnapped Trudeau went into seclusion while Bourassa took off to the U.S. for four days. Neither Trudeau nor the Quebec Premier showed little concern for the "british" diplomat, but when the FLQ grabbed a Que. Cabinet Minister — a French-Canadian, both came out shooting

Behind the smoke of battle, puppet Mitchell Sharp came to the nation on TV to tell us happy souls that Communist China is to open an embassy in Ottawa and us one in Peking. Oh happy days, now we can get a mint copy of the "Thoughts of Mao"

The Prime Minister was invited by the world body to speak at the Anniversary of the United Nations which would take less than 9 hours. The P.M. refused

Weak-kneed (the P.M.'s favorite saying) External Affairs Minister Sharp will no doubt solicit support for Red China's admission to the U.N

Is Bourassa more tolerant to the Anglo-Saxons than was his predecessor? Why did he personally intervene last month with GM to have contract negotiations at the Que plant conducted in FRENCH?

Now the FLQ terrorists with the aid of the mother FLQ of France claim they will bomb airlines and communications in the rest of Canada. De Gaulle must be overjoyed with his "Quebec Libre."

Politics? Question of need?

"Deplorable" school probed
Expect report at next meeting

The engineering department of the Ontario County Board of Education has made a routine investigation of South Simcoe School. It came on the heels of parents charges that the school was in "deplorable condition"

A report was presented to the Board meeting last week and made the recommendation that routine maintenance was necessary and that a further report including costs of these repairs would be forthcoming at the next board meeting

It was indicated that certain renovations scheduled for next year would be stepped up to be done this year. This will include painting which will be done as soon as a color scheme is picked out.

The general feeling of the trustees was that there were other schools which needed renovations also and that everything was a matter of priorities.

Trustee E. R. Britten expressed annoyance that the matter was brought to the attention of the board by a parent's association and was not discovered through routine investigations

Trustee Milton Mowbray said the whole matter was one of politics. "We are an elected body subject to political pressures by local ratepayers. They raise an issue and bring it to our attention, otherwise we might never hear of it."

Trustee T. D. Thomas took exception to the use of the word "politics" and said it was a question of need not politics.

"It is nonsensical to suggest the school be replaced," he said.

A full report will be presented at the next meeting, October 26.

There were a few parents from the original committee at the meeting. They refused to make comments pending the final report

SHORTS

Labor endorsement

The Oshawa and District Labor Council will endorse several candidates in the December 5 municipal elections. Council president Tom Simmons said candidates did not necessarily have to be NDP members but would be labor-oriented people.

Survey

The Ontario County School Board has received the results of a recent questionnaire distributed to all parents in the county. The results show a general confidence in the school system but the desire for more communication with teachers and administrators was expressed.

Six more weeks of mess

Trustees of the Ontario County Board of Education have been told it will take from one month to six weeks to clear up all the deficiencies as a result of recent renovations at O'Neill Collegiate.

J. R. Backus told the trustees that 98 per cent of the mess and confusion would be cleared up by the end of this week. The auditorium and gymnasium are in the final steps of being prepared for use.

The biggest problem area is the heating and ventilation system. Students and staff had been complaining of poor air conditioning and ventilation.

At least one of the trustees had received complaints from residents living in the vicinity of O'Neill Collegiate in regards to air pollution. Mr. Backus said this was due to adjustments on the boiler and hoped the problem would be eliminated in the near future.

Board Chairman Stan Lovell asked for specific dates on the clean-up and said "we have been going on hope for a long time, we want this cleared up as soon as possible".

The first meeting of the 1970-71 season of the Oshawa Naturalists Club was held in McLaughlin Library. President Margaret Henry called on the program chairman, Miss Monica Connolly, to outline the next meeting. Each member was asked to do research on some particular facet of nature and participate in group discussion.

Edgar James outlined plans for outings. These were field trips to study fungi, nature photography, and a trip to the planetarium.

First speaker of the evening was John Pratt, president of the Rock and Mineral Club in Oshawa He discussed different aspects of his hobby — the collection of oddities.

WHAT IS IN A NAME ?

Whenever you consider buying a product and it has a name that you recognize, or is made by a company you are familiar with, it will always give you a certain confidence that what you are getting is of good quality. It is the same when you select a pharmacy to get your medicines and health needs from, or a family physician.

Your doctor and pharmacist feel the same way about companies who make pharmaceutical products. Although some drugs may be made by many firms, your physician usually specifies the exact brand name he feels will be the safest for you. Because we stock only medicines made by reputable firms, we too feel confident that we are always dispensing drugs that are dependable.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service.

Three trophies for Storie

Sir

In regards to your write up on "Four Oshawa Softball titles," I would like to draw your attention to the fact that the "Storie Park Minor Girls" won the P.W.S.U. Minor Girls All Ontario "A" Championship Aug. 29th played at Fernhill Park Oshawa. Minor Girls "City "A" Championship. Sept. 14th played at Woodrow Park Oshawa N.A.S.C. City Championship. They have won 3 trophies, also they played 38 games with only 1 lost. I think these girls deserve a write up in your paper, Dont' you?

fossils, and various kinds of crystals as well as the preparation of microscopic and fluorescent collections. Some samples were passed from hand to hand. He also mentioned the interest shown in the lapidary field and passed around examples of work which he had done himself.

Next speaker, was a charter member of the ONC, E.J.P. Morley. Mr. Morley chose for his topic, Spiders, a subject with which he has had a great deal of experience. He said he has found it to be a relaxing and informative hobby. His audience found that he could also make it one that is highly conducive to humor. He stressed the amazing diversity of spiders and the fact that there has been so little formal study on them, possibly because of the endless hours required. Slides were used to illustrate his talk.

The Conspiracy

'Hottest group in Canada' to help young people here raise funds for current United Appeal drive

By Elaine Hallam
Staff reporter

The Perth County Conspiracy came to Oshawa last week to help promote a massive concert sponsored by Oshawa Whitby youths who hope to raise money for the United Appeal.

While their name sounds ominous, they in fact are quite passive and get their kicks out of spontaneous performances for people. Six and one half members of the group arrived in Oshawa including five men, one woman and a baby.

All the members of the Conspiracy who spoke were quite elusive and could not explain just what their performance would be like. Rumors that have drifted down from their home base in Stratford say that at times the audience joins with the conspiracy in a five-minute round of imitating animal calls.

The concert, they claim, is geared to an audience of youthful open-minded people of all ages.

"The Conspiracy are a group of people who can be understood, viewed and discussed on various planes and our concert is for people who can relate to the same actions and feelings of the group," said a spokesman for the Conspiracy

Their two 55-minute shows will include songs, both original and commissioned, excerpts from Shakespeare, Dylan Thomas and Eldridge Cleaver and maybe even a few animal imitations.

The 100 members of the Conspiracy live in Perth County on neighboring farms and homes. Their main source of income is the running of the Black Swan coffee house in Stratford, which they operate during the summer season.

The beginnings of the Conspiracy phenomena dates back 11 years but they admit they didn't come into actual recognition until five or six years ago.

Their first album will be released at the end of October on the Columbia label and they are being billed as the "hottest group in Canada". They do a bit of radio and television work and hope eventually to move into the film-making industry.

While it was difficult to actually pin the members down as to what they do, it was clearly evident from their replies that they do what they want, when they want. Each member of the Conspiracy is gifted in one way or another be it song, sculpture or painting.

In fact there is no way of finding out just how many of the Conspiracy will show up for the concert.

"Whoever feels like coming will be here. I think it would be safe to say that there will be anywhere from 30 to 100 members present," said one bearded conspirator.

The concert will be held October 22 at the Civic Arena at 8 p.m. Tickets are $2 and can be purchased from high school students in Oshawa and Whitby, or at the door.

It will be well worth the price of admission to see just what these elusive conspirators have in store for the audience. One thing is for certain, no one will know the program before hand — not even the performers.

Nightathon under the motto 'we give a damn'

Students, parents and teachers from the Oshawa Catholic High School are walking en masse to Toronto Saturday night to draw attention to their continuing pressure on the government to obtain grants for students in grades 11, 12 and 13.

They will be attending a rally at Maple Leaf Gardens, Sunday at 1 p.m., sponsored by the Ontario Catholic Students Federation. More than 200 area residents will be attending the rally with an additional 50 students walking to the stadium to call attention to their grievance.

The walkers will attend a midnight folk mass at St. Mary's Church by Father Woodcroft. They will leave from the church and walk along highway 2 to Maple Leaf Gardens, approximately 40 miles

Under existing legislation, students in grades 11, 12 and 13 must pay tuition of $200 per year plus the cost of their books.

"Many of our friends just couldn't afford the tuition and are forced to go to public high schools. We lose a lot of our friends that way," says Leo Barrett, one of the organizers of the walk.

"Ever since the BNA Act of 1867 which stated that Roman Catholic schools should not receive government grants, we have been having to pay tuition," says Larry Cyr, another organizer.

Cliff Pilkey (NDP-Oshawa) expects to attend the rally. Organizers hope other government officials will also be present.

"The New Democratic Party supports the Separate School Board's "Equal Opportunity for Education" brief which asks for government funds and equality in education," says Mr. Pilkey.

Students from all over Ontario are expected to attend the rally. Every student will pay 25 cents to cover the cost of renting the stadium.

"We have tried letters and petitions and haven't got any results so this time we plan total involvement," says Leo.

Everyone is invited to take part in the rally. The students have adopted as their motto "We give a damn".

31 Oshawa area patients treated at arthritis clinic in Toronto

Arthritis is sometimes referred to as the disease that never kills but frequently makes its victim wish he were dead. The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society is in existence to make life easier and more hopeful for victims of these crippling and painful diseases of the joints.

The Society was established in 1949 with four prime objectives: To expand and improve services for the diagnosis, treatment, rehabilitation and welfare of those who suffer from arthiritis. To provide patients and the public with factual information regarding early signs of the diseases and the need for prompt treatment. To sponsor programs of research and professional education in the rheumatic diseases so as to discover their causes, cure and methods of prevention. To raise funds for these purposes.

There are more than 60 types of arthritis, all of which attack the body's joints. Other rheumatic diseases which do not affect the joints are described as non-articular forms of rheumatism. Is is estimated that some 285,000 Canadians suffer from some form of rheumatic disease to the extent that it interferes with their normal daily activities to some degree. 63,000 are classified as severely or totally disabled, that is, regularly confined to bed or wheelchair

There are no absolute cures for the more serious forms of rheumatic diseases but treatment now available can prevent and check disability and control the disease.

31 from here

Such treatment is available at special Rheumatic Diseases Units established by CARS in most major Canadian cities. There are three in Toronto, at Wellesley Hospital, Toronto Western and Sunnybrook. Last year 31 patients from Oshawa and Whitby were referred by their physicians to these special treatment units and spent an average length of one month each, receiving treatment.

The ideal unit is a complex of 30 to 40 beds set apart for the care of arthritic patients, combined with associated research and teaching space. All this is directed by a staff of rheumatologists and other specialists, all located in a teaching hospital.

There is close liaison between medical practitioners, district health units and the home care program of the CARS and in 1969 a total of 98 patients in the Oshawa-Whitby area received home physiotherapy from the Toronto CARS centres, following referral by their own doctors.

William Paynter is chairman of the local CARS committee. Jo Aldwinckle is secretary and Dr. C.E. McIlveen, Tom Simmons, Mrs. A. J. Allen, J. G. Brady and the Reverend G. M. Minielly ara also members.

The CARS receives funds from the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal and this money goes to the provincial government to be spent where it is most needed. The cost of having physiotherapists from Toronto visit local patients and of patients visiting the Rheumatic Diseases Centres is partly covered by these funds.

In 1950 the Society spent $4,000 on research. Now more than $70,000 a year is spent, making possible the growing network of rheumatic disease units, a core of trained investigators and laboratories oriented to research in the arthritis field. Greatly increased funds are still needed to maintain and expand the research programs.

If the money can be found, with the co-operation of universities, hospitals, Hospital Services Commissions and the CARS, Canada's more than one million arthritis sufferers can look forward with new hope to being restored to happy, useful living.

Perplexed on wardrobe?

By Jo Aldwinckle

There is definitely a fresh wind blowing in the world of fashion and for women perplexed about the new lines, new lengths and the state of their wardrobe generally, a program on the ins-and-outs of it all is to be presented at McLaughlin Collegiate this Saturday.

From 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. with a coffee break and supper at 5:30 p.m. (included in the $2.50 price of admission) experts will explain and demonstrate color, construction and professional short cuts. A runway parade will complete the show which has been coordinated by Elizabeth Oscapella in co-operation with the Oshawa Recreation Department.

One of the outstanding speakers will be Ursula of Rodolphe Gowns.

Proceeds will be donated to Glenholme Training School and the Crippled Children's School and Treatment Centre.

To facilitate catering, tickets should be purchased in advance from Mrs. David McDuff (725-9204); Mrs. K.G. Beesley (576-8690); Mrs. Sylvie Robi (723-3177).

One of this summer's globe-trotters, Mrs. G.K. Drynan shared her adventures in Japan and Russia with members of the University Women's Club last Wednesday evening. Mrs. Drynan travelled with a group of 35 singers and instrumentalists, Canadian Amateur Musicians, who practised daily and gave performances at Expo '70.

Mrs. Drynan's first impressions were the small stature of the Japanese people and the shuffling gait of the women. This impression faded slightly in the light of the welcome the group received.

"The Japanese were anxious to be helpful to visitors and always polite. We fell into the habit of making a little bow when being introduced or exchanging greetings and we were still bowing when we arrived in Russia which was quite the wrong thing to do.

"The Japanese children are well-mannered and love to try out their English which all learn at school. They go to school six days a week. The entrance examination to university is very stiff and it's not uncommon for students to try their entrance for five years."

Mrs. Dyrnan's beautiful color slides spoke eloquently of the Japanese scenery; the Golden Pavilion rising from the lake; Buddhist temples and stone lanterns; verdant mountains and the gardens of the Imperial Palace once forbidden to the public

These gardens in true Japanese style are landscaped lawns,trees and shrubberies and watercourses spanned by arched bridges, but no flowers.

She showed street scenes and market places, always thronged with people some westernized, some in the old, traditional dress.

She took part in a tea ceremony an ancient ritual; attended a performance of the classic theatre, a three-hour experience of masked allegorical figures gorgeously costumed and watched a demonstration of flower arranging, which is a serious study in Japan.

She travelled in the Bullet Train, Japan's famous electric railway that provides a smooth and confortable ride at 130 m.p.h.

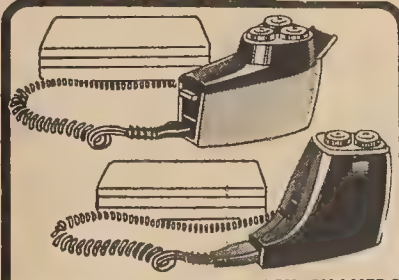
"I really learned to know Japanese life by staying with a family. The sons and daughter could speak English. They were well-educated and quick-witted and we had some delightful conversations. I shared their meals and we became such good friends that when it came time to leave, they honored me by setting off fireworks from the roof.

"This custom may be meant to light the way for the departing guest but anyway, it is a great honor."

The group flew over Siberia for 10 hours en route to Moscow. They waited two and a half hours to go through customs and immigration procedures, then another ten hours in a domestic airport waiting to fly to Leningrad.

"The airport was filthy. We waited outside because we couldn't stand the stench. We were fatigued uncomfortable and annoyed.

"Leningrad is historic and a beautiful city. The Hermitage is now a museum containing magnificent treasures and the Peterhof, the former summer palace of the czars, reflects their imperial elegance.



"In Moscow we were billeted in the Soviet School of Choreography, we couldn't find out why, so made the best of a rather inconvenient situation.

"We were not bound to our guide but few of the group ventured forth on their own, not because they were apprehensive but because the effort was too frustrating.

"The Russians were aloof. The Muscovites behanved as if they didn't dare communicate with us. Our guide, a young woman, was well-informed and polite, but that was all."

The other generation gap

Meet Ella Farrow and Harry Aitkins, two Oshawa seniors

By Elaine Hallam
Staff reporter

There is a generation gap not associated with youth and adults which many people tend to forget about — the generation gap between all the other age groups and the senior citizen.

In practically every society, except North America, the older generation of a family is treated as wise elders to be treasured and respected. North Americans, however, have a strange reverse custom. They are forgotten, ignored or placed in homes to be taken care of at great expense

Having been used to independence all their lives, many struggle on their own until they have to give up. Ella Farrow is just this type of person, who refuses to ask for help from relatives or welfare, but manages to get along on her widow's pension of less than $90 a month.

In a way she is perhaps more fortunate than many other Oshawa senior citizens. She owns her own six-room house but must pay for oil, electricity and taxes. During the summer months she puts away a little extra money that she saves from her fuel bill to pay her taxes and winter expenses.

Alone 5 years

She has been living alone for five years. Her husband died in 1965 and had been working for General Motors for 42 years but Mrs. Farrow says he died suddenly and did not turn his pension over into her name. She was left with only a meager widow's pension.

Mrs. Farrow is vibrant and youthful and looks years younger than her actual age of 65. When she is at home she has a small budgie which keeps her company. Then there's her telephone.

She has a list of 75 names of friends she regularly calls to make sure they are all well. Many never receive a call for weeks at a time and it gives her great pleasure to talk to these lonesome people who cannot get out to meet others.

For Mrs. Farrow, the Senior Citizen's Drop-In Centre is a chance to meet and talk with other people her own age. She arrives first thing in the morning and makes herself useful drawing curtains, emptying ash trays and doing dishes

She has become part of the Drop-In Centre and if she does not show up one day her friends phone to see how she is.

The first time she had ever eaten in a restaurant was last year and she was so thrilled she asked for the waitress' autograph. She has never been to a movie or a concert. She seldom watches television, but her favorite show is "I Love Lucy".

She has no money to buy clothes and has no desire to, either. She receives great pleasure from having clothes that were given to her, renovated to suit her. She delights in receiving clothes from other friends or welfare agencies.

Visit grandson

If she had one wish for anything in the world she would like to take a trip to California to visit her 15-year old grandson who is an actor on Bonanza and the Big Valley. But most of all she would be content with her continuing good health.

In November she will be eligible for the old age pension and will receive an extra $15 a month. She isn't saving her money for anything special. She has never bought anything on time and she never will.

Her family is especially good to her and five of her six children live in Oshawa. They help her out with her housework and drive her to and from the Drop-In Centre.

No pension

Harry Aitkins is a man with no country and therefore cannot apply for his old-age pension. Mr. Aitkins emigrated to Canada two years ago to join his son and family after his wife died.

Although he was once a Canadian citizen he moved to his native land of Jamaica in 1934 and his Canadian citizenship and passport had lapsed when he decided to move to Oshawa. He literally has no country and must wait from three to five years to apply for his pension.

Fortunately for the 70-year old Mr. Aitkin, his son and daughter-in-law have taken him into their home and are supporting him.

Like Mrs. Farrow, Mr. Aitkin spends the majority of his time at the Senior Citizen's Drop-In Centre. He passes the day playing euchre, shuffleboard or cribbage.

He is treasurer of the Senior Citizen's Club and takes pride in keeping the books in order. For him the day is not complete

New clubhouse for Unit 42

By Jo Aldwinckle

When Unit 42, Canadian Corps, holds the official opening of its new clubhouse on Athol Street East, Saturday morning, there will be many recollections of happy times spent in the old building, the west wing of the "Piano Works" on Richmond Street East.

Unit 42 has come a long way since 1945 when Joe Homes organized the first house to house meetings of the demobilized men of the 42nd Field Regiment.

As more joined "the gang", they moved to clubrooms on Albert Street and became duly constituted as Unit 42 Canadian Corps. Jack Harper (1946-52) was the first president.

Others in order have been Jack Woodman, 1953-56, Frank Davis, 1957-58, Frank Hughes, 1959-60; Ernie Bell, 1961-62; Allan King, 1963 and 1964, Verne Claus 1965, George Paterson, 1966 and 1967; William Watts, 1968; Eric Smith 1969 and 1970.

The Ladies' Auxiliary was formed in 1951 and the first president was Mrs. George Homes. Meetings were held in the Grey Room of the Hotel Genosha.

In March 1961, the auxiliary received its charter from the Unit. Following Mrs. Homes as president have been Mrs. Jack Woodman, Mrs. Leslie Knight, Mrs. Harold Oley, Miss Elizabeth Caverhill, Mrs. William Watts, Mrs. Paul Smith and the presiding president, Mrs. Lawrence Hood.

The auxiliary helps in arranging functions and has raised close to $20,000 over the years to assist the Unit.

The official opening of the new clubhouse will begin with a dance on Friday night. On Saturday the Ontario Regiment Cadets will form a guard of honor for the arrival of the Dominion President E V Heesacker of Toronto who will cut the ribbon at 12 noon in the presence of civic dignitaries and the presidents of other units in Ontario.

At 2 p.m. a plaque dedicated to the memory of deceased members will be unveiled and the Unit will parade to the War Memorial to lay a wreath. A banquet on Saturday evening will be followed by entertainment and a dance.

On Sunday the clubhouse will be open for members and visiting guests. Chairman of events is Victor Marsh.

The main floor of the clubhouse is on an upper level. It has a seating capacity of 140, with a small stage, a ticket office, checkroom, washrooms and a large kitchen, fully equipped.

The building, of cement blocks, is air conditioned with a minimum of window space and bright with pastel walls and concealed lighting.

On the lower level are the executive offices, the men's and women's lounges and the main bar, serving both with the latest, automatic glass-washing equipment. The facilities, approved by the LCBO and the Board of Health are for the use of members of the Corps and guests accompanied by a member.

without a visit to the centre.

The day I visited him, he was at the Art Gallery modelling for housewives who were taking sketching classes. He keeps active and likes to help out around the centre.

A dream?

His fondest wish is to be able to have enough money to take a trip around the world and visit his many friends and relatives. Deep in his heart he realizes this may just be a dream.

For Mrs. Farrow and Mr. Aitkins and so many other senior citizens like them, the chance to be able to come to the drop-in centre to be able to talk to people their own age, to be able to get away from four bare walls is their biggest pleasure in life.

Both live within their means and they budget the little bit of money they do get. They are thankful for the help they receive from the government and other agencies and neither complains about the meagre income. To them, being with their friends is the biggest joy in their lives.

Both are especially lucky their families care so much for them that they are insured of being looked after.

But there are many more who don't have families to care for them and many more who due to illness cannot go to the Drop-In Centre for companionship.

They are part of the other generation gap.

Durham student tours Egypt, Israel

As a Canadian he finds better treatment than Americans on same trip

Victor Puhach, a Durham college student and the only Canadian on one recent tour of the Middle East, says he received better treatment than the Americans on the tour, because he was Canadian.

While the Americans were subjected to rigid inspections at border crossings and custom offices at airports, Vic showed his passport (which is noticeable right away because it is a different colour from the American passport) and was treated with extreme courtesy and efficiency throughout his trip.

"Europeans still foster a hatred for Americans which I feel stems from World War II," says Victor.

He spent only two days in Cairo, Egypt and left the country with a disappointed feeling. The entire tour came down with food poisoning during the stay in Egypt and many were convinced it was a plot, he says.

The Egyptians were openly hostile to tourists and questioned their motives for being there. A routine visit to the pyramids in the Sahara Desert nearly ended in Vic having his camera confiscated.

He wandered off from the main group and began shooting movie film of Arabian tanks and soldiers. He was immediately pounced on by several soldiers and had two rolls of film taken away from him.

Upon entering both Egypt and Isreal the tourists were told they were not allowed to take pictures of soldiers or defence equipment. Film was readily available in both countries, although the cost was twice as much in Isreal.

Victor says the security at the Cairo Airport created the worst conditions of the entire trip. People were herded onto the runway and while everyone was frisked for guns, only certain people were searched.

On all flights between Egypt and Isreal absolutely no hand luggage of any type was allowed on the plane. Women were not allowed to carry their purses, and cameras were put in the luggage compartment.

All flights between Egypt and Isreal had to stop at Nicosia, Cyprus, the neutral island in the Mediterranean. Victor met many American and Canadian journalists who were operating out of the neutral territory.

Soldiers were more visable in Israel but Victor said the defence equipment was more noticeable in Egypt. On the whole he enjoyed his stay in Israel more than Egypt.

"The Israelites are by far more friendly and they aren't out to cheat you when you buy things."

The cleanliness of the country and its friendly attitude to visitors impressed him the most. "Everywhere we went in Cairo there were beggars — old men, women and children. If you took a picture of the native people you had to pay them".

In Cairo protective walls were built in front of the doors of all buildings to prevent montar shells from entering the buildings.

"The people in the Middle East are crazy about the American dollar. They would trade us five of their dollars for one American dollar which they would eventually trade in the black market."

The tour spent six days in Israel in Tel Aviv and Bethlehem. During their stay they were within ear shot of combat. Many of the people on the tour refused to go on bus tours of Israel.

"Actually, to me the most dangerous part of the whole trip was night time in Cairo. It was impossible to walk the streets at night for fear of being attacked by ordinary citizens."

The tour was accompanied by soldiers while they were in Isreal and Egypt. If anyone attempted to take a picture where it was forbidden, soldiers would point their guns and the people would put down their cameras.

There were only two instances of actual viewing of battle grounds during the tour. They saw tanks that were blown up and rusting near the Dead Sea. They also saw the remains of the Boeing 747 which was blown-up on the runway in Cairo.

The tour, which was originally scheduled for the summer of 1969 had been postponed because of intense fighting in the Middle East.

Victor would like to return to Israel when he finishes his three year business administration course at Durham.

He thinks the media tend to blow out of proportion the amount of fighting that actually goes on between the two countries.

"It is really much more peaceful than we are lead to believe and we were treated with courtesy in most places," says Victor.

Ironically the only trouble Vic ran into on his tour was coming through he Canadian customs at the Toronto International Airport on his return home.

"I was the first person off the plane and the last one to leave the airport. They really searched me because I was the youngest on the flight. They seemed to think I was smuggling dope."

AFTER HOURS

Unusual music recitals at art gallery

By Paul Bennett, Director.

This Sunday afternoon, October 18, at 2:30 p.m., Ed Oscapella on piano and Karl Rohowski on flute, will be presenting a recital of music at the Gallery. This is in keeping with the Gallery's wish to present programmes in the arts, rather than to have the building known only as a centre of the visual arts.

Mr. Oscapella and Mr. Rohowski will present the following concert: 8 1. Mozart — Concerto for flute, harp and orchestra (3 movements); 2. Brahms — "Edward" Ballade; 3. Mozart — duet from "Original Compositions for the piano, four hands"; 4 Debussy — Arabesque No. 2, arranged for flute and piano.

There are going to be three recitals this Fall. On November 1, again at 2:30, Ross Cotton, baritone, is going to present a recital at the Gallery, and on Sunday, November 15, at 2:30 p.m., Peter Acker, of Toronto, will give a recital of classic guitar and lute music. Mr. Acker has just returned from a number of years study in Germany on these two instruments.

The Gallery welcomes the idea of live music within its walls. The combination of the arts assists in an appreciation of our general cultural heritage. For the next three weeks for example, the Gallery will be exhibiting Canadian Watercolours of the 19th Century, a superb exhibition prepared by the National Gallery of Canada.

In the small gallery will be the 70 year retrospective exhibition of Mrs. Andrew Glen, a local artist of note. To be able to wander and view these magnificent representational landscapes from our Canadian past, and at the same time listen to beautiful music played by live musicians, is a combination most worthy of viewing and hearing.

Gallery hours are Monday to Friday 12 - 5 p.m.; Evenings, 7 - 9 p.m.; Saturdays, 10 - 5 p.m.; Sunday, 12 - 5 p.m.

Bonnie Silver guest Beethoven concert

The Oshawa Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Jacob Groob will welcome Bonnie Silver as its guest artist to Oshawa October 25 in a concert at Eastdale Auditorium. The All Beethoven Concert will be the first concert of the OSO's 13th season in Oshawa.

Bonnie Silver was born in Toronto in 1951. She started studying the piano at an early age with her father, and is presently studying with Professor Pierre Souvairan, at the Faculty of Music, University of Toronto. From the age of six, she took all Piano Conservatory examinations, and received her ARCT at the age of 16. She consistently attained first class honours in both piano and theory, and was awarded three silver medals for the highest standings in Ontario. She is the recipient of three Frederick Harris Scholarships, and has continued her musical studies with the aid of scholarships, and bursaries from the Royal Conservatory of Music and the Faculty of Music, as well as a recent scholarship from the Women's Musical Club of Toronto.

Miss Silver will perform Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major. Jacob Groob is the assisting artist.

New Lamp Idea!

Swag lamps don't just stand there—they go where the action is.

9.99 TO 29.99

Lamps without legs? You bet! No legs to get in the way of dusting. No legs to accidentally tip over. No legs to take up floor or table space.

Where do they go? Into what used to be a dark corner—at each end of your couch—over your favorite reading chair or study area—over the bed for easy safe lighting—into your den or rec room for party-time atmosphere. Let your imagination run wild! There's a swag for every activity and every mood—from pure psychedelia to elegant classical. Swags are more than just lamps, they're a dramatic accent for every room of your home. No wonder the swag revolution is now in full swing!

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

Blunders, boo boos, and fluffs are all part of the game. In spite of the director's careful and sometimes exhaustive efforts, the human element creeps in to plague him till he has no other choice but to join in the temporary insanity that descends on the set. Just the other day when Cable Cast 8 was recording the start of a new series produced by the Oshawa Skeet Club, several of these fluffs occured

During a run through the center piece, a gun rack with six expensive rifles and shot guns in it fell down with a clatter, and slithering guns covered the floor

A few minutes later a microphone cord got tangled around the moderator's legs and as he reached for a gun to use on the display stand he tripped and fell to the floor caressing the tiles with his extremity. His fall didn't stop there. He dragged an ashtray off the desk and covered himself and everything else with a fine white ash

The next evening when a new show was being taped — Yoga and You — the camera man aimed his camera at the wrong angle and instead of getting the talent's face somehow he achieved the impossible of getting the talent's rear end to fill the screen

But these are minor clinkers. You should see when the big guys blow it just how disastrous it can get. If you have been watching the many live reports from Ottawa during this crisis you can start counting them. Some of them are real lulus. Take the announcer who says, "And now we take you to Parliament Hill to interview the Prime Minister." Quickly they switch the cameras and the on the spot reporter adds his comments, "The PM will be coming around that corner in a few seconds. "Millions of eyes peer intently into their TV screens and the camera does a close up of the doorway, the suspense is terrible when suddenly there is a movement and in a split second there appears not the PM but some janitor

Experiences like this are what directors get ulcers from. So the next time a boo boo creeps in have a good laugh but think of the poor guys who will get literally shot for committing that mistake In TV you can't cover them up if you are doing a live broadcast

Next Tuesday keep your eyes peeled for a 17 minute film on Oshawa's Don Jackson, winning at Prague and his act in the Ice Folies

Sure, your husband is great and you love your kids. But it is that time of year when "tired" seems to be the only word in your vocabulary. Don't be discouraged. It's an affliction which strikes each year about this time in near-epidemic proportions.

So "getting away from it all" is just not in the cards. What can you do to bounce back?

Here is how you can engineer a break in the routine and add a few bucks to the family budget at the same time.

Run a classified ad, offering for sale some of the valuable but seldom used items around the house. Golf clubs, furniture, appliances, bicycles, power tools, you name it. A classified ad will help you sell anything.

A lot of nice people will call in response to your ad. You will meet them when they come to look at the item or items you are offering for sale.

It's a great way to break the monotony and pick up some unexpected extra cash at the same time. Oh yes, the cost of the ad is very low, and it is easy to get it into the paper.

Generals get second tie

Last-minute pull-out

The Generals more than doubled the amount of shots that Peterboro had on Sunday night but still had to struggle back for a 4-4 tie.

The Generals outshot the Petes 14 to 4 in the first period but had to settle for a tie at one goal each. Early in the period Brian Shortreed had put the Petes ahead on a goal scored from a scramble in front of Gilles Gratton. The defense had backed right out in front.

Gary Mahon, who was the outstanding player on the ice for either team picked up a Laurie Gregan pass at his own blueline, stickhandled past the defense and fired a hard shot past a startled John Garrett to give the Gens a 1-all tie at the end of the first period.

Harris put the Petes ahead again in the second with a goal from behind the net which caught Gratton out of position. Oshawa kept pressing but they were unable to solve Garrett's wizardry until Lynch tipped in a Mahon shot at the 14-minute mark. The Generals were again the shot leaders in the second by 11 to 5.

In the third the Gens had a momentary letdown and gave up two bad goals in less than two minutes and it looked as if they were going to run and hide. Then Terry O'Reilly scored from Sullivan to cut the margin to one goal. This set the stage for one of the most exciting finishes seen around the Auditorium in quite some time. Coach Reigle pulled his goalie with 45 seconds remaining in the game and Gerry Methe slammed the puck home from in front of Garrett to give the home team the tie.

Reigle said after the game that he was pleased with the effort he got from his team and that they didn't quit after going down two goals.

Reigle gets, the fans confused the odd time when he sends Lynch up front and drops Simpson back to the point. He said this is to take advantage of Simpson's big shot.

The Generals will meet London Knights on Friday night and return home on Sunday for a return bout with the Ottawa 67's.

Basketball gets underway

Simcoe Hall Basketball got under way last weekend with exhibition games in all three categories.

In the Biddy League, the youngsters came up with two exciting games. In the first encounter, Maples defeated the Hurons by a score of 27 to 7 and in the second half of the twin-bill Bantings scored six points in the last two minutes to defeat Avenues 9 to 3. Joe DePhillips with 18 points and Ron Landry with six were the top guns for Maples in the opener and Mike Maitland had five points for the winning team in the second game.

The Minor League also had a pair of games with the Sunnyside team beating Bolahood's 51 to 37 and Firefighters defeated Legion No. 43 by a count of 44 to 29. Captain Mike Elliot was the top shooter of the day as he scored a total of 27 points in Sunnyside's win. Ted Rezulski was the best for the losers as he hooped 16. The Firefighters were paced by Ray Bartoziel with 16 points and Claude Damian had 15 for Legion in a losing cause.

In Major League action, Warriors knocked off the Knicks 57 to 53 and Royals beat Celtics by an overwhelming 63 - 37 score. N. Melnychuk and Dave Cutler paced the Warriors victory with 20 points each and Chuck Marlow had 14 for the losers. In the second game, The Royals received 38 points from the combination of Tom Eldridge and George Rezulski had 10 for the Celtics.

This weekend in Biddy, at 9 a.m. the Bantings meet the Hurons and at 9:45 Avenues play Maples. The Minor League gets underway at 10 a.m. with Legion No. 43 meeting Sunnyside and Firefighters playing Bolahoods. In the Major League, Celtics play the Knicks at 1 p.m. and the Royals meet the Warriors in the second game.

Crushmen win and lose

The Oshawa Crushmen overpowered the Cobourg Cougars Saturday at the Civic Auditorium by a score of 8 to 3. They completely dominated the game as Don Hudgin notched the hat-trick and Steve West had a goal and three assists. Larry Hopkins scored a pair and singles went to Rene Beauchamin and Luke Charobbeau. This was the opening game of the Lakeshore Jr B league and the Crushmen have a total of 30 games to play in their regular schedule.

According to Ralph Cook, the team manager, Sunday's game up in Peterborough against the Don-Byes was a real hard-fought contest all the way. Oshawa led 1-0 at the end of the first period but Peterborough scored three unanswered goals in the second. Oshawa fought back in the third and cut the Petes' margin to 4-3 but Peterboro scored into the empty net in the last few seconds to take the game 5 to 3. Scoring for Oshawa were Steve West, Jim Robson and Larry Hopkins.

Next home game for the Crushmen is this Saturday when the Trenton Golden Hawks invade the Auditorium at 7:15 pm.

Once again, a rap at the OHA officials.

The referees in this Jr A league must be among the most inconsistent in North American hockey. On Sunday, at the Auditorium we witnessed a fine example of this by a man who last year was one of the tops in the province, Tom Brown.

Maybe these guys have their own troubles before they hit the ice but they should be able to shake off anything personal and go out and call the game the way it should be called.

This has certainly not been the case in four of the home games the Generals have played here this year. It does not stand to reason that a ref will absolutely ignore a flagrant violation of the rules right in front of his eyes and then go to the other end of the ice to give the other team a real cheapie. We are not suggesting that all the calls go against the home team. These so-called officials are bad, for both clubs. On Sunday it was the same as in the two previous games against Toronto and Montreal.

It would seem to this writer that for the money the teams have to pay the officials they should get at least a solid effort and not just some guy who goes out and has a skate. The fans deserve something better for their money.

Of course, the clubs in the league sometimes have a great to do with the quality of the officiating. There are at least two good referees in the league who have the goods to be doing Jr A all the time but because they made some unpopular calls that were correct, the teams involved complained too loudly, these men were relegated to Jr B or to the Senior leagues.

We feel the OHA should have supervisors attending a good number of games and a system of fines or suspensions should be instituted for lack-lustre efforts on the part of referees or linesmen.

We have noticed two linesmen this year who were very weak on their skates. Skating should be a prime requisite for linesmen as they must be able to get off the dime to pick up the puck and to get into the corners where most fights break out. If a linesman is a bad skater he can slow down a game at a time where most hockey leagues are trying to speed the game up for the fans sake.

SENECAS WIN

The Senecas defeated the Mohawks two-straight to win their Oshawa Minor Lacrosse Type B championship last week. Members of the team are Stewart Tymchuk, Steven Dove, Jim Pearce, Don Giddings, Roger Gordon, Michael Butler, Peter Beesch, Kerry McComb, Kelly Brown, Charlie MacMillan, Chris Culp, Greg Kent, and Tyler Battams.

FLYING AGAIN

Friday January 22 is the day the Flying Fathers and the NHL Old-timers again invade the Civic Auditorium for a charity game with proceeds going to the Muscular Dystrophy Fund. Red Storey has promised to referee the game if he can be available at that time and Nancy Greene and Billy Taylor have been confirmed as guest celebrities.

NYKOLUK

Big Danny Nykoluk will hang up his familiar Argo number 60 after this season and the Argo front office has announced that number will be retired. Danny has been a perennial all-star throughout his 16 campaigns with the Double-Blue. Nykoluk was honored at last spring's Oshawa sports Celebrities Dinner.

STILL LEADING

Sandy Hawley, last year's Oshawa Athlete Of The Year continues to be the leading jockey in Canada. Hawley has had 881 mounts this year and booted home 251 winners. He has also had 146 mounts in the Place column and 233 third-place finishers.

NEW COACH

Pat Flannery has been named the man to replace Doug McKay as head coach of the Hamilton Red Wings of the OHA Jr A Major loop. McKay was fired last week by owner Nick Durbano for apparently having outside interests that interfered with his coaching duties. Flannery was a former member of the Toronto Maple Leafs organization and has coached Jr B hockey in North York, Markham and Etobicoke.

BIG JAM UP

The Toronto Argos defeated the Montreal Als on Sunday to force a three-way tie atop The Eastern Football Conference Standings. Toronto, Montreal and Hamilton each have 12 points in the tightest race in years.

EXHIBITION GAMES

This Saturday marks the unveiling of this year's editions of Durham's varsity basketball and hockey teams. The teams meet Sir Sandford Fleming College of Lindsay in a Hockey-basketball doubleheader. The basketball game will be played in the Donevan Collegiate gym at 4:00 pm and then the action shifts to North Oshawa Arena for the hockey game at 8:pm.

Arena opens

The new Harman Park Arena with twin skating rinks will be officially opened Wednesday, October 28 at 4 p.m.

Canada Games

Terence Kelly, chairman of the Committee that made the Oshawa bid for the 1973 Canada Games and Wendell Brewster of the recreation department will attend a meeting of the 14 Ontario losing cities.

After 111 pounds

Carolynn's trip beats LSD

By Elaine Hallam
staff reporter

Happiness for Carolynn MacLean is being able for the first time in her life to place a hand on her shoulder and actually feel she has collar bones, or going to the dentist knowing she'll be able to fit into the chair.

Carolynn has accomplished a life-long struggle to lose weight and has almost reached her goal of 150 pounds, almost one half of her original weight.

For the first time in her life she is happy she can say "I'm glad I was fat all my life". Over the last two years she has lost 111 pounds and is now convinced dieting is a very important part of her life which she will maintain from here on in.

Carolynn can't pinpoint one exact moment which caused her to finally change her eating habits. It could be the time she sat on a lawn chair on a public beach and fell through the chair, or it could be the summer time when in order to avoid embarassment on the beach she ran into the water and stayed there until everyone was gone, or the time she topped 300 on the scales.

All she knows is that absolutely nothing could ever make her give up dieting. The more she loses, the more she wants to lose.

Before she began to battle her weight problem Carolynn would cook two meals for herself and the family. She would eat before dinner and then sit down and eat with the family.

"My husband could never understand why I was gaining weight because to all outward appearances I was eating normally."

If she made a cake and it flopped, she wouldn't want to waste it so rather than throw it away she would eat it. Bread and potatoes were her downfall.

Now she hasn't had a potato for several months and when she does eat one she is surprised that she could not remember how it tasted.

Her weight loss has opened up the whole world of fashion to her. Slims, shorts, bathing suits and short skirts are now within her reach.

"Shopping used to be such a headache to me. I would have to pay $40 or $50 for a size 28½ dress that couldn't possibly look nice on me."

Now Carolynn looks for bargains in her clothes because she knows she won't be wearing them for long because she will be losing more weight. This summer she felt good in a one-piece bathing suit but next summer you will be able to recognize her on the beach in a hot pink or lime bikini.

Now the 5'9" lovely blonde feels she could go out and conquer the world. Suddenly Carolynn too can wear bathing suits, shorts and slims.

After being an undercover agent (under 294½ pounds) for so long, Carolynn MacLean began to think she should have the title role for "Mission Impossible.

Beats LSD

"It is so very hard to tell people my ecstatic feelings about my weight loss. For the first time in my life I feel life is worth living to the fullest. The trip I'm on would beat LSD any day."

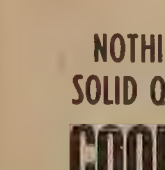
Carolynn has lost interest in the foods she used to gourge herself with. She cooks balanced nutritional meals for her family but no longer bakes her own bread and starchy casseroles.

She eats fish and poultry and lots of fresh vegetables. She used to smother vegetables in butter and until she began to diet never realized the true taste of pure vegetables.

"Over the past two years my willpower has developed to such an extent that I just will not allow myself to eat untouchables. I feel as if I could conquer the world now."

Carolynn says her husband must be sick of hearing about her dieting by now but says anyone who is slim could not imagine how great she feels so she talks her husband's ear off.

Do it all over



"I would like to get married all over again so my husband could carry me across the threshhold instead of vice versa."

Carolynn gives a lot of credit for her weight loss to TOPS, an organization for women designed to help them lose weight. She says they gave incentive and encouragement during her struggle.

"When I finally reached the magic weight loss of 100 pounds some of the girls were so happy

Olive Roberts has seen close to 800 films in last five months

Olive Roberts has seen close to 800 films in the last five months.

Miss Roberts is film librarian for the Ontario County Board of Education and since joining the staff in May has amalgamated the previous three film boards into one central library with well over 800 films

The film library services close to 200 schools in Ontario County, both public and separate, elementary and high school. All the schools are equipped with 16 mm film projectors and teachers can use any film in the library to supplement their lectures.

Miss Roberts spent the entire summer preparing a catalogue of the films available to the schools. Every subject taught in the schools can be supplemented with films, although social studies has the most films to draw from and the vocational studies seem to be lacking in film information.

All the films come with sound tracks and Miss Roberts says the more advanced films use a process called "open-ended sound". Instead of telling the viewers what they are seeing the camera zooms into the particular subject area and the child learns through discovery

All but smell

"Instead of telling the child about a cow, the camera simply zooms in on its ears, nose etc. and by the end of the film the child experiences everything about a cow except the smell."

The majority of the films are in color and the most popular length is around 11 minutes, thus allowing the teacher to ask questions and lecture on the subject.

"The purpose of educational films is to ask questions not to give answers," says Miss Roberts

A record is kept of all the films, showing how often they have been used and how many times they have been rejected because they are not available. The most popular films are the seasonal films dealing with the beginnings of each season.

"The two runaway winners so far are a film called "Autumn" and a film called "Vikings and Their Explorations", says Miss Roberts. "We have several copies of each but just cannot keep up with the demand."

Previews

Whenever a new film is considered for the library, a preview is arranged with consultants in the particular area and several teachers. They evaluate the film and suggest whether it should be purchased or not.

"Films can be very convincing but they are not always accurate," says Miss Roberts.

The longest film in the library is one called "The Lively Art of Picture Books" which is used for training teachers. It is over 2,000 feet long and runs for about 50 minutes. The average length of the films is 10 minutes.

Most are U.S.

Americans are the biggest maker and distributor of educational films but Miss Roberts feels Canadian film makers for me they even cried," says Mrs. MacLean

She exercises only occasionally and admits to being a lazy person. Developing her willpower to the extent that she talked herself into not wanting to eat is really her key to her success.

"I feel slim now, but my greatest wish is for someone to say to me that I have lost too much weight and actually am thin."

For the first time in her life her 11-year old son can put his arms around her waist. Her daughter is so proud and her husband is estatic. People stop her in the streets and tell her how great she looks.

The struggle is over for Carolynn and dieting has actually become a pleasure.

Sometimes she stops in the middle of something, puts her hands on her hips and when she feels them there, she spins around in delight and bursts into song "Yesterday and I'm not half the girl I used to be . . ."

the $8.89 brake reline is here!

Brakes seldom wear out evenly. When the front brakes are worn, there's usually plenty of safe mileage on the rear. That's why we think our 8.99 brake reline is big news. That's all it cost to reline the front, or rear set (drum type). You save, and you're safe.

But maybe you think it's a little risky trusting a "Discount Store" when it comes to car repairs. Maybe you think a high price means a better job. If you do, then maybe you're paying too much for car service.

We specialize in "Most Needed" car services. Our men are experts and we use only name brand parts. We can save you money, safely. Try us. We're open every night until 10.00 p.m. — and you don't need an appointment.

GM official pledges all-out fight against air-pollution

General Motors has pledged its research and engineering facilities to improved control systems or alternative forms of power so that the automobile will no longer be a significant source of air pollution.

The statement was made last week by E. J. Barbeau, executive vice-president, General Motors of Canada, in an address to the Nova Scotia Insurance Agents Association.

Mr. Barbeau also told the insurance men that General Motors is constantly researching and developing methods aimed at less need for repairs and quicker more effective repairs at lower cost when needed.

In their present state of development no other power sources can do as good a job as the internal combustion engine in providing all purpose transportation at low emission levels, Mr. Barbeau said.

"However, some appear promising as special purpose vehicles. The closest one to commercial application right now is the gas turbine, which is an extremely attractive power plant for high torque uses such as heavy trucks and large buses. GM turbines for heavy-duty vehicle application are scheduled for limited production about a year from now. However, it will be some years before turbine-powered truck fleets are commonplace."

Mr. Barbeau told the association that the output of carbon monoxide and unburned fuel emitted from automobiles has already passed its peak in the atmosphere and is declining steadily because of a series of exhaust control measures taken by the auto industry.

"The controls on an average 1971 model General Motors car eliminate four-fifths of the hydrocarbons and two-thirds of the carbon monoxide compared to uncontrolled cars," Mr. Barbeau said.

"If we went into the parking lot down the street and picked out an average uncontrolled car — 1962 model or earlier — and compared its emissions with a car with full control systems, we would find it would take five of the controlled cars to equal the hydrocarbon output of the uncontrolled model.

"At the levels expected from the next generation of control systems, now under development, it will take 20 new cars to equal the hydrocarbon output of the uncontrolled model."

Mr. Barbeau also said that although battery powered cars seem to have little potential as general purpose vehicles, General Motors engineers are exploring the possibility of using very small electric vehicles in specialized downtown situations. A breakthrough in fuel cell technology would make it possible to create electric energy chemically, within the vehicle.

On the subject of automotive repairs, Mr. Barbeau told the association that a current General Motors research program includes improved mechanical trouble diagnosis; improved dealer repair techniques and equipment, including collision repair; and improved design of current and future vehicles for serviceability, capability of diagnosis, and resistance to damage in normal use

"We are making a most intensive effort in this area to discover means of having less damage to our vehicles, particularly in minor accidents such as occur in parking manoeuvres," Mr. Barbeau said.

"Examples of what the program has already achieved are the new instrument clusters on current models which can be removed in sections from the face of the instrument panel making the replacement of bulbs and fuses a matter of minutes.

"As a further example, moulded door lower panels are topped by easily removable upper panels to provide access to the inside of the door."

Inexpensive maintenance and ease of serviceability have been stressed in GM's new small car the Vega, the executve vice president reported. Every Vega owner received a "do-it-yourself" service manual which explains how 49 service items can be performed in most cases with commonly used hand tools also make some good films but unfortunately not as many as the Americans.

"Some of the National Film Board films are excellent. Of course, our Canadian history and geography films come from Canadian film makers."

She feels Canadians are especially good at making historical and nature films.

The Department of Education is gradually dissolving its provincial library because it is felt schools can be serviced better on a local level. As a result the department's library is being divided among the counties in Ontario.

This process will take three years and the department has entered into a deal with the film libraries to offer financial assistance for the three year period.

Miss Roberts, has always been associated with the film industry and sees a great future ahead for educational films. Still, she feels strongly the film will never be a substitute for the teacher.

For Mrs. Nash every case is an emergency

When Doris Nash began social work with the Women's Welfare League in 1955 she didn't realize so many people in Oshawa needed help. Now, 15 years later, the need has increased so much that in the first eight months of this year there has been a 63 per cent increase in welfare assistance over 1969.

Mrs. Nash has counselled over 427 families and individuals so far this year, supplying groceries, rent money, meal tickets and occasionally a shoulder to lean on Anyone ineligible for welfare from the city may come to Simcoe House for help and there is no waiting. Mrs. Nash drops what she is doing at the moment and tends to the immediate emergency.

"And every case is an emergency," she said "The people just would not come here if it weren't."

Mrs. Nash said many people are actually embarrassed to ask for help, because until the moment they walk into her office they have never been in the position that they have had to ask for help.

More and more she is dealing with young men who just cannot find work and are forced to seek help, for the first time in their lives.

Unwed mothers

Perhaps the most heart-breaking part of Mrs. Nash's work involves dealing with unwed mothers. "I will never be able to become accustomed to the thought of a 15-year-old being pregnant. These children haven't even begun to live themselves, haven't even matured enough to realize all the implications of motherhood," she said.

Many of the young girls she sees receive absolutely no support from their parents. Many have been turned out of their home and must seek mother's aid and welfare from the city. Often this money does not last until the end of the month and they have to come to Mrs. Nash to ask for a little money to buy milk for the baby.

So far this year she has seen 20 unwed mothers ranging in age from 15 to 30. She has noticed that more and more of the girls are choosing to keep their children.

"This time in a young girl's life is especially trying and one of the most difficult but I just can't help but admire them for bouncing back. Many of them learn to adjust beautifully," she said.

Whenever these girls drop by to chat or to show her their babies she knows they have begun to adjust and Mrs. Nash finds this one of the most rewarding aspects of her work.

Few young

Contrary to popular opinion very few young people apply for welfare assistance from the League.

One exception is a 17-year-old boy who was asked to leave home by his father because he wanted to continue his education. He applied for welfare from the city but didn't have enough money to pay for his grade 13 text books. The Welfare League bought the books and the boy is now planning to enter medical school next year.

One of the most difficult aspects of her job is trying to educate the public into realizing that people who receive welfare are not "sponging off the public".

"If these people could meet face to face with some of the pitiful cases they just couldn't turn their back on them," said Mrs. Nash.

No moralizing

Very seldom does Mrs. Nash ask why people are destitute. The reasons for their condition are of little importance to her. She only tries to alleviate the immediate problem by offering assistance.

"I'm not going to stop and moralize when many of these people have no food or no roof over their head," she says.

Mrs. Nash finds that much of her work is based on using common sense and her intense desire to help people. She realizes she has to maintain an aloofness when dealing with some cases because she feels she can become too involved with some people.

"There is so very much I wish I could do to help these people. But I just cannot solve all of their problems. If I can just lift their heavy load for the moment, I am satisfied," she says.

She calls her 15 years at the Women's Welfare League as "rich rewarding years".

And she "just would not trade my job for anything."

Libraries

Persons attending night school courses at Eastdale Collegiate, Dunbarton High School and Port Perry High School will be able to make use of the school libraries. The public is also invited to use the libraries. This is being done on an experimental basis by the school board to determine the need by the public.

Maureen Paxton says:

We could buy back Canada if we wanted to Geography has made us neighbors. History has made us friends, economics has made us partners, and necessity has made us allies.

John F. Kennedy

This quotation made by the late president of the United States, John F. Kennedy to the Canadian Parliament, is as relevent today as in 1961.

The two countries share a common border of nearly 4,000 miles, not including the 1,500 mile Alaskan border. Approximately two-thirds of all Canadians live within 100 miles of this border. As a consequence there are 35,000,000 visits in each direction per year. The 1960 U.S. census reported over 3,000,000 Canadians living in the United States, and the Canadian census in 1961 reported nearly 300,000 U.S. citizens residing in Canada. These facts indicate a North-South relationship in North America which dominates the East-West continental linkages. For example, Toronto audiences watch Buffalo television and listen to U.S. radio. Similarly Vancouver tunes into Seattle and Winnipeg viewers watch Pembina, North Dakota.

Recently the federal government has required privately-owned Canadian TV stations to air a certain amount of "Canadian content" programs, due to the intense competition which U.S. channels give to the Canadian outlets.

Virtually all U.S. motion pictures are shown in Canada. U.S. books, newspapers and magazines flood the Canadian market. Over 50 per cent of all the general magazine advertising revenue goes to two published-in-Canada editions of U.S. magazines. It appears that Canadians prefer to read U.S. content rather than local material. Canada and the U.S. are each others own best customer. The United States takes 60 per cent of Canada's exports, supplies 80 per cent of Canada's imports.

Economically, the United States has already invested over $24 billion in Canada. The net result is that now over 60 per cent of all Canadian manufacturing industries if U.S.-owned.

Some areas such as the automobile and rubber industries are more than 90 per cent U.S. controlled; more than 70 per cent of the chemical, oil and natural gas and electrical industries.

It has taken over four decades for U.S. investments to exceed the $24 billion. Most of all this foreign ownership is in the form of direct investments, for example equities which involve ownership rather than bonds which can be paid back. Offsetting this U.S. investment is an estimated $20 billion deposit in Canadian bank savings accounts in 1970.

It would appear that if Canadians today wished to "buy back" their economy, they have the resources with which to do so.

The fact that Canadians have not chosen to invest directly in their own economy indicated a lack of confidence and timidity.

Less than 10 per cent of all Canadian's ever invest in any form of common stocks whether Canadian or foreign. However, virtually all Canadians have a savings account, and pay premiums on the world's largest per capita life insurance.

Canadians seem to have chosen a secure course in risk-free investment which created room for U.S. investment in Canadian resources.

Without all of this direct investment in Canada we would not have had the rapid development of our resources, the provision of jobs, or a raised standard of living.

No country stands alone, isolated and self sufficient and able to prosper without benefit of trade with other nations.

Trade is the cement that binds nations together in an ever shrinking world. It produced interchange of ideas as well as of goods, and it can help increase mutual understanding and respect.

Board not accountable to regional council : Lovell

In its brief to the regional government hearings, the Ontario County Board of Education is taking "strong exception" to the recommendation that all capital expenditures by the board be first approved by Regional Council.

Board chairman Stan Lovell and Assistant Director of Education Ken Munroe appeared before regional government consultant Donald Paterson, Friday, to appeal this recommendation.

Mr. Lovell said the very fact that the board of education is an elected body and is responsible to the electorate would be the main reason it could be considered a responsible group.

"There is no more reason for the Board to be accountable to the Regional Council than for the Regional Council to be accountable to the Board," the brief contends.

Mr. Lovell expressed the fear that the Regional Council would be responsible for determining total capital expenditures and that it would satisfy its own needs first, leaving the left overs to the education authority.

"Why add one more step to an already cumbersome system of bureaucracy?," asked Mr. Lovell. He told Mr. Paterson that the Department of Education controlled most of the decision making aspects of the board and that to be responsible to the Regional Council would be more confusing.

The Board also questioned enrolment projections made by the third Discussion Paper, of the regional government study, from which financial needs are calculated. It shows a gradual flattening out of the growth curve based upon the fall in birth rate for the province.

"We are convinced the provincial birth rate does not apply to our area immediately adjacent to Metropolitan Toronto, into which so many young families are moving and buying homes or renting apartments."

Mr. Paterson expressed pleasure that the board supported the suggestion of setting up a Liaison Committee and added there be equal representation from both bodies on the committee.

VOICE and STRING

On Friday Oct. 23 8 Edward Philip Oscapilla presents a vocal and string program at the McLaughlin Library Auditorium. Mrs. ELSIE DRYGALA will sing excerpts from MOZART'S Marriage of Figaro as well as aries from Madame Butterfly and La Boheme by Puccini. Her accompanist is Marie Taylor.

Parking laws

The public works department, traffic division, is considering changes to general parking bylaws that would outlaw on-street parking for more than three hours.

Chamber backs city's position

The Oshawa Chamber of Commerce added strength to the city brief Friday when it presented its official position on regional government.

While the Chamber supported the Oshawa brief it differed on two points. It recommended Rama and Mara be excluded from the Oshawa Region as well as the Newcastle-Clarke area.

The reasons are basically the same for the two areas. The Chamber brief recommends that financial protection be given to these taxpayers through grants from the region until some date is fixed in the future.

This step, the brief says, would insure the taxpayers of the two areas would not be paying for services they would not receive and that Oshawa taxpayers would also not pay for services other areas might benefit from.

"It appears a foregone conclusion that Rama and Mara will eventually be in a region centred possibly on Orillia."

Representing the 500 member Chamber of Commerce were Doug Bullied, John Swan and Bill Selby, who said they strongly support the "core city aspect which should basically include the City of Oshawa and the Town of Whitby as the major city centre."

Included in the brief was support for Oshawa's position on representation by population, amalgamation with Whitby, and equal cost sharing by all municipalities.

The brief supports a two year term for elected positions. "We consider a three year term would be a distinct detriment and would tend to discourage business people from serving."

SHORTS

SUPPORT

Oshawa-Whitby MP Ed Broadbent now has five New Democratic Party members of Parliament behind him in his bid for the leadership of the federal NDP party. Mosse Jaw MP J.L. Skoberg is the latest to jump on the Broadbent bandwagon.

Voting list

Oshawa residents can find out if they are eligible for the December 5 municipal elections by checking voter's lists at post offices, and fire halls in Oshawa. Deputy Clerk Cec Lundy says 47,158 of Oshawa's 85,000 people are eligible for the December vote.

Camp X

The city is purchasing part of Camp X within the city limits. The property which lies partly in Whitby and partly in Oshawa is owned by the federal government. The parks and property committee has recommended the mineral rights be left in federal hands

Muriel is involved

Muriel Morris, a section head for Area 2 of the Oshawa-Whitby United Appeal residential campaign, has a particular interest in the agencies having a medical involvement. Her husband is Dr. M. L. Morris and she is a registered nurse.

At one time she had to spend a long period of time in hospital convalescing from TB and she's convinced of the continuing value of medical research in this field as well as Multiple Sclerosis, Arthritis and Rheumatism and Mental Retardation, all of them supported by the Appeal.

Mrs. Morris has been a member of the Oshawa General Auxiliary for many years, and while her children, now grown, were in school, she was active in Home and School. Her hobbies are collecting antiques and refinishing furniture and she often works in her husband's office in the afternoon.

But Mrs. Morris found time for the United Appeal too. She willingly took on the task of recruiting volunteers and heading up the residential campaign in her section — a big job since this is the first year a door-to-door canvas has been held.

Maybe you can't devote the hours to volunteer work that Mrs. Morris gives, but you can make your dollars, quarters nickels and dimes work instead. Give generously!

TO ALL WELFARE MINISTERS

This Week welfare story coast to coast

Remember a This Week story in September about two Oshawa youths who travelled from here to the West coast at the taxpayer's (through welfare agents) expense?

A reader sent a copy to the Hon. John Munro, Minister of National Health and Welfare.

Here's the minister's reaction, through Ian C. Inglish, his chief secretary:

"The Minister has asked me to acknowledge your recent letter calling his attention to an article in the September 2nd edition of "This Week" entitled "A Novel Way to 'See Canada First.".

"As you probably know, the welfare agencies which were duped by these irresponsible youths, are administered at the local government level. These municipalties, which operate under provincial statue, derive the major portion of their funds from the provincial government which in turn bills the federal government, specifically our own department, for half the cost under the Canada Assistance Plan. My comments in this connection are merely intended to clarify the federal government's position in respect to the disbursement of social assistance. It is involved in the cost, but not the administration aspect. We both know, of course, that regardless of the jurisdiction involved, the taxpayer must ultimately foot the bill for this scandalous spending spree.

"The role of the welfare officer, as you can imagine, is an extremely difficult one, and he is open to criticism whatever action he takes. On the other hand, most welfare officers are experienced in separating the genuine welfare case from the phony, however, when people provide false documentary evidence in support of their requests for assistance, it puts the welfare officer at a decided disadvantage.

"While it is not within his jurisdiction to intervene directly in this matter, Mr. Munro has asked that the article in question be brought to the personal attention of the Ministers of Welfare of the provinces concerned in this "escapade" for whatever future course of action they may deem appropriate. Initiation of legal proceedings would, of course, be a matter for their decision.

Thank you for bringing this news item to the Minister's attention.

Halloween is coming this Saturday night and witches, ghosts and goblins will be on the scene. This little field mouse, Jenny Huron, has already been into the pumpkin patch and picked out her choice.

THE WAR MEASURES ACT - do you buy it?

By Peter Brouwer
editor

A month ago I would have laughed if you had told me I'd sit at the kitchen table one Monday in October, staring at my typewriter, and really worried about all things, my country and your country.

Only a few weeks ago you and I concerned ourselves with country only to the point of wondering how our member of parliament was representing his constituents, what trip our Prime Minister was off on next time 'round and from where he had just returned, and perhaps how Mitchell Sharp was going to handle this China thing. Inflation and unemployment, well, we had pretty well got used to both by the middle of September

We were more worried about some of the things happening closer to home. Like the big strike at General Motors, and how long it was going to last, and how it was going to affect all of us in the end, and whether — in our case — our little newspaper would be able to weather the storm

A lot of that seems rather insignificant this Monday night. Our perspective has changed.

Up until a few days ago we sat glued to our radios, we wouldn't drive the car without being tuned in to a radio station, because it gets the news first And we sat glued to our tv sets. We watched in hor-

Apologize or resign, he says

Open letter to Ed Broadbent, MP Oshawa-Whitby

Dear Sir:

I am writing this letter to express my profound disappointment with your vote in Parliament against the invoking of the War Measures Act. I am not motivated by fear that your vote and that of most of the other members of your party will give aid and comfort to the F.L.Q. since the significance of such comfort is probably in direct proportion to the significance of your dissenting votes.

What does concern me is the matter of representation. Your leader, Tommy Douglas, was quoted in the press as saying that not all Canadians agreed with the government's move and that those dissenting should be represented in the vote in the House You apparently concur in that opinion.

I am not an N.D.P. supporter but I have, till now, had a great deal of respect for Mr. Douglas He is a fighter, an able debater, and one of the best informed of our M.P.'s on the rights and duties of Parliament, particularly those of the Opposition Benches. He has in this instance, however, allowed his anger at the government's bypassing of Parliament to blind him to an obligation which is even more basic That is the obligation of a member of parliament to represent in the House the interests and the wishes of the people in his riding. You have apparently suffered from the same blindness

Note your title, Mr. Broadbent. It reads "Member of Parliament for Oshawa-Whitby". It does not read "M.P. for Allan Borovoy and the Civil Liberties Association." it does not read "M.P. for vocal minorities staging protests in Nathan Phillips Square".

MP and the War Measures Act

Edward Broadbent, MP, will explain his stand on the War Measures Act in an interview on Channel 8, Cable TV, this Friday at 5.30. He will be guest on the This Week Show with Peter Brouwer, editor of this newspaper.

SHORTS

Tour

The Oshawa and District Historical Society will conduct a bus tour to the Peterborough Centennial Museum October 31. The buses will leave Oshawa city hall at 1:15 p.m. Tickets cost $2.50 for the trip and are available by calling 725-7414.

Symphony

The Oshawa Symphony Association announces the formation of the Oshawa Symphonic Wind Ensemble, a planned 45-piece concert band to give local instrumentalists another outlet for their talents. Anyone interested in joining may call 728-1285 for further information.

St. John Ambulance

St. John Ambulance is holding a first aid course beginning Thursday evening, October 29. The course is eight weeks long and interested parties should phone Steve Wotton at 668-4666. More than 500 people in Oshawa have been trained since January and more than 100 others are under instruction now.

Speech

The Hon. Charles MacNaughton, treasurer of Ontario and minister of economics will address the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce, November 18, on the provincial government plan "Design for Development of the Toronto Centred Region".

Boy Scouts

The annual meeting of the Boy Scouts of Canada will be held at Camp sAmac on October 29 at 8 p.m. The meeting is for the Oshawa Council of Scouts and an evening of elections is scheduled.

Endorse Act

A resolution extending a vote of confidence to the prime minister on his move to institute the War Measures Act was approved by Ontario County Council last week. The vote was 35 to 7 in favor of the resolution.

Bridge

The Oshawa District Bridge Tournament will be held at McLaughlin Collegiate October 30 to November 1. Players from all over Ontario are invited to take part in the tournament. This is the sixth annual event and further information can be obtained by phoning Roy Morris at 728-8685.

Mall

The official opening of the enclosed mall at the Oshawa Shopping Centre will take place November 19. Construction is slightly ahead of schedule. No date has been set for the opening of the Bell Tower.

Snip go the scissors and Oshawa's new Canadian Corps headquarters is officially open.

Canadian Corps opens new clubhouse

By Jo Aldwinckle

Solemnity and merriment were partners at the three-day ceremonies organized by Oshawa Unit 42, Canadian Corps, to mark the opening of the new clubhouse on Athol Street East.

A dance and get-together was held Friday night to welcome out-of-town guests.

In the bright sunshine of Saturday morning, the old colors of the three services, Army, Navy, Air Force, plus the Canadian Corps flag and the Union Jack were paraded. The Ontario Regiment Cadets formed the guard of honor and Bandmaster Lieut. William Askew conducted the band. Lieut. Newell, Ontario Regiment, Dominion President Canadian Corps E.V. Heesaker and President Unit 42 Eric Smith took the salute in the presence of civic dignitaries and invited guests.

President E.V. Heesaker cut the royal blue ribbon across the open doorway.

Following lunch a large, framed honor roll bearing the names of deceased members, was unveiled and the Corps members and guests paraded to the war memorial where a short service of remembrance, led by the padre Capt. Douglas Wilson, Salvation Army, and the laying of a wreath took place.

Head table guests at the dinner were introduced by the chairman Victor Marsh: Alderman Alice Reardon representing the mayor; Clifford Pilkey MPP and Mrs. Pilkey; Edward Broadbent MP; Dominion President E.V. Heesaker and Mrs. Shirley Wood Heesaker, provincial secretary; President Eric Smith Unit 42 and Mrs. Smith; Provincial President Benton B. Ross; Women's Auxiliary President Unit 42, Mrs. Ina Hood and Larry Hood; Miss Christine Marsh. All the official guests expressed congratulations and good wishes.

Also attending were Canadian Corps officers from Niagara Falls, Thorold, London, St. Catharines, Hamilton and Toronto; the Canadian Women's Army Corps and the Women's Division RCAF; the president of the Apsley Branch Royal Canadian Legion and Oshawa representatives of Branch 43; RCAFA Wing 420; General Sikorski Polish Veterans; Oshawa Naval Veterans and the United Council of veterans' Associations.

President Eric Smith presented a silver compact to Mrs. Shirley Wood Heesaker, honoring her 25 years in the Women's Auxiliary and also presented a plaque to every past president.

A variety show, produced by Fred Bryant, opened with the Slovak Tatra Dancers, then Laurie Connolly, accompanied at the piano by Bob Ogden in a selection of favorite ballads, followed by Vera Vanderwalker and her electric guitar.

The highlight was the do-it-yourself fashion show, commentated by Ilene Watts and introducing the Bathmat Model, the Colander Model, Miss Lampshade, Miss Soap Opera and an original bridal party.

The courageous models were Claire Mirowski, Barbara Hawkshaw, Beryl Wilson, Hazel Welsh, Betty Carroll, Gladys Carter, Isobel Anderson, Bessie Homes, Marian Bell, Flo Williamson, May Lemon, Stella Newsome and Ilene Watts.

Dancing rounded out the evening and Sunday was Open House to speed the parting guests.

Following his congratulations to Unit 42 Canadian Corps and remembrance of past members and bygone days, the chief speaker, Dominion President E.V. Heesaker, spoke seriously about the violent happenings in Quebec. He stated that the Dominion Command had forwarded a telegram to the Prime Minister upholding his actions in invoking the War Measures act.

"We learned very quickly a week ago, that Canadian Democracy is illprepared to defend itself against internal enemies. Canada has been the most under-protected country in the world, when it comes to subversion and revolutionary movements. The FLQ are not the only advocates of 'revolution' in Canada. There are other elements committed to the violent overthrow of our democracy.

"At present our country is a sanctuary for almost any revolutionary or subversive person who wishes to come here, including university professors and students.

"In the last 20 years more than one revolution started and was successful with only a handful of believers. If we ignore the warnings and laugh at the threats of subversion then what has been a tragedy for Quebec could become a disaster for Canada.

"Had the government caved in to the demands of the FLQ what would our position have been in the eyes of all other democratic countries in the world?

"I am not here, today, to panic anyone, but only we, as Veterans realize that peace and democracy are not bought cheaply."

President Heesaker concluded by extending the condolences of the Canadian Corps Association to Madame Laporte and her family

It does not read "M.P. for the F.L.Q.". Your obligation is to represent the feelings of the majority in this riding, the people who elected you. You have your mandate from them, not from your party. When a conflict arises between their aims and your party's aims, their aims must be paramount.

It may well be true that this is a labour riding, leaning to the left in matters of social welfare. That was the mandate suggested by your election. If you think, however, that the labour movement is anything but far right in matters of law and order and patriotism then you have missed the lesson of the "hard-hat protest" in the States. My point, in sum, is that the vast majority of your constituents, while abhoring the necessity of invoking the War Measures Act, support the government in its action. Their support should have been registered by you with an affirmative vote in Parliament. In voting against the government you have failed in your primary obligation as a member. This leaves you with a problem for your conscience.

If you sincerely believed you were voicing the opinion of the majority of your constituents then you are guilty of misreading their wishes, of "being out of touch" on an issue of very basic importance. If you are sincere as the representative of this riding, then you must set the record straight. In that very House where you exposed this constituency to shame, you must publicly register the true sentiments of those who elected you. The next election will tell if your constituents feel you are sufficiently "out of touch" to warrant your removal.

I hope misreading is the extent of your political sin. If, however, you have known your riding's true feelings and have chosen to deliberately misrepresent them for the sake of party unity, or for some other cause, then you have betrayed our trust in you and you have violated your mandate. You will have indicated publicly that the wishes of your electorate rank a poor second to your personal motives in determining your official position. If this is in fact the case, Mr. Broadbent, then you should resign, for a man who feels he cannot honestly represent this riding's views cannot honestly occupy its place in Parliament.

Explain your stand to your riding, Mr. Broadbent, and then apologize or resign as the nature of your failing indicates!

Whitby rejects merger plan

Whitby Town Council revealed the contents of its carefully guarded OAPADS brief last week and while it introduced a few new ideas for the region, it renounced amalgamation with Oshawa as expected.

"The Council of the Town of Whitby rejects absolutely the possibility of any consolidation of the Town and the City (Oshawa) in a single unit of government."

For every argument in favor of the merger presented by Oshawa, Whitby's brief had a counter-answer.

The brief stated that Whitby could not possibly endorse a proposal to centralize the responsibility of government in the hands of a single local Council over an area which will be more than seven times as large as the present city.

Whitby presented statistics that showed Oshawa's growth rate was maintained at four per cent over the last 20 years. Its brief pointed out that the growth rate in the rest of the area under study, excluding Oshawa "has been substantially higher than that of the City".

"It cannot therefore be contended that the remainder of the urban municipalities need a Central City concept to stimulate growth."

The brief pointed out that Oshawa taxes for municipal services have increased by 58.7 per cent in the last five years. During the same period the rate of increase in Whitby was 44.8 per cent.

It added that the town's per capita debt would jump from $66 to $119 under amalgamation. Whitby's total debt is $1,585,000 compared to Oshawa's debt of $11,400,000 or $134 per capita.

Reject "domination"

"We reject the annexing of Whitby to Oshawa to create a dominant lower tier, cultural and economic nucleus in the Region because we reject the concept of domination. We believe the core of the Region, and the stimulus for the Region will be provided by the urban municipalities acting in concert."

On the matter of access to governing bodies Whitby supported preservation of maximum opportunity for access of residents to the elected representatives to prevent an increase in the level of frustration and inconvenience.

"Our analysis of the City's proposal contains not one item in favour of annexation by the City."

The brief suggested the construction of a north-south freeway in the non-urban area between Whitby and Oshawa thus creating a buffer area and a separation between the two lower tiered municipalities.

While the Whitby brief supported the concept of Regional government for such reasons as restraining outward growth of Metropolitan Toronto in defence of all the people of Ontario it rejected the concept of an "enlarged" City of Oshawa as a single lower tiered municipality as contrary to the concept and objectives of Regional government.

Rep by pop?

Whitby proposed that Oshawa be given 11 seats on the Regional Council of 30, considerably less than Oshawa asked for. Whitby would retain 3 of the 30 seats.

The brief also expressed concern for present municipal staff asking for a guarantee to all permanent employees during the period of transition and for at least the first year of operation of the new Regional Government.

"As a cornerstone in the establishment of an identity for the region, and an incentive for development we recommend the establishment of a university in our region."

Adding that transportation has always been the dominant feature in the urbanization of Ontario County, the brief suggests Faculty of Transportation be established, the first for Canada.

The Whitby brief even offered a recommendation for a name for the new regional area. Their proposal is that the area be called the "McLaughlin Region".

The brief was accompanied by three pages of signatures of local residents and organizations endorsing the concepts in the brief.

Mayor to Chamber

Can we afford three downtowns

Mayor Bruce Mackey is taking advantage of all possible opportunities to plug Oshawa's position on regional government before he finishes his term as mayor of Oshawa.

Speaking to the Chamber of Commerce last week, he reiterated the need for a strong central city in the form of a lower-tiered municipality in the Oshawa region. This central city, of course, would be the result of Oshawa's proposed merger with Whitby.

"Can we, I ask, afford the luxury of developing two or even three downtowns, each of which is within four miles of any other?"

He stressed the city's position that a single central municipality will be better able to promote the diversified cultural facilities which will be needed by the expected population concentration.

Mayor Mackey told Chamber members that a central city would be attractive to private development, commercial or industrial. Oshawa has many advantages such as proximity to a large marketing area, an abundant labor force, and "the ability of the local government to react quickly to their servicing needs".

He said private development would not be attracted to an area where there was a possibility of political conflict arising as the result of political boundaries.

Mayor Mackey also stressed several issues which Oshawa Council feels are unfair to Oshawa that are presented in Discussion Paper Three of the OAPADS study

He expressed concern that Oshawa will be asked to contribute an unreasonable amount toward the cost of regional services in proportion to the amount of these monies which will actually be spent in the City of Oshawa.

"We are deeply concerned with the treatment accorded the principle of representation by population in Discussion Paper 3", says Mayor Mackey

Oshawa, with 46 per cent of the regional population, is designated, only 36 per cent of the Regional Council representatives. The mayor charged that this "strikes at the very marrow of the most basic principle of our democratic society".

Whitby - "a state of mind"

A Whitby resident determined to oppose what he calls a "threat of takeover of Whitby by Oshawa" presented a brief to the OAPADS Study said the community must use every device of publicity, protest and demonstration available to fight the takeover.

Leslie McFarlane defended the identity of a small town vehemently to the hearing said small communities "have always constituted the real heart of Canada".

He called Whitby "a state of mind" saying that thousands of children born there, raised in Whitby and educated there have gone out into the world and looked back with affection to their home town. "How could we explain to them if there is no more Whitby?" he asked

Mr. McFarlane said he had adopted Whitby as his home town and was willing to fight for the preservation of its identity and urged other citizens to jump on the bandwagon and not take the threat of a takeover passively.

While admitting his brief was based on sentimentality he called his affection for Whitby "a personal identification with a special place in the world"

Change your name if you want to be first

If anyone is thinking of running for any elected position in the forthcoming municipal elections it might be worthwhile applying for a change in name to ensure winning the election.

According to City Clerk Roy Barrand it is illegal to put the names on the ballot any other way than in alphabetical order. It was suggested to him that perhaps having your name first on the ballot greatly enhanced the chance of being elected.

"It may possibly affect a person's chances of winning and if I were voting it might affect my vote." says Mr. Barrand.

So if your name isn't Aaron, Abel Arron, then you had better expect the position of your name on the ballot to have some effect on how you fare during the next election And pity the fellow named Zenon Zebrenski!

For those thinking of running as city representatives there are 12 seats available on council as aldermen. This position brings an annual renumeration of $2,000 plus an extra $200 if an alderman is elected chairman of a standing committee

There are four positions available for Board of Control and it carries an annual salary of $4,-500. The mayor's seat is wide open now with absolutely no declared candidates and it pays $10,000 a year.

The Public Utilities Commission has a total of four elected seats available. The mayor makes up the fifth member of the PUC. Members generally meet monthly and receive an annual fee of $500. The chairman, who is elected by the other commissioners receives an extra $1,000

Twenty seats are up for grabs on the Ontario County Board of Education committee. All the seats are elected but the chairman who is also elected is chosen by the trustees. Each trustee receives $3,000 annually. Trustees run within their own municipality during the election.

The Ontario County Separate School Board has 14 seats available in the election. The seats are proportionate to the assessment and last election there were two from Whitby, two from Ajax and Pickering, one from the northern area of Uxbridge, Brechin and nine from Oshawa. Each trustee receives $1,800

War measures of a different kind

A few months ago This Week carried a tongue-in-cheek story of a mock battle between the "people of the land of Osh" and "the Whitites." There were lookout posts at strategic points in the city, and anti-aircraft artillery had been placed on the roof of the Rundle Tower. Submarine pens were under construction simultaneously in Oshawa and Whitby harbors and marshes. Some readers commented a "very funny."

This week we could probably follow up with a mock telephone conversation on the hot line between Mayor Bruce Roosevelt and Mayor Desmond Stalin, but somehow it would be a joke in poor taste. Because today there is a deadly battle going on for power between Oshawa and Whitby and the weapons in this instance are the artillery of the written word, carefully loaded by the civil service gunners, meticulously aimed by the "expert consultants" and fired on command of the field marshals of the respective municipalities.

As in all wars, there are casualties. There are allies and fifth columnists and neutrals.

Let's take the casualties and potential casualties first. The casualties are the overall extra costs to the taxpayer this war is taking. It goes without saying that the duplication of services as presently exists — look at fire and police protection, planning, engineering, recreation, social services, industrial development — is duping all the people of Oshawa and Whitby.

Take the fifth columnists. They are retained to be unbiased in this instance and they are to recommend what is best for the community at large. Not only have they been retained to take a detached view in their recommendations, but it is very important that the consultants are seen to be taking a detached view. In our opinion they have failed in this respect. Anyone who has followed closely the hearings so far of the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study discussion papers will have recognized that there have been positions of bias taken.

Until now, in the briefs of Oshawa origin, it would appear there has been a concurrence with the outline indicated by the provincial authorities in their "Design for Development of the Toronto Region." In this master plan, Queen's Park sees Hamilton and Oshawa as two strong terminal cities for the whole area in between. No doubt, if Whitby was the larger centre of the two, it would have been chosen the terminal city, rather than Oshawa, in which case it would have no doubt proposed a merger with Oshawa.

Accordingly, Oshawa is proposing amalgamation, so Whitby too can enjoy the benefits this "terminal city" status will bring. But considering the abuse and rhetoric spewed forth by Whitby, it would appear the town's officials do not understand the advantages of Oshawa's plan. (In this connection, we are willing to predict that unless regional government becomes a fact in the next 18 months, or Whitby manages to snare an industry about half the size of GM, the municipality will either be in serious financial straits, or the taxpayers will face an increase of enormous proportions. We would suggest to Whitby, before you refuse Oshawa's offer of amalgamation out of hand, you would do well to consider the benefits of a much broader tax base to get yourselves out of hoc.

During the presentation of its brief, Whitby with its "own anthem", its own flag and its flag waving, showed that exact kind of damn-the-consequences patriotism that we cannot afford and that is futile and useless in the year 1970.

And as for Whitby's plan of building a North-South expressway somewhere between Oshawa and the County Town, this proposal is not new. Before long we will need a major artery to bring workers and goods to and from the lakeshore manufacturing and business areas. But that such a highway become a kind of physical demarcation zone is nothing but propoganda to justify what we consider a very narrow-minded position.

For all we care, the "new city" could be called Whitby, if that would settle the problem that seems to have arisen over a merger. The advantages of amalgamation to the taxpayer-resident of both municipalities would remain. The way Whitby officials have reacted to Oshawa's brief, one would think Oshawa's merger plan was some sinister plot that had troops moving in, important people rounded up and a police state taking over to administer law and order.

A very important development in the regional government war came last week and we quote from the Bowmanville-Darlington Regional Government brief:

"A prime requirement for the long term is the merger of Oshawa and Whitby. The two municipalities have already grown together in the area between Rossland Road and Highway 2. All 13 land development alternatives presented as exhibits forming part of Discussion Paper Three propose the infilling of the area between Whitby and Oshawa to create a solid urban complex. To maintain an artificial political division in the face of such land development intentions appears to us insupportable. Consequently, presuming the adoption of an integrated plan or urban development and, as part of a rational regional government structure and only as such, we favor the amalgamation of Oshawa and Whitby."

This, coming from a disinterested party, confirms Oshawa's position has merit indeed. It leaves Whitby in its defiance much like the rattle of a simple man. (Funny thing — in the daily news coverage last week of the Darlington-Bowmanville presentation, this significant statement was totally ignored. Why?)

What causes wars?

Usually they can be put in two classes:

1. Leader A has delusions of grandeur and decides he would be "grander" if he had all the territory administered by Leader B. So he decides to declare war in order to absorb B. B takes exception and resists. Hence war.

2. Breakdown in communications. Leader A infers that Leader B is in some way maligning him or the people he represents and the inference grows in magnitude and scope to a point where it cannot be tolerated by Leader A. Hence war.

War is also, contrary to popular belief, a very popular pastime. You've only got to look down the pages of history and you'll see there are very few pages where there isn't a war on somewhere in the world.

In the present condition of "near war" between Oshawa and Whitby, we would suggest that the causes are 70 per cent delusions of grandeur and 30 per cent lack of communications, bearing in mind there are none so deaf as those who do not want to hear.

Sir.

When are those N.D.P. Members of Parliament, including our own Ed. Broadbent, ever going to smarten up?

Don't they realize that in any war for the "preservation of democracy" such things as conscience, moral convictions, civil liberties, freedom of expression and other fundamental principles can be a decided handicap and are better ignored?

Just because almost everyone, from the Prime Minister on down, agrees that the War Measures Act is much too drastic and open to abuse — is this any reason to speak or vote against it?

Is not the violent reprisal against at least the associates of those guilty of those terrible kidnapping and murder better than none at all — or any harm to a few innocents?

Should not the obvious emotional sentiments and public opinion be the sole criterion for any good politicians stand — rather than the irrelevant matter of what may be right?

Simply because they were elected by some misguided "do-gooders" and fancy themselves as representatives of a Party concerned foremost about basic freedoms and social justice — do they have to get carried away and actually practice such nonsense?

Even some so called good N.D.P.ers are ashamed of such carrying on, yet I personally thank God that our country has such "politically stupid" people with the guts to match.

Sir.

Regarding the Snowmobile and others of its type, they can be the source of a lot of fun and enjoyment providing their drivers have some consideration for those who do not possess one. It used to be good to be able to tramp through the woods where there was usually lots of snow, but it is getting increasingly difficult to find a spot like this without running into one of these machines or having one run into you and yours.

Also, one should not forget when driving these Snowmobiles, that their encroachment into the depths of the woods is doing away with the enjoyment of the winter wonderland; also one shouldn't forget there are wild creatures whose habitats are being invaded in such a way as to scare them almost to death; These wild creatures are taking quite a punishment and in some instances are being killed.

ror as two good men were viciously kidnapped and one was murdered.

We were outraged. Shocked. Good and mad, some of us.

We all had a rude awakening from our dream that all was well with us and our neighbors.

Our awakening came despite the rumblings we had been hearing for years, really, about Quebec. Let's face it, we had dismissed most of that "stuff". It didn't really concern us.

And then, when the federal government proclaimed its War Measures Act our reaction was one of "good, that'll teach these people." Confession: my first reaction was one of wrath. One of wrath against all of Quebec. A kind of "how dare you people go around murdering a cabinet minister and kidnapping a British official and threatening bombings and disorder."

Let's face it, very few of us said anything but "amen" when Trudeau proclaimed the War Measures. There were very few who didn't say amen, but there were a few. And I'm glad now that our MP. Edward Broadbent was one of the 16 people who stood up and questioned the government's decision to the point of saying "you've gone too far." Tommy Douglas and 15 members of the New Democratic Party accused the government of throwing out the baby with the bath water.

This week it seems to me they were the only ones who saw things in the proper perspective.

Broadbent said in an interview yesterday, "of course the government should be acting decisively in the face of clear and present danger of insurrection." And he means it. Let's not accuse MP Broadbent of being a man who would pussyfoot about with terrorists. Let's not accuse the entire New Democratic Party of it either.

Now that we've seen it in action for a while and we've heard suggestions of "let's use this opportunity to get rid of the hippies in our city" or suggestions along the line of those made in Oshawa on the weekend by the Dominion President of the Canadian Corps Association. about Canada being a sanctuary for almost any revolutionary and subversive person, including university professors and students. I'm beginning to wonder whether Broadbent and his 15 colleagues were the only people who saw things in their proper democratic perspective when the War Measures Act was under discussion

The suggestion of a limited, say 72-hour period of the WMA being in effect to give the police power to search without warrant for weapons or individuals believed to be planning to use such. makes sense

The idea that a person arrested under the WMA is not allowed consultation with a lawyer is undemocratic and unjustifyable, no matter how you slice it.

You argue that 72 hours might not be long enough? The deadline could have been extended. As it is today, we are stuck with the WMA. For how long, you don't know, and I don't know.

It would seem today that we all shared in our politicians prejudices when we applauded the passing of the WMA the way it was passed.

Why then did the government — a democratic government — pass the act?

I would hate to believe that Montreal's civic election of the weekend, and the fact that the FRAP party appeared to be heading for some success at the polls, had anything to do with it. Still, it will be up to the federal government to come clean on this issue and explain why this was not the case. If the federal authorities did indeed "overreact" to a situation about which they were officially misinformed by Montreal authorities, let them now say so.

Does Prime Minister Trudeau realize today that his decision to proclaim virtual marshal law was based on exaggerated information?

Autocratic Jean Drapeau's party was being challenged severely by the FRAP party. It challenged his dominance, his big schemes. It called for social activism, reform, a better deal for the unemployed and the poor. It sought to unionize certain groups of workers, it gave free medical service to those who couldn't afford it. It questioned Drapeau's achievements of Olympics and Expos. It pointed out, for example that he spent less on public housing than on the police department's horses.

The War Measures Act effectively brought FRAP's electioneering to a standstill. Literature opposing the Drapeau government was seized as subversive. A number of candidates were arrested. Calls by prominent Quebecers that the civic election in Montreal be postponed, were ignored. In the words of Le Devoir's Claude Ryan, was this Drapeau's way of "crushing his adversaries"?

There are some in Oshawa who see the Montreal scene as something resembling 1937 when union men here were labelled "communist agitators" and when sending in the troops was averted at the last moment. It's a stark comparison. But I'm worried when there's enough of an opening for people to be able to draw the comparison.

When you think of Montreal's slum areas vs Man and his World, or Expo, you can easily bring the situation home by putting say two blocks of slum housing in downtown Oshawa somewhere, with families of unemployed fathers and sons and not enough money for fuel or food. And then you add a city council that would decide, for example. to spend $500,000 on some wild scheme to focus the country's attention on Alexandra Park . . . Well, which would it be?

Is that over-simplifying it? I wonder

We must have law and order if we are to have a true democracy

But when we lose even one of the other very foundations of our democracy, what have we left?

You'd better worry about it. It's your life and your family that's as much affected really as that of the innocent guy who is arrested and may rot in your jail for a month before you even find out about him.

Harmony Creek pollution - people problem"

The 36th Oshawa Scout Troop from Vincent Massey Public School has done its part in cleaning up pollution in Oshawa.

They chose as their project that section of Harmony Creek that meanders slowly through the residential area between Adelaide St. E. and the junction of King and Bond Streets.

In contrast to the neat well-manicured lawns of the properties adjoining and sometimes running right down into the creek valley was the heavily polluted creek.

The scouts found various forms of pollution along the short length of the creek ranging from pop bottles to bicycle frames to lumber to paint cans.

A storm sewer outlet from a nearby street was found to be draining directly into the creek and for several yards downstream an oily film was evident.

The scouts did note that there was still life in the stream in the form of minnows and other aquatic life. They also found signs that animals of various sizes were coming down to the creek to drink.

At the end of day the scouts concluded that the major form of pollution of Harmony Creek was "people".

Pat Kennedy of the Oshawa Parks and Property Board thanked the scouts for their effort and sent a truck out to collect the refuse they had piled at the Adelaide and Bond St. bridges.

While one scout (in the rear) keeps an eye open for floating matter in Harmony Creek other Boy Scouts from the 36th Oshawa Troop try and rescue the pollutants from the Creek.

DIABETES CAN'T BE CURED BUT CAN BE CONTROLLED

Proper diet, an oral medication called a hypoglycemic agent, and insulin are the three ways a physician controls a diabetic patient. He may use just diet or all three, depending on the type of diabetes. The important thing is to diagnose early for in some cases there are no symptoms.

Because the diabetic needs a great many products to help control the condition, we have a complete "Diabetic Center" in our pharmacy. This includes not only the necessary prescription medicines but testing tapes, sugar substitutes, sugar-free products, food measuring scales, syringes, etc.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service.

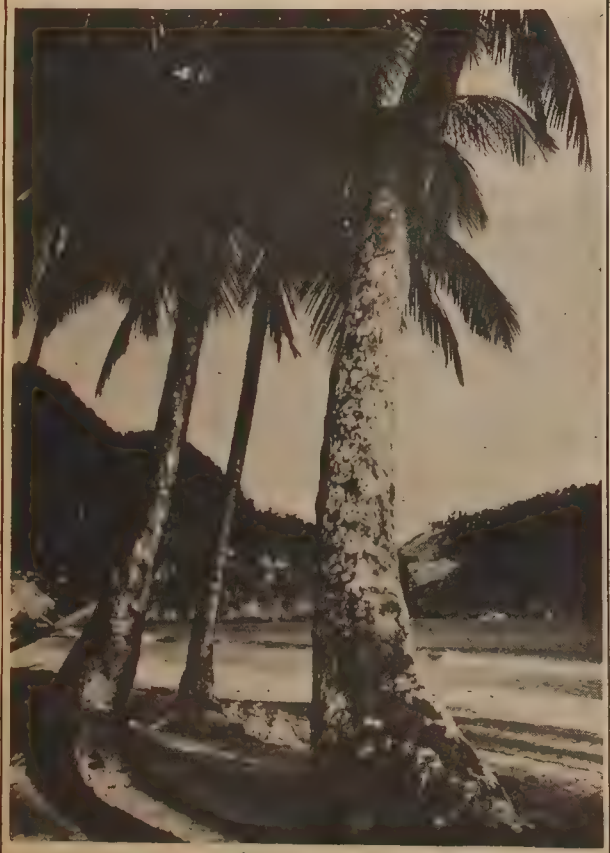
Ron Mauro elected NDP riding president

The annual meeting of the Oshawa New Democratic Party Riding Association was attended by 65 members and chaired by M.P.P. Clifford Pilkey.



New officers are President, Ron Mauro; 1st Vice-President, Alice Reardon; 2nd Vice-President, Doris Due; Secretary, Bruce Barrett; Treasurer, Annebelle Cobb; Membership Chairman, Terry Graham; Publicity Chairman, Bruce Moores; Provincial Council Delegates, Ken Cobb, and Art Shultz.

After the elections the members were addressed by special guest M.P.P. for Riverdale James Renwick, who spoke on the War Measures Act and its impact on the people of Canada. Two Motions were introduced by individual members dealing with the War Measures Act. Mr. Renwick also publicly pledged his support to Ed Broadbent for his candidacy for the Leadership of the Federal Party.

Cafik

Norman Cafik (L/ Ontario) suggested in Commons last week that every member of parliament should have an office in his own riding paid for by the government of Canada. He suggested there were many public buildings in every riding that could be converted into an office, to expediate communication between the electorate and the elected.

At Central Park Senior School

Encouraged to act as adults

By Elaine Hallam
staff reporter

It may be hard to believe, and you may have to see it to believe it, but, students attending Central Park Senior Public School actually have smiles on their faces and look as if they are enjoying themselves while attending classes.

Students at the school are treated like adults and are made to feel important in the school and that they have something to contribute that is worthwhile.

To find the reason the "open concept" of teaching is working so well at the school, consider Principal John Galbratith and his young, flexible staff.

The traditional system of one teacher in a classroom of 30 to 35 students has been eliminated for the most part and replaced by the "open concept" system where 65 to 70 students study in double classrooms with two teachers.

Students are grouped according to their learning levels. Some children prefer to work alone so their desks are placed in corners. Others find they work well when six or seven portable desks are pushed together.

With the students grouped in this manner it is possible to have many different lessons going on at the same time or perhaps have some students work on their own while others listen to the teacher.

Two teachers work in the double classroom at the same time providing benefits for both the students and the teachers themselves. If one teacher is stronger in a certain area of study that teacher can take over the entire class while the other teacher observes and benefits from the stronger teacher.

Mr. Galbraith says the teachers like this method of teaching better than the conventional method. It gives them a chance to preview films before the class sees them while the other teacher is looking after the class.

Students are tested every 12 days, thus eliminating the crisis periods every year where students often do not do their best because of the tension of final exams. This frequent testing method also enables the teacher to keep an eye on the progress of the student and move him into another learning group as he progresses.

"We have no bells to signify the end of classes. I like as little regimentation as possible. It encourages the students to act as adults," says Mr. Galbraith.

He said that the staff had less of a discipline problem with the students because the students are treated like adults.

The school which opened in September was furnished and equipped by the teachers. Mr. Galbraith gave each teacher his budget allowance and told them to equip their rooms as they saw fit.

"The teachers are the ones who have to use the rooms so why not let them choose the equipment. After all I'm not teaching in the rooms," Mr. Galbraith said.

The one mistake he points to in furnishing the school are the deep purple carpets in some of the rooms which show every bit of dirt and dust.

Mr. Galbraith says his teachers try to limit the amount of passive learning by the students and they do this by encouraging student participation and vocalizing.

Often students are allowed to get up in the double classrooms and move around. This provides them with a break and freedom to move around.

While Mr. Galbraith says the success of this system is not measurable he points to the example of one girl who last year was so shy she would not even put her hand up to answer a question. This year, with open participation encouraged she is a happy, vibrant girl and a much better student.

DRESSMAKING

Almost three hundred women spent a profitable afternoon at McLaughlin Collegiate on Saturday, gleaning information from experts on home dressmaking with a professional touch. Adjusting patterns, fitting, fabrics and the art of makeup were demonstrated and weaving quilting and other crafts were shown.

Many boys still waiting

Big Brother Jack tells what it's like

"No man stands so straight as when he stoops to help a fatherless boy."

This is the motto of the Big Brothers' Association and the credo of approximately 30 Oshawa and Whitby men who are currently "big brothers" to local boys.

The aim of the organization is to provide boys who have lost their father through death, divorce, separation or illness with the interest and companionship of a mature and understanding man.

Jack S., manager of a downtown store in Oshawa is an active volunteer with this agency and is presently big brother to a 14-year-old boy. Jack prefers to remain anonymous to protect his little brother from any publicity.

Jack, who has a four-month old child himself, first became interested in the organization through his work. He has been in the retail business for many years and says inherent with his business is shoplifting and inherent with shoplifting is youth.

Curiosity

"This prompted my curiosity about what could be done for these boys. It costs from $10,000 to $11,000 a year to keep a boy in a training school. The cost of supplying a boy with a Big Brother is about one fiftieth of that amount."

Before getting a little brother Jack attended several meetings with the director and then met with the boy. If the boy is not receptive to having a big brother he is not forced to have one.

The boys needing big brothers may come from any strata of society and are usually referred to the association by their mothers, schools, clergymen or occasionally the police.

The two prerequisites necessary for becoming a big brother according to Jack are the ability to bridge the generation gap and accept the boy as an individual not as a child and a large measure of patience and understanding.

The first "little brother" Jack had was a boy in his early teens, who came from a broken home. The boy was a problem to his mother, not doing well in school and beginning to hang out around local plazas when he came to the attention of the Big Brothers.

He was rude and belligerent towards any authority and at first not too keen on the idea of a Big "Something in the lad's face appealed to the man. He threw a brick at him. . . "; two lines from Stephen Leacock's Hezekiah Hayseed or A Hero in Homespun, whose wry humour has remained with me since high school days. It never occurred to me, then, that Leacock was anything other than an Englishman with a wacky sense of humor, writing about some fictitious place he called Mariposa.

This wasn't an unfamiliar name because in high-class residential districts home-owners named their semi-detached villas "Mon Repos", "Mariposa", "Ravenna", "Floriana" and other fanciful names of significance to the family within. I must have been in Canada at least five years before I discovered that Leacock had grown up in Ontario and that Mariposa was, in effect, Orillia.

Last week, thanks to Miss Grace Crooks who addressed a literary meeting at McLaughlin Public Library, I learned much more about that unusual man's life. Miss Crooks is Orillia's chief librarian and Citizen of the Year (1969), so honored for her research of the life of Stephen Leacock whose home on Brewery Bay, Lake Simcoe is now a national trust.

Stephen was the third child of the 11 born to Walter Peter Leacock and Agnes Emma Butler. Peter was a charming ne'er-do-well and Agnes apparently capitulated to his charms. Peter's father bought a farm in South Africa for the newlyweds. It failed, as did a similar venture in Kansas. Peter was directed to Canada where in 1876 he was joined by Agnes and the children.

Stephen was seven years old but he remembered the voyage by steamer to Toronto and left notes about it and the train journey to Newmarket then the wagon ride to the village of Sutton.

He remembered the leaky, cold homestead; the endless wood cutting to feed the nine stoves and the tiresomeness of tallow candles. Unaccustomed to coal oil lamps, Agnes was afraid to use them.

Eventually the feckless father took off and Stephen, at 17, was left in charge. His father lived to be 92 and died in 1940 in the Maritimes.

Money must have been forthcoming from England because Stephen was educated at Upper Canada College (Head Boy, 1887) and graduated from the University of Toronto in 1891. He took a three-month teaching course at Strathroy Collegiate Institute and returned to teach at UCC until 1899.

Of Strathroy he wrote: "All boarding houses are one boarding house." and of teaching "the most dreary, thankless, worst paid profession."

He went on to the University of Chicago where, in 1903, he received his Doctor of Philosophy degree and was appointed head of the Department of Economics and Political Science at McGill University, Montreal, at the princely stipend of $2,500 per annum.

A colleague urged Stephen to publish a collection of short writings which appeared as "Literary Lapses"; sold in thousands for 35 cents per copy and his reputation as a humorist began.

He once said: "I would rather have written Alice in Wonderland than the whole Encyclopedia Brittanica."

Leacock married Beatrix Hamilton, Sir Henry Pellat's niece, who died prematurely. Leacock's niece, Elizabeth Kimball, became his housekeeper. Of him she wrote: "He was fine-looking in a rugged way with a rich voice and thick hair. About him was a sort of Irish melancholy and Irish charm. He could always see the sunlight about to break through."

He was Canada's first author to receive international recognition.

Music goes MODD for all of Oshawa

In an attempt to encourage community involvement and development of the Arts in Oshawa, the Recreation Department has designed a series of events called Music In Oshawa A Design for Development (MODD).

The Ontario Department of Education and the Symphony Orchestra Association in a combined effort have developed four phases of MODD to achieve community involvement and to try and evaluate and express the Arts and Musical needs of Oshawa.

Phase I will take place November 13 and 14 and is called an Instrumental Workshop. The University of Western Ontario band will be conducting the workshop for all secondary school music students and instructors as well as for all community instrumentalists.

The band will hold a concert November 13 and people involved in Phase I will have a chance to observe and discuss principles of band music, its technique and methods of study, instructing and performing.

Phase II is called a Music Educators Conference and choral workshop and will be held in the early part of 1971. Methods in choral teaching and techniques will be discussed, observed and applied.

A Festival of the Arts during the week of May 25 to 30 will be Phase III of the program. Local dance groups and choirs, the Oshawa Arts Council, the Art Gallery, mass choirs and other local groups will join together to bring out all of the cultural aspects of our city.

The final phase of the program will consist of a conference on the weekend of June 5 and 6, to achieve a climax and seriously develop the means and methods for the artistic technical and musical excellence in Oshawa.

The Conference hopes to evaluate community involvement, planning of Oshawa's Arts facilities, development of performers through proper education and the administrative function and the role of the Art Co-ordinator in Oshawa's future in the lively Arts.

Detailed information on MODD is available from the Recreation Department.

Brother. Slowly a common interest in fishing and encouragement of the boy's interest in automobiles won him over and a real comradeship evolved.

Because his home situation was still difficult for the boy Jack and his wife eventually took the youngster into their home where he stayed for almost two years. Gradually his school marks improved and there was a definite change in his attitude.

Jack now has another little brother who he sees about twice a week, either to go bowling, play billiards or go to a show.

The 25 or 30 boys in the area who have big brothers are very fortunate but there are just as many waiting to get big brothers. Anyone over 21 and who is willing to give a minimum of three hours a week to the attention of a fatherless boy is asked to volunteer to be a big brother.

Volunteer

It takes from one month to six weeks from the initial application until a boy is assigned to the volunteer. Being a volunteer involves a police clearance, a doctor's reference and three other personal references.

It involves forming a relationship with a young boy, developing a friendship that will encourage the boy to work within the society and providing the boy with someone he can relate to on a brotherly basis.

Jack has recently become a member of the executive because he knows that in time he will be transferred with his job and perhaps it will be to a community where there is no Big Brother organization.

"I hope to be able to start a Big Brother organization if I find myself transferred to a small community."

The boys range in age from six to 16.

Mini-Midi-Maxi-Mixie-Muddle is beautiful freedom

And the battle of the mini-midi-mixie muddle goes on and on while men and women have their say.

"Save the mini-skirt" stickers are becoming popular even in good old Oshawa.

One of This Week's staffers suggested a colleague in Toronto, Margaret Haddrick of the Don Mills Mirror, had some mature remarks to make on the subject recently.

Here's what Margaret said:

Can the mini and the midi find true happiness side by side in the closet? I believe so.

Haven't formals always shared space with pants and sweaters, and no-one ever suggested one would oust the other. So why all this ridiculous fuss about the midi being forced upon unwilling recipients?

There seems to be one basic misconception about the introduction of longer skirts — namely, that they sound the death knell for short skirts. Stuff and nonsense.

It's a matter of knowing how and when to wear what. You won't catch me in a midi on a humid August day. But for fall and winter, for walking out or for home entertaining, I think it's glorious.

I believe in freedom of choice. Fashion cannot stand still. We have reached that historic moment when virtually anything goes anywhere; pants, vests, culottes, mini, midi and maxi. We don't have to look alike to be in style.

So they in the higher echelons of fashions promote longer lengths and we who are tired of showing our womanhood to all and sundry when we climb into a car, pick something off the floor, or — the old joke, bend over the filing cabinet, applaud.

Women over 45 resented the mini when it first appeared (because they couldn't wear it). Now they resent the midi (for a different reason, they remember it from the first time around). Why can't they fix their hems at the most flattering length for the mature, smack on the knee, and be done with it?

Let's go back six years to when Mary Quant first introduced the pelmet (valance in Canadian) as they were called in England.

Mothers were aghast "tut! tut! how shocking. "I watched one swing past me on the street in the spring of '65 and just about died. "I could NEVER wear something that short." I muttered to myself.

The following winter, up went all my hems. Likewise, the following spring. Someone under 30 couldn't afford to have knee-length clothes if she cared about her image.

Men became so saturated with thighs and knees, they forgot we have decollete and waists. Hallelujah. Suddenly they are about to be noticed again. We can bend over gracefully and show a bosom instead of bikini briefs.

The argument that the midi is necessarily drab and adds age is relevant only to the wearer. It wouldn't do a thing for my aunts but I have seen 20-to-30 year-olds who look ravishing in it. As long as it is well cut, well accessorized and tantalisingly unzipped or unbuckled.

It's nice to be able to show only the amount of leg we choose

It's all a matter of application. Think of the plumpest girls in a micro-

Mr. and Mrs. Hanley B. Claus recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. A family dinner was held in their honor. Cliff Pilkey, MLA, presented the couple with a plaque from the Ontario Government. Telegrams were received from the Governor General and Mrs. Michener, Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier Robarts.

The couple have lived in Oshawa all their married life where Mr. Claus worked for the Canadian National Railway for 43 years, retiring in 1966.

Celebrating the event with the couple were their children: Mrs. Marion Cooper, Adrien (Dusty), Vernon and Mrs. Alex Walker (Ruth) as well as 12 grandsons, two graddaughters and four great-grandchildren.

This is one of those weeks when one could write an Oshawa column about a dozen issues that call for some kind of comment from this corner. But the editor will allow this columnist only so much space per column and I failed to talk him into giving me several pages so I could write two or three columns this week.

Here then is a digested version of some of those terribly important issues that are just crying out for comment.

SKATING RINK

Whatever became of the idea of turning the civic square into a wintertime skating rink? Does the argument that something would drop down into the parking garage downstairs really hold water? And whatever happened to the committee that was going to report to council about all the wonderful things that could be done with the civic square? I think Alderman Ross Gibson, who raised the issue in the first place, has some reason to raise the roof. And as far as the roof of the city hall garage is concerned, wouldn't a huge sheet of plastic stop the water from dribbling through?

If for some technical reason we cannot have the open air ice rink it must be concluded that somebody was asleep at the switch when the complex was designed.

MAYOR MACKEY

Oshawa is losing another mayor, at a time when it really needs some continuity in this office. We must accept Mayor Mackey's reasons of personal matters of family and business as having brought on his decision. Still, I wonder what his worship's decision would have been, had a number of problems resolved themselves differently. If sweeping changes in the civic administration — such as have been proposed by the mayor and a number of council members — had taken place I believe it very likely one Bruce Mackey would be in the running this December.

Another disappointment to Mayor Mackey was Oshawa's unsuccessful attempt to get the Canada Summer Games. Mackey and organizer Terry Kelly had high hopes. They put in a big effort, which I firmly believe will pay off for the city in one way or another. I hear there are a number of "Olympic" possibilities.

Back to the mayor. I hope some of his colleagues and those who brought him his big majority at the polls last time around will convince him to at least stand for alderman this December. Especially with the regional government issues, with which Mackey perhaps more than anyone on council is most familiar, this man's insight and leadership would be an important asset in the next couple of years.

SHOPPING

I got stuck with a number of family errands to run on the weekend, and found there are a couple of clerks and a manager I'd like to send on a basic course on how to win customers instead of insulting them. Asking for a box of cereal in one jug milk store, the bubble gum chewing gal behind the counter was so busy yakking on the telephone to a friend, she growled a "just a minute" at me, (at which point I should have walked out, but didn't) and let me wait a full three minutes before hanging up and blowing this ugly purple bubble, all this while the manager was busy at his desk in the corner reading some apparently fascinating pocket book. I paid for the cereal, and said thank you. Outside, in front of the store there was garbage strewn all over the sidewalk. Candy wrappers, empty boxes and bags. . . .

If anyone has a solution to help stop this kind of attitude, let me know. There are few things that bug me more.

A NEW MAYOR

Back to the politics, where at least there's no bubble gum. One of the big questions on the Oshawa capitol hill this week was whether Alderman McNeely would run for mayor, or could be persuaded to run for mayor, and if he could be, would he still run if one Mike Starr ran also, and did the same reason that Mayor Mackey throw in the towel not hold for this alderman?

I've always wondered how many people it takes to "talk someone into running for office" or even if that is indeed the way in which it is done, or whether that's all part of this thing we call politics? Or what really motivates most of the candidates. It would be good if we all sat down this time 'round and asked this question. Ask it of most politicians and you get a barrage of platitudes about serving his community and so on. Still, turn the question around, and you wonder why some of our elected officials go to the nomination meeting to indeed "offer" their services, which very often boils down to all their spare time for the next couple of years.

In the last municipal election we had a great turnout of candidates. It looked healthy. There were even some of us enthusiasts who looked for a big turnout of voters. No dice. Is it going to be the same way this December? Or does someone have to propose first that we build a big super highway through the golf club, just so we can get hordes of people all worked up, pressure groups forming and thus a big turnout?

What indeed would a compulsory trip to the voting booth do to the election picture?

And what would happen if we ran our ballot, instead of in the normal alphabetical order, starting at Z, back to A? Some of your colleagues, Alderman Attersley, are saying that your letter A on a big ballot has brought you a lot of votes.

Which brings up another thing. Our old-fashioned system of voting. Why couldn't we do this by mail. The post office now has this super duper money order system, and I'm sure they could work up something for an election. We could take a week for the vote to come in — just think of the sheer suspense — and provided there was a self addressed, stamped envelope included, we might even get a 70 per cent or so "turnout."

The way in which we vote, with booths and deputy returning officers and all, is just as old-fashioned as the way we negotiate our labor disputes.

I realize all that doesn't say much about McNeely running for mayor, but then, at this point I'm just as much in the dark about the whole thing as you are.

OSO - lots of reasons for a big smile

By Peter Brouwer
editor

Sitting in the second row from the front during Sunday's Beethoven concert of the Oshawa Symphony Orchestra, I was convinced that the artist who drew Jacob Groob in the above cartoon really knows the man. That's Groob there, in the cartoon, no doubt about it.

The OSO for the first time in its history started the new season with a real bang — a full house. And there were a lot of very happy smiles in evidence Sunday night, during intermission and after the show when coffee and sandwiches were served for the members of the orchestra and some of the people who work behind the scenes.

I'm not a knowledgeable critic of music, good or bad. But I like Beethoven's stuff, and the way Conductor Groob made it sound at Eastdale Auditorium Sunday night made me feel great. And I'm looking forward to the next concert — Handel's Messiah in December.

Inexpert critic that I am, I do have a couple of suggestions. Conductor Groob — and he comes on as a real showman — should try to make a few of his players wipe this mask of seriousness off their countenances. I wonder if this would be difficult. Even if the people in the very front row would smile or grin or at least look as if they were enjoying themselves once in a while, it would add to everyone's enjoyment of the performance. Is this pure imagination on my part, or do some of the players find the performance a big chore? Or are they supposed to get carried away by the seriousness of it all? Please, Mr. Groob, next time, let's have a few smiles.

Another suggestion. The singing of O Canada at the beginning of the program, with Groob conducting, is just great. A very nice touch. There's nothing like singing your national anthem with a whole orchestra for accompaniment, and a conductor who manages to put a lot of feeling into it. But why do we have to have the mayor stand in front of us, officially declaring the 13th season "now open." It seemed almost a little silly.

And at the end of the program, when we've enjoyed so much the performance, all stops when Conductor Groob walks off into the wings, the orchestra gets up, we all get up and we somehow find our way out. I'll bet Mr. Groob and his group of imaginative helpers could devise a much more suitable ending to the evening. Let's think about it.

Perhaps a highlight of the concert could be taped, to be played immediately following the end of the show? Anything would be better than this hollow nothingness.

To sum up, OSO people, you're one of the finest things this Oshawa has.

MINI? MIDI

mini and think of a neckline laced loosely to the navel. Who cares about the length of skirt anyway? You still do?

Well, it will pass. As sure as night follows day, in two years everyone will have dropped their hem-lines on one outfit or another (not all of them).

Mini lovers complain the fashion industry is taking away freedom of choice by promoting the midi, like it or not.

Wrong. It is suggesting a "new you." If you remain convinced that it does nothing for you, don't wear it. But don't curse it and condemn those who wear it, like me.

It's a sign of the times that we can now wear satin leg o' mutton sleeves under a velvet dress if we choose. Five years ago someone would have asked us if we had lost our way to Stratford. Let's not doom this beautiful freedom.

"Exposure Three" at station

The Whitby Arts Inc. is presenting "Exposure Three," featuring the works of three local artists at the Station until November 1.

The three Port Perry artists include Mrs. Chris Haugen, Mrs. Sheila Dantzer and Miss Catherine Christie.

Chris Haugen calls herself a progressive realist, which in simpler terms, indicates a painter of real life subjects that are portrayed in an abstract manner. Individual parts of her paintings are recognizable but the general impression left with the viewer is that of an abstract painting. She paints under the name of Myrvang.

Sheila Dantzer portrays real things in an abstract fashion, however, she goes further into the field of abstraction than does Mrs. Haugen. She refers to herself as a semi-abstractionist and chooses her themes from nature.

In contrast to the paintings of these two artists, Whitby Arts will also exhibit the work of Catherine Christie. She is exhibiting sculptures as well as paintings. There is no abstraction in her work.

Whitby Arts Inc. says the station will be open to the public each Saturday and Sunday afternoon from 2 to 5 p.m. until November 1.

(A co-operative effort of Durham College, Youth & Recreation Branch of the Ontario Department of Education and your Recreation Department)

A LEADERSHIP TRAINING COURSE will be offered at Durham College early in 1971 if enough interest is shown by the communities in this area. This course will provide upgrading opportunities for the community groups and be such that immediate implementation of techniques for community development could be practiced by those individuals attending. The course would contain, through dialogue and instruction, areas reflecting community programs, organization, leadership techniques, etc., that pertain to community development at the local level. A specific quota will be accepted from an organization, however, individuals are encouraged to request information as well. Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

Color, that's the magic word. Fashion now designs color in all its brightness into the very shirts that men wear. The car company stylists have gone overboard with a range of color that would have been laughed at a few years ago. Even the drab sterile highway signs have blossomed out in bright greens and reds. The world has gone mad over color, but the only problem that faces me personally in the world of color is the TV set

Why oh why do people who purchase new color sets over saturate the color controls until the set turns into a rainbow instead of an accurate reproducer? It never fails, when I am visiting some friend's house, to hear a complaint about how color reception has fallen off over the months. One glance at the set tells me that the owner has been fiddling around with the controls to such an extent that he or she no longer knows where the reference point is.

So here are a few pointers to all you color set owners

1. Don't crank that saturation control up too high. Look for light but pleasant backgrounds, don't make that sky too blue or the woods too green.

2. The best time to set the color is on a close up of a persons face. Watch that setting on this one and get a slightly pink and tan balance.

3. Ignore the sometimes subtle changes in color, the station or program is just going from one camera to another and not one manufacturer of color cameras in the wide world has really solved the problem of two cameras duplicating colors with the same accuracy.

4. Have the color set re-aligned at least once a year. After all, the average color set is priced at $800, so why not have it looked after and working properly

If you follow these basic instructions and resist the temptation to sock in the colors you will be pleasantly surprised by the clean uncluttered picture.

If you ever get a chance to visit a television studio have a peek at the color monitors and you will see just what I mean.

Nov. 22 is the day Santa Claus ho, ho's his way into Bowmanville in the annual parade. For the first time Cablecast 8 will be on the air live and in color. This first for us is really just a trial to see how color will work and the Noram Co. is helping out on this one by sending down a color camera. The parade will be live to Bowmanville residents and taped for showing the following Monday, still in color, for Oshawa's residents.

Dunlop Bonspiel gets underway

One of Ontario's most famous curling families will have divided loyalties when a father and son enter their respective rinks in this year's 5th Annual Dunlop Invitational Bonspiel, which starts Saturday at Whitby. Alfred Phillips Snr, a former Brier skip, who curls at Toronto Granite club, may well have to curl against his even more successful son, Alfie Phillips Jnr, who now curls with the Tam O'Shanter club.

Alfie Phillips Jnr, who won the Dunlop in 1966, and subsequently became Ontario Brier and Canadian Brier champ and was Canadian World Cup skip, leads a formidable entry list for this year's Dunlop, at the Whitby Curling Club.

In addition to the two Phillips entries there are 13 other MacDonald Brier skips and another Scotch World Cup skip among the 64 competitors. Bob Woods is the other World Cup skip, having led the 1967 Swedish rink in the Scottish Cup World championships at Perth, Scotland.

Sponsored by Dunlop Canada Limited, and organised by their neighbours, Whitby Curling Club, this event has become the number one invitational bonspiel in Ontario since it took its present form in 1966. It offers top class competition to the leading rinks in the Province early in the season.

Sixteen rinks, including those of Alfred Phillips Snr and Tom Caldwell of Orillia, open play on Saturday in the first of four days of matches leading up to the finals. Sixteen rinks will also take part in the draws on Saturdays November 7th and 14th and Friday November 20th, with 24 rinks returning for the finals on Saturday November 21st, to contest the six events.

Top prize in the first event this year will be $1,000, the first time a cash prize of this value has been awarded in 'the Dunlop'. Total prize money for the six events will be $3,800.

Former Brier skips, in addition to the Phillips father and son, entered this year are; Joe Gurowka of Dixie, Tom Caldwell of Orillia, last year's Brier skip, Paul Savage of Toronto Terrace, Jake Edwards of Kingston, Ray Grant of Unionville, Ken Buchan of London and Bob Mann of Kingston, all having represented Ontario. Bill Grozelle of Haileybury and Herb Pile of Geraldton have again entered their famous Northern Ontario rinks, while the number

Sports editorial

There seems to be quite a controversy underway between two factions of the minor hockey scene in Oshawa. The problem seems to lie between the executives of the Oshawa Minor Hockey League and the Neighbourhood Parks group. The focal point of the problem is the new Park's League formation of a 14-team Bantam league.

For years, the OMHA has operated all the house leagues above Peewee, as well as every all-star team in every division. Last year the Oshawa Minor people allowed the Neighborhood teams to affiliate with them, making these teams eligible for competition with Ontario Minor teams. Now, with the Neighborhood leagues taking over most of the Bantam teams in the area the local Minor Hockey group have withdrawn their sanction leaving the other teams ineligible for provincial competition. One of the problems with having two groups operating the same hockey categories along with two other groups, the Church League and the Little NHL, is that a number of boys are getting far more ice time than others. Some of these boys are playing in three leagues and this is grossly unfair to the rest-when ice time is at a premium.

All of these organisations are run by men dedicated to the furthering of minor sport. They should not be criticised for the work and effort that goes into their hockey endeavours. Still, a number of things must be resolved. I have heard of a number of cases of coaches from one league trying to persuade players of another league to switch over. These propositions are apparently being sweetened by the offer of more ice time and free hockey sticks.

Of course, this is hearsay, but I hope that it is not true. The game is for the kids and they must be able to play it a fair and equitable manner. If there are going to be these kind of repercussions from the leagues, then one central body will have to be called in to run the whole setup.

Positive steps are being taken, however, as an intra-league meeting has been called for this Friday evening. So let's get together, gentlemen, and solve these problems and let the kids get the fairest shake you can give them.

Jim Bishop

Neighborhood hockey kicks off with 48 games

The Neighborhood Association hockey season got underway on Saturday with 48 hockey games in all divisions. Some of the scores may appear to be a little lopsided but they will be re-aligned once the executives of the Association have had a chance to assess the strengths and weaknesses of the various teams

HOW TO MEASURE STORM WINDOWS
Use outside measurements. Measure frame opening where you would normally set an ordinary wood storm sash, and write down the exact dimensions. (A) is width between side casings. (B) is height from sill to bottom edge of top casing. Add width (A) and height (B) to obtain total inches of opening size.
On double-hung windows state height (C) from bottom of top casing to centre of meeting rail. On 2-track windows where centre meeting rail is off-centre by more than three inches, the storm window will be made with three panes so that they can be removed from the inside. Orders on 3-track windows cannot be filled if upper and lower glass are not of equal height.

Generals trade two

By Jim Bishop
sports editor

It will look odd to see the Generals without big George Ferguson centering one of the lines. Fergie was obviously the key to the big trade that took place Monday with the Marlies of Toronto. Also included in the trade was the young rookie, John Cook. For our side, the Gens receive defensemen Steve Webb, and forwards Dean Cheremata, Al Avery and Sean Shanahan.

Webb is a hard-nosed defenseman who stands 5'11" and weighs 180 pounds and has two years of junior eligibility. Cheremata, a left winger with two years left, missed most of last season because of an ankle injury. Al Avery a 5' 9" 175 pound winger has three years and last season had 30 goals and 30 assists in Midget hockey. Sean Shanahan is in his final junior year and plays centre or right wing. He's a big boy at 6'2" and 190 pounds and he could provide some much-needed muscle for the forward lines.

Fan reaction to the trade has been hard to come by. Most fans have not had time to digest the facts of the trade but the consensus is that something had to be done to get this club untracked. At the time of this writing, the Gens had yet to win a game.

Madeleine Ashmore, President of the Generals Booster Club, expressed sorrow that it had to be Ferguson that had to go. She said, "We have complete confidence in Ed Reigle's judgement and realized that he had to make the best deal for the club. The team lost a lot of muscle to the NHL draft and it just wasn't replaced by this season's crop of rookies."

Anyone who remembers the last deal that Generals made with Marlboros will probably take heart. In that trade Marlies got Dale Tallon for Bob Kelly, Rick Kessell, Bob Smith and Tom Foxcroft. Tallon, the super bonus-baby of the new Vancouver Canucks is at present being outstarred by Kelly who is making his mark in the NHL with Philadelphia. Kessell is in the American League with Baltimore and Foxcroft is with Providence of the same circuit. If Reigle can get half the results from this trade as the last one, the deal is a success.

Certainly, the good wishes of the fans go with Ferguson and John Cook in their hockey careers.

Crushmen split pair

The Oshawa Crushmen had a fight on their hands in Belleville Sunday night but proved themselves equal to the task as they came from behind a 3-1 deficit to beat the Belleville team 4 to 3. Steve West, who had a super weekend for the club scored twice and assisted on another. Single goals went to Larry Hopkins and Don Hudgin.

Saturday, at the Civic Auditorium, The Crushmen trounced the Trenton Golden-Hawks 9-0. In this one young West picked up five assists. Larry Hopkins had a trio of goals while singles went to Bob Kirk, Scott Willson, Paul Britton, Brian Genge, Luke Charbonneau and Garry Armstrong.

The Crushmen entertain the Kingston Frontenacs this Saturday at the Auditorium. Game time is 7:15 p.m.

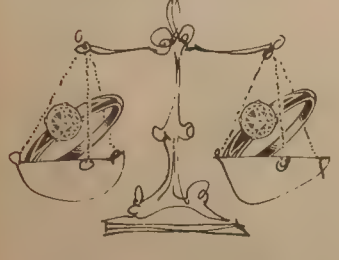
It took Muhammid (Cassius) Ali (Clay) only about three seconds to prove what he has been saying for a number of years now. That is, "I'm the greatest". Jerry Quarry, the challenger was put through the Ali (Clay) buzzsaw for only three rounds Monday night before the ring officials stopped the fight, thereby stopping Quarry from drowning in his own blood.

After a three and a half year layoff Muhammid (Cassius), now 28, looked as sharp and in as good shape as he was when the wheels of American Justice (?) ground one of the finest boxing careers in history to a halt. Monday's fight was only one of the battles that Clay has had to fight since he refused induction into the United States Army. He opted out as a conscientious objector. Unfortunately, the people who run the draft could not reconcile deferring a preacher of a religion called the Black Muslims. Had the man been a Catholic or Methodist, I'm sure that the case would have been decided in a different manner. Clay is still fighting the biggest battle of his life to stay out of jail. It looks to me like the American Establishment didn't mind having a black man as champion, but they sure as h--l didn't want a black man who was going to use his position to fight for the rights and freedom of his fellow black people.

To complicate matters, there are a number of super right-wing dingalings like Georgia's Governor Maddox around urging silly things like the boycott of Clay's fight with Quarry. The boxing associations are not about to resist political pressures as was evident when they stripped Clay of his championship.



It does look, however, like Clay is equal to the task of taking on the Justice Department and whatever fighters the clubs can come up with. And good luck to him.

Tennis club winds up season

The Oshawa Tennis Club held their closing banquet and trophy presentation Saturday night. Dave Kentish, retiring vice-president of the club emceed the affair which boasted Lawrie Strong as guest of honor. Strong is the president of the Ontario Lawn Tennis Association and captain of Canada's Davis Cup team.

The highlight of the night was the presentation of trophies.

Another last period Generals let-down

Another short game and a long weekend for the Generals has passed. They put it together for two periods Sunday night but could not find enough for a third frame and wound up on the short end of a 5 to 4 score. Ottawa 67's were again the villains as they thwarted Oshawa's attempt to obtain that first win of the season.

Young Don Seiling opened the scoring in Sunday's game with a convert of a Terry O-Reilly shot early in the period and Gerry Methe put the Gens 2-up at the 18:51 mark before Paul Sheard put the 67's on the board with 20 seconds to go in the period. In the second, Laurie Gregan grabbed off an errant Ottawa pass at the Oshawa blueline, raced past the lone defender and fired a vicious slapshot past goalie LaRocque. Midway through the second, Paul Sheard got his second of three goals as his shot from the point hit defenseman Doug Ferguson's skate and ricocheted by Gilles Gratton.

In the third Pete Sullivan got only his second goal of the season as he picked up Gregan's rebound, deked the goaltender out of the crease and fired the puck home to give the Generals what should have been enough to win the game. This was not the case, however, as Wayne Merrick, Paul Sheard with his third of the night, and Dennis Potvin put the game out of reach with three unanswered tallies

On Friday, in London, the Generals got two goals from Tom Simpson, Jack Lynch, Pete Sullivan, John Cook and George Ferguson, scoring one a piece. Again, they could not put three periods together and came out with a 6-all tie. They took a 4-3 lead into the third period but did not have enough to hang on for the win.

Last Tuesday they did not have enough to even get started as the 67's jumped them early in the first period and dominated the rest of the game. The Generals were not in that game early, late or ever and many fans left the rink after their second period.

GMC Rally Van

Ideal for 16 guys in a car pool

By Peter Brouwer
editor

If you're a dad like this one here, who likes outings with his whole big family, or if you're one of these people who suffers from claustrophobia in a smallish, or even a medium size car, or if you're one who's in a car pool with 16 other guys, well the auto manufacturers have finally done something with you in mind.

If you ask me, General Motors built its Rally Van just for my family. It's big enough for a father, a mother, four girls, two boys, a big black dog, two cats, a rabbit, two birds, the barbecue, the ice box, and then, if need be, another small family with, say, four kids.

The Rally Van though not quite in its present version, has been around for some time. The guys with the big families hollered long enough and loud enough . . . so there it was. I drove a GM version of this van a couple of years ago. It stacked up very poorly compared to for example the Volkswagen bus, except perhaps in power. The version I tried than had a V8 with enough power to put a 707 in the air — at least, so it seemed. How things have changed with the new model. The engine is now right up front — no longer in the middle of the van, taking up a whole lot of space — and you can check the oil without having to lift the hoodcover off inside the vehicle. Everything's accessible from up front, outside.

The kids loved it. Out of the leaves and in through the big sliding door.

The wheels are located at the very four corners of the van, which makes for sturdy well-controlled handling. Power-to-weight ratio is now just right. No longer do you get the feeling you're driving a cookie jar with a great big engine pushing it from some unseen place.

We loaded up early Saturday, headed along Highway 7 towards Bancroft, through Algonquin Park, back down Highway 11 . . . Fantastic trip. And was anyone miserable from "all that driving"? No.

Even when it rained during lunch at near Bancroft, we opened the big down rear doors, and the side door, set up the barbecue just inside and out of the rain, and the van became a fine covered kitchen. (Try that with a station wagon. . .)

The van comes in a number of versions, the largest one with two bucket seats up front followed by three rows of seats wide enough to seat three big adults each, or four smaller ones. Ours had the two bench seats, with oodles of space behind the last one, enough for a barbecue and a piano, if you want to sing while you're on a trip. (well, a smallish piano.)

What's it like, asked a fellow in Brechin, when I stopped for gas on the way back. "Makes a great school bus," I said. As it turned out, that's just what he wanted it for.

The average van such as this one costs less than a big station wagon and it would seem to me a lot of families should consider it. With power steering and brakes it's really just as easy to park on a busy street as a full-size station wagon, and once you're barreling down the freeway, the ride this vehicle provides is as smooth as that of a big car.

I got 18 miles to a gallon of gas, and that's not bad for a big payload such as ours.

The Volkswagen-copied sliding door on the curbside of the van is easy to operate. Just pull, and by twisting the handle upwards, it locks.

All but two windows in the van open up, which is a practical touch one will appreciate by the time the heat of summer arrives and you're packing up on a sticky Friday night to go to the cottage.

Oh yes, the seats are easily unbolted and taken out, just in case you wanted to move four pianos or most of your livingroom furniture.

LET WANT ADS WORK FOR YOU!

Our want ads are fast becoming the market place for our readers

Each week, more and more people are discovering these columns to be an ideal way of discovering "Hidden treasure" in their basements. For instance, in the past few weeks, people have bought

A Gingerbread farmhouse	a glad iron
A set of encyclopaedias	twelve refrigerators
A building lot	a jolly jumper
A washing machine	two clothes dryers
A lobster pot	a set of nursing books
24 used cars	a stamp collection
eight bicycles.	four lawn mowers
seven wedding dresses	nine radios and many other items regarded as unwanted by their current owners. in addition, these columns have sold such money making services as

Garden services, Baby sitting and day care, T.V. repair, appliance repair, plumbing services, odd jobs, basement apartments, typing services, telephone canvassing services, typing and secreterial services, bookkeeping, etc etc .

You must have something to sell, or some service to offer which would bring you additional income. After all the cost is so small . . . one dollar pre-paid, or one dollar twenty-five on a billed basis is all it costs to place an ad. in these highly productive columns just call 576-6450 and ask for "Classified" . . . DO IT NOW!

Be a candidate, think it over!

In about two weeks we'll know who among Oshawa's men and women is brave enough to stand for office — be it mayor, controllers, aldermen, public utilities commissioners or school trustees.

Why should our leading men and women stand for office? There are many good reasons.

On Monday Peter Brouwer, editor of This Week addressed the members of the Oshawa Rotary Club about their responsibility to stand for election. As an editorial this week we present excerpts from his remarks because they don't pertain to a Rotary Club alone.

Why don't you think it over?

I'm not singling out the Rotary Club of Oshawa, but I have found over the years that service clubs, with very few exceptions, are no more than mutual admiration societies whose members go around patting each other on the back.

"Service clubs show a pre-occupation

Mayor gets raise

Oshawa's next mayor will take home nearly twice the amount Mayor Bruce Mackey is earning

As of Jan. 1, when the new man takes over, the mayor's salary is $20,000. Plus expenses, to be approved by council.

On a motion of Aldermen John Humphreys and Ross Gibson, city council approved the salary increase this week in a 14 to 3 vote, with Aldermen Alice Reardon and Controllers Dafoe and Shaw voting no

The mayor's position has become almost a full-time one with heavy obligations, Humphreys said, and salary figures he had obtained from other municipalities of comparable size showed Oshawa's salary to be way out of line. (Mayor Mackey earns $11,500 — no expenses.)

A number of aldermen, in their support, stressed that the new mayor be "really full-time." Aldermen Gordon Attersley — he may be a candidate according to some sources — wanted it spelled out to the point of

Sees over 100 by year's end

Shoplifters bring on inflation

The next time you notice a price increase in a product don't blame it all on inflation. Chances are shoplifters have sabotaged the store and are the cause.

Recent figures indicate that one in 10 people steal and only one in 2,000 are caught. Honest shoppers suffer by an annual increase of approximately 15 per cent on most items.

A Toronto judge, who recently passed sentence on a shoplifter, said the time of fines and suspended sentences for shoplifting are rapidly coming to an end and soon jail sentences will be handed out.

Martin Welch, a security agent for Shopper's Drug Mart chain says that shoplifters know no social strata or age limit

"From the time you learn how to walk you are a potential shoplifter," says Mr. Welch.

He says that of all the thousands of people he has apprehended during his career he has never picked up someone who has stolen an article he desperately needs. Shoplifters tend to steal luxury items. Items they feel are overpriced or items which are new on the market and which they hesitate to buy until they find out if they work.

Mr. Welch says many shoplifters justify their

$28,000 for youth

About 100 Oshawa teenagers jammed the council chambers Monday to hear city council approve a $28,000 budget for the Youth Drop-In Centre, complete with full-time director.

For Alderman Ruth Bestwick, council's main liason between the kids and the officials, it was the culmination of some hard work. And so it was for a number of other officials who have pushed hard for a successful drop-in centre.

Aldermen agreed "we'll give you the building and the staff, it's up to you to make it a success." A full report on plans for the Drop-In will be presented in next week's issue.

City council fun beats Laugh-In

By Peter Brouwer
editor

"It beats Laugh-In," somebody said during intermission, and for a while it did, honestly. Ask any one of the 100 or so teenagers in attendance at Monday's city council meeting.

With every chair in the public gallery taken and two dozen teenagers sprawled out easily on the plush carpet, city council gave a true grandstand performance this week.

How witty they can be, these ladies and gentlemen we have elected to run our city.

There is only one thing I'm sorry about — it was just a private showing, really. There was no tv. And I'll bet few of the members of council even noticed the boy and his sweet young thing necking in the public gallery while alderman upon alderman was driving home some fine point.

Amid all the fun, believe it or not, council raised the mayor's salary to $20,000 effective Jan. 1. (for the new man) plus expenses.

And council decided over the objections of some of its members to invite Whitby Council out to dinner once more. (Last time Whitby said 'thanks, but no thanks.')

Council also approved a $28,000 budget for the Youth Drop-In Centre, complete with full-time director.

Dinner with Whitby, no guns, and free bar

A few weeks ago Oshawa asked Whitby out to dinner. Whitby said "no thank you," or words to that effect.

Well, Whitby council did, actually, and it was Oshawa city council extending the invitation. It was to have been a dinner with reps of a number of area councils to mull over the problems of regional government in an atmosphere of relaxation.

The relaxation was closed to the press, but reports have it that the gathering at the Georgian Hotel was a success Area reps and Oshawa reps got along fine before the night was over

When a council motion this week called for another try at dinner with Whitby, Controller Margaret Shaw objected "They turned us down," she said of Whitby. "If they're serious, they'll come to a meeting in the council chambers."

Controller Thomas too objected to dinner, saying "let them come here."

Alderman Jim Potticary objected "You get much more done sitting around a dinner table, when everybody leaves his guns at the door. If we meet in the council chambers, Whitby will be in armor and so will we You can always get more done at a bar than at a desk "

Controller Shaw wondered if Potticary would go "without your armor? " And she added "and a free bar?"

Whereupon Mayor Mackey shot back with a "yes, free bar, the same as you participated in the last time."

Oh yes, Whitby was invited to dinner. With a free bar

"Insufficient evidence"—Gibson

Cut-red-tape-department has six months to prove itself

By Peter Brouwer
editor

Alderman Ed McNeely's scissors to cut city hall red tape came a little closer to the final snip this week

After months of study, proposals and counter-proposals, city council settled on a basic plan of attack to bring about a new Department of Planning and Development, replacing a number of existing city departments.

Council approved Board of Control's decision to put the implementation of the proposal in the lap of R. F. Richardson, deputy works commissioner, whose salary as head of the new department was raised to $22,185 and who was given six months to "put up."

Why six months? Some aldermen wondered.

"We'll know in six months," said Controller McIlveen who defended the Board's recommendation to council. "If it doesn't work six months from now, it never will."

Originally, plans for a new city department were brought on by complaints from Oshawa developers of red tape, especially in the subdivision control department.

Since this department however, is initially not included in the new setup, a number of aldermen raised objections. Alderman Ross Gibson in particular questioned Controller McIlveen at length about the validity of the proposal.

Gibson complained the Board of Control proposal to council provided insufficient evidence. "I was expecting a brief." He agreed that "the administration needs shaking up. I agree to sweeping changes, and we're prepared to accept them . . . but there isn't enough information here to digest or even pass judgement."

Alderman McNeely who instigated the action this year indicated he was not 100 per cent happy with the Board's proposal but he called it "a good attempt at implementation."

He got the Board of Control to delete from its plan a suggestion that Richardson make a report as to "whether or not the Planning Board and the Business and Industrial Development Commission should continue to function, and if so, how."

McNeely pointed out the planning board was a statutory body and that both were creatures set up by council to develop policy in a certain field.

Bib Nicol, commissioner of industrial development and Bill Paynter, urban renewal coordinator attended the meeting with their personnel until midnight. Both departments are included in Richardson's new domain.

Council left itself an "out" in that it decided not to fill the deputy works position of Richardson on a permanent basis until the six months are up.

The decision represents the second time in three years that city council appoints "its own people" to a "big job." Both Nicol and Paynter were elected officials before they were hired in their current positions.

Mostly teenagers

stealing by telling themselves that the store overcharges or that they have shopped in a certain store for so many years they feel they have an investment in the store and are entitled to something for nothing.

Easy to detect

Shoplifters are very easy to detect, says Mr. Wlech. He has got to the point that he can tell the way a person handles an article, the expression on his face, the way he walks or the way he holds an article if he is a shoplifter.

Christmas is the biggest time of the year for Mr. Welch and other security people. Still, he says people steal senseless articles even at Christmas. He says they steal small articles so they will have enough money to buy presents.

November and December bring almost double the amount of offenders. One man was caught stealing two bottles of sun tan lotion in mid winter and had a hard time explaining to the judge why he stole them.

Women by far make up the majority of shoplifters, but children are rapidly increasing as shoplifters.

"I would much rather pick up a youngster as a juvenile than have to apprehend him a few years later when he is an adult and susceptible to a criminal record," says Mr. Welch.

He feels if people were more aware of the consequences of their actions they would not steal so readily. If, as a result of shoplifting you get a criminal record, it is impossible to qualify for bonding, very difficult to get a passport or visa and in some cases impossible to apply for a license or study for a lawyer, druggist or other professions.

Perhaps the most severe penalty is the social disgrace and shame the shoplifter brings to his family and self. The value of the goods stolen are seldom worth this penalty.

Statistics have proven that when security is brought into a store the profits go up and therefore the prices of the goods are decreased accordingly.

The value of the good recovered rarely covers the cost of security but the mere presence of security stops potential shoplifters. The main objective is not to apprehend the shoplifter but the prevent further crimes.

Large department stores in Toronto lose literally millions of dollars per year to shoplifters. Gone are the days when a person who is caught is given a reprimand. Every person caught stealing is charged, unless age is a factor.

Gus Millar, manager of Shopper's Drug Mart at the Midtown Mall says to make up for a $10 item that is stolen he has to sell between $150 and $200 worth of goods. "It's got to the point that we almost dread to see a woman with a baby carriage walk into the store. You would be amazed the number of articles that can be stashed in baby blankets," says Mr. Millar.

Remembrance Day

Remembrance Day services to be held on November 11 will include a wreath laying ceremony at Memorial Park cenotaph. Wreath bearers and other members of veteran organizations in Oshawa will march from the armories to the cenotaph where about 80 wreaths will be deposited. The parade will leave the armories at 10:30 a.m.

Retirement

Alderman Russell McNeil, has announced he will retire from public life and will not seek re-election. The 67-year old alderman took office four years ago when a vacancy occured after the resignation of Mayor Hayward Murdoch.

Fittings invites air pollution experts check

Fittings Limited has invited officials of the Air Management Branch of the Ontario Department of Energy and Resources Management to Oshawa today to view its operations.

Plant Manager Harry Faint said a representative of American Air Filter (Canada) Ltd., the manufacturer of exhaust equipment, will be on hand to discuss the method of checking the efficiency of the company's dust collectors.

Mr. Faint said the company was "mystified" by the sudden attacks on Fittings by neighbours and others.

"Naturally we are concerned about pollution and are co-operating in every way we possibly can with governmental authorities to find ways to reduce it. But this has been our policy for years," he said.

Mr. Faint said the company installed dust screens on its stacks nearly 20 years ago, and converted its heating plant to natural gas in 1962 in an effort to reduce emissions.

"We have spent a great deal of money over many years to install and maintain dust control equipment."

Fittings already has placed a $1.5 million order for electric melting and annealing furnaces but the melting furnaces will not be delivered from the manufacturers until next summer.

Mr. Faint said company officials met last week with the Air Management Branch in Toronto

Council fun

And council approved the study and implementation over a six month period of a new department of planning and development.

A big hand

Several times during the meeting Mayor Mackey called for order. The kids in the gallery showed their appreciation every now and then by applause The red bricks in the council chamber walls nearly turned crimson, and council members were spurred on to greater heights of wit and not so wit. . . .

Alderman Ross Gibson's comment that Oshawa's mayor goes around "in rags" compared to mayors of other centres who are chauffeured around in Cadillacs brought much comment throughout the evening, including a promise from his worship that he would invest in a new suit. (I still think his suit was just fine.)

Controller Christine Thomas observed at one point that after regional government is implemented, the local council (the city's) will be reduced to being in charge of "just dogs and snowclearing."

Controller McIlveen called a motion by Controller Thomas "a real nothing motion," and Controller Thomas returned the compliment a while later when a McIlveen motion was under discussion.

Controller McIlveen stated his dislike of consumer cooperatives in no uncertain terms, and Controller Margaret Shaw told Alderman Humphreys he certainly had not seen life the way she had. (All this had something to do with a 25-year old man playing with a 14-year old girl, during a discussion of age limits for the youth drop-in centre.)

Alderman Norman Down suggested young people consider the hundreds of acres of land around Oshawa to blow off steam. He couldn't see the idea of togetherness — "all these people congregating in one building." Alderman Down is a member of the Seniors Drop-In Centre, across the road from the youth Centre.

At midnight the fun ended, but not until after an enjoyable cross-examination of Controller McIlveen by Alderman Gibson. It was one of the few times in council this year that Gibson came through as a very determined and inquisitive newsman.

Details are in a number of stories in this issue.

240 missing from Oshawa

Last year 240 men, women and children were Oshawa police statistics — missing persons from Oshawa.

Almost all of these people willingly left the city either to escape pressures of work, family or school. The large majority of the missing persons were teenagers with itchy feet.

If the missing person is over 16-years of age the police, of course, cannot force them to return. In many cases the person who has filed the "missing" complaint is advised when the missing person has been found and is safe.

Inspector John Powell says missing persons are treated as very important cases by the police.

"We could be put in a very embarrassing position if we didn't do all we can to locate a missing person and suddenly the person turns up and foul play is involved. People would accuse us of not doing our duty."

It is for this reason that an all-points telex is sent out across the country on missing persons, including a description of their features, the clothes they were last seen wearing, their hobbies, previous jobs etc.

Insp. Powell says adults are far easier to locate than teenagers. The police know the line of work the man used to do, he may have an unemployment card and if he tries to register for unemployment insurance he can be found, or, he may drive a car with a traceable license number.

"Teenagers are unpredictable. Many have never worked so don't have unemployment insurance numbers. They often leave with no personal belongings and often their parents cannot predict where they will go."

Dear Mom and Dad:

I'm sorry, I just can't take it any longer. I have to leave Oshawa I just can't stand school any longer. We don't get along well anymore. Please don't blame yourselves_ you tried.

I'm leaving, I'll be alright. Love Linda

Despite the difficulties in locating missing persons Insp. Powell says the Oshawa police department has a 98 per cent recovery record.

The inspector says there is a seasonal trend to missing persons. Teenagers tend to leave during the summer and adults get itchy feet during the spring.

Many of the young people head for Toronto or Vancouver where Insp. Powell says less discipline and more permissiveness lure them.

Many parents will not file complaints against their run-away son or daughter because family friction could have been the cause for the leaving and they don't want publicity or embarrassment.

But, to the parent who really cares about his child it can be an agonizing period. Not to know where your child is, is terrifying but not to know whether he is a victim of foul play is even worse. The pressures build for the parent and soon he asks that the press be notified to help in the search.

Insp. Powell says he feels the main reason teenagers are leaving is a lack of communication and understanding and pressures from their parents. This, he says, often turns them to rely on drugs which in turn gives them an urge for freedom.

"The whole of society seems to know what to do with the winners but they just don't know what to do with the losers," says Insp. Powell.

In many instances where people have no one to turn to, no one to confide in and no one to solve their problems they decide to drop out of society. They leave behind in some cases, worried, anxious relatives and in other cases a much relieved family — relieved that the problem has left

Of the 240 files on missing persons last year in Oshawa 98 per cent of them are closed. The remaining one per cent is constantly on the minds of the Oshawa police force.

Powell would like to make it 100

Be a candidate, think it over!

with looking inwards. The doing of good work is much too often nothing but a public relations gesture. The hiding your candle under a bushel cannot be found in the Rotary Club, and as for the left hand not knowing what the right hand does, well . . . . . think about it gentlemen.

"Take your Civic Affairs Day, early in the year as an example, why do you really have it? Is it to give some public recognition to a number of Department Heads, politicians and freeloaders who are really only doing the job they are getting paid to do or a good excuse to get together and pat each other on the back? There's a much better way to become involved.

"Just recently at a seminar of the New Democratic Party in Oshawa the ridiculous suggestion was offered that education should perhaps become a City Council responsibility, for reasons of budget control and administrative duplication of effort. This kind of irresponsible posturing, gentlemen, is coming to the fore more and more.

"This kind of crazy suggestion must not go unanswered. But it is an example of what happens when people like you fail to involve themselves to any worthwhile degree.

"I submit gentlemen, that your good works would be much better received by a grateful community if you involved yourselves entirely with action, where at this time it is vitally needed.

"Here are a few examples.

Regional Government It is of uttermost importance that the citizens of Oshawa, individually and collectively, make their presence felt in the regional government deal. So far, and I'll say this in all fairness, Oshawa has been getting a roasting. Not only from Whitby, but also from the Oshawa Area Planning and Development Study's consultants, who appear to be towing the Whitby line. And Oshawa will keep taking a roasting in the months to come, after January 1, unless we come up with some strong men.

"Bruce Makey has done an admirable job in this respect. The citizens of Oshawa, in my opinion, don't realize the void he will leave come January 1st. But unless someone at least as strong and positive comes along, where are we going to be?

Are we going to be a runner-up to Whitby? "In an editorial a couple of weeks ago, we suggested that Oshawa is badly in need of a full-time mayor, and that we cannot possibly attract the type of man we want under the existing terms of reference. I am firmly convinced that our city in its present state needs a full-time mayor, with a full-time mayor's salary and the amenities a full-time mayor of Oshawa must have at his disposal. Our whole thinking in regard to the position of mayor must be revamped. The right man will earn his $25 or $30,000 salary for us several times over. It stands to reason that the present gross remuneration the mayor or individual aldermen receive, divided by the number of hours spent on city business, would result in an hourly rate, which any union man worth his salt, would term politely as slave labor.

"But okay. The politicians volunteered their services to the electorate. They knew the remuneration before they took on the job. They have no ligitimate grievance. To a degree this is true.

"However, as anyone who follows the workings of city council will confirm, discussions with which council is confronted are becoming less and less clearcut by the nature of their complexity and the sheer volume of background information, which must be digested by aldermen in order to make a meaningful decision. This is taking a great deal of the aldermen's personal time, in addition to the regularly scheduled meetings of council and its committees.

"The net result is that many able aldermen who are presently serving the city extremely well, are having very strong reservations about standing for election this time around. Some have said they will definitely not seek another term.

"We are therefore likely to be confronted with a situation next year wherein some of the most able aldermen are simply going to drop out of municipal life, because they can make a great deal more money by giving their undivided attention to their own profession and occupation, and in addition see a great deal more of their families than they ever would if they were back in council.

"This could result in our ending up with a council consisting of retired, semi-retired or people from a family group who are not primary providers for their group.

"What then should be done to ensure we do not end up with a council consisting exclusively of elderly professional procrastinators and others with time on their hands, but without necessarily having the real ability to administer the city effectively?

"It is a very difficult problem, and there is no short answer. Perhaps this is a problem worthy of consideration by the assembled members of Rotary. Stop being grandstanders listening to your weekly guest speaker. Discuss it, amongst yourselves, prepare a brief with your recommendations and submit it to city council.

"Younger members of the community in the 30 to 40 age group, who are front-runners in their own particular occupations, appear not to be interested. The comments most often repeated by these people are "who needs the aggravation of being an alderman" and "why should I deprive myself of seeing my family — if I become and alderman and do the job properly, three or four nights a week will have to be devoted to council business".

"But the present council has made some headway in limiting this aggravation. Some of the members of No. 4969-70 council have sought dilligently for a better way of running the city. So far, nothing concrete has come about. But gentlemen, changes CAN be made. And if men capable of thinking in terms of drastic organizational changes will stand for office, elected officials, before long will be indeed free to concentrate on policy matters. And the limited number of hours necessary will make the position attractive to a great many more members of the community.

"Political action committees should be formed. It doesn't matter whether your Conservatives, Liberals, NDPers, or who knows what. The point is not your political color but that you'll fight for what you believe in. Don't he grandstanders and like the man who, when the Government failed abysmally on a major issue, declared, "but I didn't vote at all."

"Reorganization of council's time is one subject badly in need of change. Take industrial development as another example.

"The way we have been going about it stinks. Why? Because Robert Nichol's mandate is not good enough. The criteria by which the industrial commissioner is judged are how many square feet did he build this year, and how much in taxes is it going to bring in next year. No questions are asked as to whether a plan is esteticaly desirable or whether the plan will stand the test of time. It's still too much a matter of "put it up — a buck is a buck".

"I would suggest, gentlemen, that you can add yet another dimension to pollution — sight pollution. Buildings that are ugly and out of context with their locality. I'm not saying that we go overboard and build gothic reproductions, but there's a great deal of room left to strive for excellence.

"Let's face it, with the current economic situation and the large number of unemployed in the area, just about any industry would be welcome if it would create new job vacancies and tax assessment. But would it? I submit that as of the present, Oshawa is a good place in which to live. However, what if the present policy is carried to its logical conclusion? We would end up with pockets of industrial development throughout the city, and probably, at best, really outstanding new industrial slums. If you don't believe us, go and look at some of the industrial estates assembled in Metro Toronto, and you will understand.

"A lot of our industrial property presents a golden opportunity to be subdivided to really high performance standards. If "I can tell this was the first time you'd ever been to a concert," said the voice on the telephone.

My friend was good and mad. At first I got a little mad too, but somehow, in the end, I think we parted company a little less mad.

My caller, an avid Oshawa Symphony Orchestra enthusiast, took exception to the comments in last week's paper about the lack of smiles or signs that the musicians in the orchestra appeared to enjoy what they were doing during the concert. I suggested that perhaps the entire presentation would be enchanced by a feeling of enthusiasm on the part of the players of instruments. OSO conductor Jacob Groob obviously enjoys the making of music while he's directing, and I suggested — and I still feel strongly about this — that his orchestra visibly join him in his enjoyment.

But according to my caller this cannot be done, and I'm way off base. The musicians must concentrate during the concert, so that "not one note goes wrong" to spoil it all. In other words there's no time for these outward signs of enjoyment.

Perhaps I was wrong. And perhaps I was wrong too about the way an OSO concert winds up . . .

I know I missed the boat in not mentioning how sweet a girl really Miss Bonnie Silver, guest artist is. But then, last week's paper was what we call a "tight" paper, meaning there wasn't enough room for all the stories in their entirety, and in the end we were forced to "bite" some of them.

I know it wasn't very nice to bite Miss Bonnie. Neither was it very nice to bite the usual expert write-up on the concert. So, just to make all our true OSO fans happy, and to convince all those people for whom it certainly wasn't the first time they ever went to a concert that it really was quite an excellent concert, and to also make Jo Aldwinckle happy, who wrote the regular concert review and who is yet another OSO supporter and booster, here goes:

"It may have taken 12 years to do it, but Oshawa Symphony Orchestra reached a high plateau on its upward climb on Sunday night when the music director and conductor Jacob Groob presented an all-Bethoven program and introduced a promising young pianist Bonnie Silver, in her debut performance.

Miss Silver and the orchestra played Concerto No. 4 in G. Major, the theme of which bears some resemblance to the more familiar 5th Symphony. From the opening chords, piano solo, the clarity and interpretation of the 19-year-old performer held the attention of the packed house.

She met the demand of the chromatic passages in the First Movement with balance and assurance and the challenge of the legato sostenuto in the Second Movement with strength and sensitivity, producing a lyrical quality in marked contrast to the decisive statement by the strings.

The Rondo came as a light relief and orchestra and soloist joined forces in a vigorous finale

It was a night of "firsts". For the first time the house was completely sold out and also for the first time the conductor himself gave a solo performance in Romance No. 2 in F Major for violin and orchestra

With perfect control, Mr. Groob developed the graceful theme, unfolding it gently like the opening of a rose to the warmth of the sun, — in this case, the embracing pulsating strings.

The summer recess has given the orchestra renewed stamina. The players entered into the 7th Symphony with a bold approach and maintained the energetic tempo of the "Dance Symphony" throughout.

The cellos and basses were firm and warm in tone, paving the way for the solemn opening of the Second Movement, a funeral march (I believe it was used as background music for Sir Winston Churchill's funeral procession) against which Beethoven wove a counter melody.

The Third Movement was a joyous explosion of sound with the various sections jumping in like acrobats to join in the dance. This makes a great demand on conductor and players, especially at the end of a heavy program, yet the OSO team was unfaltering.

The finale, almost a Cossack dance, was the last hurdle and the musicians soared it to end the program on a peak of achievement.

I guess the whole episode goes to show you that Brouwer here should keep his nose out of things he doesn't really understand and for which to truly appreciate he hasn't got the experience.

Meanwhile, I hope the Oshawa Symphony Orchestra keeps on meeting whatever it plays with balance and assurance and strength and sensitivity and stamina, for ever and ever more, amen.

And, oh yes, I hope they'll do it smilingly the standard is set high enough, and enforced, with no exceptions granted by a future tax hungry council, then we are certain the prestige industries who are keenly aware of the importance of a good work environment, will beat a path to the industrial commissioner's door. Industrial land close to services in the city is a diminishing commodity and accordingly it is a gilt-edged security for the city.

"The city is committed, along with other municipalities, in the industrial development poker game and it will only sweep the pot if it is prepared to bide its time and pick up only those cards that will complement its present stature.

"This course takes plenty of cool and in the process, separates the men from the boys. The choice is clear — we can either play our hand with intelligence, whereupon the city will remain a good place to live, or we can blow the whole opportunity for a fast buck.

"And what about education? Are we falling for more of this "let's hold the line" propoganda, with no attention paid to a trustee's ability to make a judgement on a fundamental issue? I'd like to see some trustees who would look carefully into the motivation of those people who want to become teachers in our schools.

"I am fed up with those politicians who have nothing but destructive criticism to offer. Since the inception of our paper, we at This Week in our criticism have made a point of suggesting a better hole to go to.

"And when you gentlemen are choosing a candidate, you must make sure that among his talents, there is a talent to be able to think creatively and not destructively. We are already overburdened on our city council with negative thinkers."

Sir,

In reply to your correspondent John Purcell, I should like to say that I consider the suspension of the constitution to be the policy of tyranny and the acceptance of this policy to be the philosophy of slavery!

I'm sure we all agree that kidnapping, murder and blackmail must be stopped and that any organization which uses violent methods in an attempt to sway our elected representatives must also be stopped. However we don't have to use a sledgehammer to kill a flea!

Mr. Broadbents action in voting against the War Measures Act was, I believe, one of principle and reason, whereas the governments hasty adoption of this legislation appears to have been an act of black panic.

The FLQ members who committed the despicable acts which we all have engraved on our minds are criminals, and should be hunted down and dealt with under criminal law. But to consider, that in order to apprehend these people and maintain order, it is necessary to suspend the rights and privileges of all Canadians is nothing short of pernicious nonsense.

You don't further the cause of freedom or the practise of democracy by removing them — not even temporarily!

By Gord Fenton.

Sir:

As a former NDP voter, please allow me to congratulate you on the worst piece of editorial idiocy I have ever read. In the future please refrain from dumping any more unsolicited garbage in my mail box.

E. Ward.

Sir:

This is in reply to last week's Open Letter by Mr. John Purcell:

I regret to again see blackness focus upon a very worthy member of Parliament. I speak of Mr. Broadbent, who in my opinion is a knowledgeable man and worthy of his elected post of office. You Sir, have blasted the very characteristics of Canadians, by accepting the War Measures Act as the only direction the Federal Government of Canada could possibly take.

I respect every Member of Parliament who disagreed with the War Measures Act being enforced at this time. If all Canadians would only take a few serious moments and consider the graveness of this act being enforced, they would certainly not agree with the Government's outrageous and injust move.

First of all I am against terrorism whole heartily, and I am certainly against aggression of any form. I do not condone the notorious FLQ, or for that matter the Mafia in the U.S.A., which has spread into the major cities of Canada, at least in theory.

A good point is, and I think Canadians will agree with this, do Americans in the United States suspend the Civil Rights of their citizens when a major and very serious threat occurs to a certain society. No, I think not. The U.S.A. does call a measure of emergency, but never have the States gone as far as taking away the human rights of all of its citizens at the same time. I don't wish to dwell on the Stars, Stripes and Banners, for I don't want to see Canada or Canadians imitate the U.S.A. policy in our own country.

We are Canadians with the right to speak, think, laugh, joke, ridicule, emphasize and even condemn the present Government in Ottawa, and I do not condemn you Mr. Purcell, for in my opinion you have acted very irrationally by writing such a negative letter.

Surely a man of your scope and intellect can see that the Federal Government couldn't handle the situation before and even now, after they have enforced the War Measures Act. This enforcement has brought about the death of a very respected Statesman, and possibly Mr. Cross's death, as well. I not only condemn the FLQ but also think every man or woman connected with this act of terrorism should be brought to justice.

The Quebec and Federal Government have made a very bad example by allowing such a situation and organization get such a deep rooted seat in Canada. There is no place for the FLQ in any society, whether it is Democracy or Dictatorship.

I think many of the Liberals would like to relive the past weeks so they could make a different decision upon the kidnappings that have led to death, disorganization and certainly a respectable amount of panic.

I for one would not wish to have Mr. Laporte's death, or Mr. Cross's death either, upon my conscience. There certainly were alternatives. I know it is easy to say, something else should have been done after it is done. I don't support the Government's actions in regard to the War Measures Act, and I think if there was a census taken in Canada, you would find many, many Canadians do not support the Government's Actions. I was born free and I wish to stay that way, and it hurts to see Canadians lose that specific right, which is the Bill of Rights, that gives and should always continue to give all Canadians, their rights to be free Canadians in a Democratic Society.

I also respect the New Democratic Party, and what's more, I commit myself to say that I am a member of the NDP. This letter is the view of one citizen, not the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Purcell, you accused Mr. T. Douglas of being blind whereas in reality Mr. Douglas had insight not blindness. I cannot take on the defence of such a great man as Mr. Douglas, for he has great wisdom and thought that goes beyond me and undoubtedly your scope of knowledge and humane political dignity. Mr. Douglas is a wise and certainly a thoughtful man in and out of politics. The New Democratic Party has given opposition to the Government when it has been needed and I am very proud that they have given that.

S. Simpson

Sir:

Last week I posed a problem for Ed Broadbent, MP, or at least I thought I had. I suggested that if he had not understood this riding's feelings on the War Measures Act he owed us an apology; if he had understood and wilfully misrepresented us then he should resign. I had not reckoned, however, with Mr. Broadbent's concept of democratic representation. Mr. Broadbent's own estimate of support for the government's action in this riding is 85%. Does his wilful and knowing misrepresentation of this fact in Parliament cause him any qualms? None whatsoever.

On Friday I met Mr. Broadbent on Cable T.V. for a half hour discussion and the conversation continued for more than a half hour off camera. As near as I can gather, Mr. Broadbent's thinking, expressed or implied, runs this way:

1. Since we have a three party system, it is numerically possible for a candidate to be elected by slightly more than one third of those voting.

2. On the premise that an MP represents only those who voted for him, in an election split more or less evenly amongst three candidates, the winner represents one third of the riding.

3. Since the MP now represents less than a majority of his constituents, he has no responsibility to present the majority view on any issue in Parliament.

4. As the MP represents a minority, the relative size of the minority on any given issue is immaterial. That is, if most of those who voted for him share the view of those who did not, it is still of no consequence since the principle of minority representation is operative. The minority has merely become smaller

5. Point 4 can be pushed to the point where the minority represented consists of only one person: the MP himself There is no logical contradiction for such an extension in the philosophy.

6. Since the MP is freed by this philosophy from any responsibility for being representative, participatory democracy is a concept worse than useless, it is an unnecessary interference in his prerogatives.

7. "Democracy" for all but MP's consists of a two minute period every four to five years when the individual marks a ballot. Between these markings the individual has no voice.

The vote on the War Measures Act is an example of this philosophy in application. Mr. Broadbent estimates support for the government's action in this riding at 85%. He did not voice this opinion in the House because he does not feel any responsibility to say anything which does not agree with his own views, regardless of how many of his constituents may feel that way.

(Quite separately from this philosophy, Mr. Broadbent feels that 85% of you were incapable of reaching a rational decision on the matter anyway. If you agreed with the government, your ignorance was compounded by hysteria. He, and the NDP, feel compelled to save you from yourselves. The Liberal Party, the Conservative Party, and 85% of the country have had their good sense swept away by exaggerated fear of bogey men. The colossal gall and arrogance of such a claim to superiority will be remembered, I hope, at the next elections.)

Consider some of the implications of such a philosophy. If the New Democratic Party were elected as the government of the country, they would represent slightly more than one third of the population according to this theory. We would then have rule by a minority. Such a government is not new, for through history rule by minorities has been a commonplace occurrence. Depending on the nature of the minority, the system of government has been called plutocracy, aristocracy, communism, facism, or dictatorship. In no case, to my knowledge, has rule by a minority been seriously considered a democracy. Perhaps this is the reason for the "New" in the party's name. The New Democracy of the NDP would be the first in history to claim the title for minority rule.

Consider further to what such a situation could lead. Since the party, now in power, does not feel responsible even to those who voted for it, it has a completely free hand. If it should, in its superior wisdom, decide that the good of the country would only be served if it were continued in office without the danger of being voted out in an election, what is to prevent a move to cancel elections? Certainly not the political philosophy espoused by Ed Broadbent. We would have to depend on nothing more than the good will of the NDP. That might be a safe enough gamble with the people presently representing the party, but what about the future? There is nothing in this political philosophy which would exclude a man or a group, bent on serving their own ends, from usurping the whole system. The only measure, short of force, which can prevent the opportunity for such abuse from arising is a political philosophy which insists that an MP and the government, must be responsive to majority views. I believe the Liberals and Conservatives hold such views.

On Friday during our off-camera discussion in front of witnesses, I said "I contend that in a democracy, an MP must represent the views of the majority of his constituency." Ed Broadbent replied, "That's a lot of shit."

What do you think?

John Purcell

Threatened tough legislation on snowmobilers by municipalities and the Ontario Department of Transport will not be taken lightly by more than 100,000 owners in Ontario. Common sense can not be legislated by tough laws on the innocent, while a few foolhardy and careless drivers give the sport a bad name.

WHAT IS DIABETES?

Normally, the sugars and starches in food are converted to a form of sugar called glucose. With the aid of insulin, a natural hormone manufactured in the pancreas, the blood stream distributes this glucose to the body cells where it is converted into ready energy or stored for future use.

You may have diabetes when the pancreas fails to produce enough effective insulin. The glucose then accumulates in the blood, and sometimes spills over into the urine. The symptoms, when there are some, may be frequent urination, abnormal thirst, hunger and loss of weight, weakness, itching, blurring of vision and possibly skin infections. Have you had a diabetes test recently? If not, let your physician check you.

YOU OR YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a delivery. We will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people rely on us for their health needs. We welcome requests for delivery service.

THE EDITOR.

Jacob Groob, conductor of the Oshawa Symphony Orchestra is touring schools in Ontario County presenting a series called The Music Makers in which he introduces a live presentation of the violin. Here he shows Melanie Galbraith, a grade one pupil at Grandview School how to hold a violin properly.

by jo aldwinckle

Oshawa was honored last week by a visit from the Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, the Honorable Dr. J.W. Grant McEwan. Tall, craggy, with a pungent wit and a trace of Scottish burr, he related the adventure story of Canada's wheat at a Canadian Club dinner.

"Ask any foreigner what Canada means to him and he will invariably reply 'Wheat'," declared the speaker. "Wheat means bread. It has won good friends for Canada and good public relations. It is the biggest earner of foreign exchange. It is every Canadian's business to know something about this stuff that put the prairies on the map."

Wheat, he said, was Canada's success story fraught with disaster and overwhelming odds.

When the Selkirk Settlers, Scottish refugees, arrived at Fort Gary (Winnipeg) in 1812, they carried with them ninety pounds of wheat seed. Planted with Presbyterian faith and hope, it failed to mature. They sent to Scotland for more seed which arrived in 1814, — frozen.

Year after year, they planted seed. In 1824 they produced a decent return and for the next fifty years, nourished the plant until by 1874 they grew enough for their own use. The next year, the grasshoppers stripped the stalks.

In 1876 a delegation from the settlement set off for Wisconsin to procure seed. They returned with "Red Fife" and a new era began

David (Red) Fife was a Scottish immigrant who had settled near Peterborough, Ontario. Striving to grow wheat, with successive failures, he wrote to a seaman friend in Glasgow asking him to send seed From the mere handful he finally received and planted, one stalk survived (invading cattle ate the rest) to become the famous Red Fife, that loved the western soil.

In 1876 the Selkirk Settlers sold over 856 bushels to Toronto millers. The next year the millers came back for more and 24 years later they bought 50 million bushels. The wheat farmers were opening up the West

However, although Fife flourished in the western soil it matured late and was frequently spoiled by early frost.

Dominion cerealists were striving to produce the ideal hybrid by mating Fife with other strains They sent 23 pounds of seed to Angus McKay who planted it in 1907, '08 and '09 when he reported success with a new early wheat with Fife's qualities, which he named "Marquis"

Seager Wheeler an English immigrant from the Isle of Wight, living north of Saskatoon planted Marquis and won first prize at the Regina Seed Fair. His wheat won top honors at the Chicago World's Fair and the CPR $1,000 prize.

Seager Wheeler, a small man, who had been refused enlistment in the Royal Navy on account of his lack of stature, found himself a big man among grain farmers. He was five times champion and since his day every year the West has won championships from the seed he developed.

In 1916, the crop looked good. Then, two weeks before maturity, it rusted. Success and disaster have sparred through the story of wheat. Biologists have produced new varieties, all related to Fife, which probably originated in Danzig

The yield has climbed since the drought of the 1930's until last year the bins and elevators were brim full, — abundance, but no markets. One thousand million bushels were in storage

Within the past 90 days, the situation has been reversed. The recent transaction with China promises to make 1970 a peak year with the greatest grain movement in Canadian history

"Thanks to the fierce determination of those lonely Selkirk Settlers, wheat, the stuff that makes bread, is Canada's ambassador of goodwill," concluded His Honor

Oshawa YWCA marks silver anniversary

By Jo Aldwinckle

Peek into the YWCA any weekday or evening and it will be unlikely that you'll find an empty room. The ABC of adult activities starts with Antiques and Archery and lists 28 clubs and classes to appeal to a wide variety of tastes and inclinations as far removed as Glamorous Grandmothers' Keep-Fit Class to Re-upholstery Know-How.

There is a Cardian Rehabilitation program with a physician in charge and a Nursery School. Youth activities run a comparable gamut and the drawing room and library are frequently used for meetings by other clubs while the cafeteria offers home-cooked meals for residents and the public

There is accommodation in the residence for 36 young women under 35 years of age, mostly in the 18-25 age group. Here, "on their own" for the first time and strangers in the community may live in friendliness and mutual help and still gain a sense of independence with security

It hasn't always been like this. Twenty-six years ago, the premises stood empty, the property of Colonel and Mrs. R.S. McLaughlin. It had been the former home of their daughter, Eileen, and her husband, Colonel W. R. Phillips.

Built in 1929 by the firm of Darling and Pierson in the style of an English manor house, the building stood in 4½ acres of landscaped property, surrounded in part by a high brick wall and partly by a wooden wall.

The grounds were formerly the Cowan property, adjacent to Bishop Bethune College which preceded the Oshawa Central Collegiate Institute on that site. The house has a floor space of 15,000 square feet and over forty rooms. At the time of the gift, December 19, 1944, it was assessed at $64.775.

Colonel and Mrs. McLaughlin had noted for some time that the women of Oshawa had no place to hold meetings; the working girl needed a place to live and the teenagers had no suitable place in which to gather. It was to fill these needs that the offer of the beautiful residence and its handsome furnishings was made to the National Council of the YWCA.

At the main entrance, one passes into the long hall through a vestibule with hand-wrought iron gates of beautiful design The first room on the south side of the hall is the panelled library with a large fireplace. Then comes the drawing room with its hand-wrought Italian marble fireplace. French crystal chandelier and furnishings including a Steinway grand piano, an original Adams sideboard, blue Chinese rug and damask settees and chairs

The dining room, also facing south is panelled and off it is a breakfast room with black and white tiled floor, a fireplace and French doors opening on to a terrace.

The only major change on the main floor was to the kitchens which were converted into a cafeteria. Drawers and cabinets saved from the butler's pantry when removed, became useful in the craft shop and basement kitchen set-up for club use.

The main stairway is one of the attractions of the house with its grey-white stairs and walls, black wrought-iron railing, red carpeting and large, stained-glass windows.

Under the guidance of the National Council, a provisional planning committee was set up which functioned for about one year while alterations in the building were being made

The inaugural meeting of the first board of directors took place July 4, 1945 when Mrs. T.K Creighton was elected president

The "Y" ended its first year in good financial standing. The revenue, including $5,500 from the Community Chest was $7,642 and expenses amounted to $6,672 so the "Y's" policy of careful budgeting was in effect from the very beginning. This year the grant from the United Appeal was $38,171 and the program expenditure amounted to $34,496.

The dedication and formal opening on December 7, 1945 climaxed a year of work and planning. The name, "Adelaide House" recognized the generosity and public spirit of the late Mrs R.S. McLaughlin, whose portrait hangs in the hall The official opening was performed by Mrs. Albert Matthews, wife of the then Lieutenant-Governor.

The years during which Miss Elizabeth Pitt was executive director were progressive and far-reaching and the committees continued to expand the activities and membership of the YWCA.

In 1952 Miss Pitt resigned and was succeeded by Miss Ruth Higgins during whose tenure of office a planning committee was named to investigate the need for expansion. As a result, Colonel McLaughlin donated the cost of a new building with a fully-equipped gymnasium.

This building which has enabled the "Y" to extend its program greatly was formally opened by Colonel McLaughlin's daughter, Mrs. Churchill Mann, September 20, 1966. Along with recreation, the work of counselling and guidance has continued.

In June, 1970, Miss Higgins retired after serving as executive director for 17 years. She was succeeded by Miss Barbara Copp who had been program director for two years.

The 25th anniversary year coincides with the 100th anniversary of the YWCA of Canada. A special anniversary tea and bake sale is to be held next Wednesday, November 11.

Presidents of the Oshawa YWCA have been: Mrs. T.K. Creighton (1945-1948); Mrs Michael Jacula (1949); Mrs. F.N. McCallum (1950-1952); Mrs. O.D. Friend (1953-1955); Mrs. H.B. Armstrong (1956-1959); Miss Vera Moyse (1960-1961); Mrs. Michael Jacula (1962); Mrs. H.S. Myers (1963-1965); Mrs. A.G. Hiltz (1966-1968); Miss Helen Pardon (1969 and the current president).

YWCA of Canada 100 years

By Jo Aldwinckle

While Oshawa YWCA is celebrating its 25th anniversary, the Young Women's Christian Association of Canada is observing its centenary this year. To meet the requirements of a changing society, the "Y" has broadened its concepts, yet its founding purpose . . . "to build a fellowship of women and girls, united by Christian love to understand and help each other and to reach out and beyond in world service" . . . still stands firm.

In Saint John, New Brunswick in 1870, the first YWCA in Canada was organized. Agnes Amelia Blizard (Mrs. Joseph Bogart) was 25 years old when she became the first president.

The first project was to meet the needs of girls arriving from Britain to make their living in a new land.

In 1936, aged 91, Mrs. Bogart wrote her memoirs of those days: "We mapped out our program, — weekly visits to the gaol, hospitals and homes needing help, a home for fallen girls and a weekly prayer meeting in any court or alley where the occupants would allow us to hold it in their kitchen.

In 1873, the second Canadian YWCA was organized in Toronto.

Flying club celebrates 25th with Mexican fiesta

By Frank Rutter

The Oshawa Flying Club celebrated its 25th anniversary on the weekend with a Mexican Fiesta at the Polish Veterans Hall. The Mexican atmosphere was provided by Aeronaves de Mexico.

In true Mexican style, the festivities started with the breaking of the Pinata, a huge hollow animal figure made of papier mache, filled with candies and small gifts, which is suspended by a rope in the centre of the hall. A girl is blindfolded then asked to smash the figure with an eight foot pole . . . only one snag, some guy at the side of the hall holds the other end of the rope which holds the pinata, and manages to haul the figure out of reach each time the girl swings

After a succession of vain attempts by other girls, the Pinata was finally broken by Margo Slocombe.

Then came the mad scramble for gifts and candies which spilled out all over the dance floor

This is one of the best ways I have seen to get a party going, and from that moment on, the party went with a swing.

Some of the people had arrived in fancy dress costume, and these were judged and prizes awarded. Aeronaves de Mexico, besides providing the Pinata and the flight bag prizes, presented a plaque to the Oshawa Flying Club to mark the occasion.

The highlight of the evening was a draw for two air tickets to Mexico via Aeronaves de Mexico . . . this prize was won by Mr. and Mrs. Bill Heron members of the club.

Presentations were made to past Presidents of the Club, and to other officials who had given outstanding service to the club.

In his address, President Geo V. Ireland, thanked the members of the club and Aeronaves de Mexico for all the "Behind the scene" work which had gone into organizing the fiesta, and reiterated the sentiments of all present, that Oshawa Flying Club is the most successful in all Canada, and could go on to be the most successful in the world.

Among the guests were Mayor and Mrs. Bruce Mackie of Oshawa, Mayor and Mrs. Desmond Newman of Whitby, The Commissioner of parks and property Pat Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy. Representing Aeronaves de Mexico were John Hindercyckx District Manager, and Mrs. Hinderyckx, Xavier Vilada, who did a fantastic job as M.C., Mr. Lopez, Miss Chavaz and Mrs. Monroe.

The Air Cadets of 151 Squadron, Oshawa acted as doormen, and Mexican music was provided by Ted Gerard and his band from Toronto.

The Pinata started the ball rolling at the Oshawa Flying Club's 25th anniversary celebration. From left: Xavier Vilada, Martha Chavez and George Slocombe, the club's secretary-manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Heron won the Flying Club's trip to Mexico.

Underpass

Road expansion work in the Ritson Road South underpass under Highway 401 will necessitate the construction of a separate $88,000 pedestrian underpass. The city current tax revenue will pay out $1,562 with the remainder of the costs being met through a department of highways subsidy.

TAKE-A-BREAK

Copper tooling, discussion groups, visits to the Art Gallery, travel talks, fashion, panels on youth concerns, first aid, and many more topics of interest to housewives are all included in the many activities that the Whitby Y Ladies-Takes-A-Break have organized. In each of the programs different series of interests are developed. Now in it's third year the Y group at St. Mark's United Church Hall has enjoyed a wide variety of programs including visits to the Oshawa Art Gallery, potteries, fashion shows, travel, etc.

Y SWIM CLINIC

The Whitby Y Swim class held at Vanier Pool from 1 to 2 p.m. have a special feature for the older student or adult who wishes to learn to swim or to improve a limited skill in swimming. Known as the Swim Clinic each class features coaching according to the needs of the individual. The regular Y Swim Bus Service is available picking up from various parts of Whitby and from Brooklin and return. Phone the Y for information. The next series of Swim Instruction will begin on Saturday, November 14th. Four separate classes are organized from Tadpole to Life Saving. The Whitby Y has 3 hours pool time each Saturday at Vanier Vocational School and one hour at the Oshawa Centennial Pool Enquiries should be made at the Whitby YMCA.

POTATO POWER

Great daily replays, interest in potato goodness never flags because potatoes are changeable as the weather!

Cook them in chicken bouillon with scallions, making a cream sauce out of the liquid. You'll find another reason they're in such enormous demand.

SCALLION POTATOES

2 pounds potatoes
1 1/2 cups chicken broth
1/4 cup chopped scallions
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons flour

Pare potatoes. Cut potatoes into halves or quarters, as desired. Turn potatoes into medium saucepan with 1-1.2 cups chicken broth, scallions and salt. Cook, covered, until potatoes are just tender. Do not drain. Mix flour with remaining 1/4 cup broth to make a smooth paste. Pour into potato mixture, stirring constantly. Heat to boiling point, stirring constantly. Makes 6 servings.

SWORDS

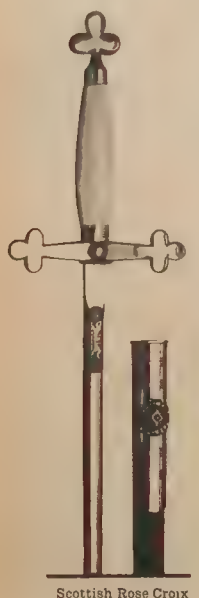
Although the Wilkinson Sword people are best known for their razor blades and garden tools, they are the largest manufacturer of swords in the world

The wide variety of swords they make is perhaps the main feature which has prevented the craft from dying under the pressure of more modern methods of production

Graham Jackson of Wilkinson Swords was in Oshawa last week to display several of the company's products. He had many commemorative swords with him ranging in value from $60 to over $1,000

Wilkinson makes over 1,000 different varieties of swords including custom made swords of any specification for the individual buyer.

Perhaps their most famous line of swords are the commemorative swords made for certain events in history such as the investiture of the Prince of Wales, the Apollo XI moon landing and the Battle of Britain swords



Each commemorative issue is made in limited quantities and Mr. Jackson said even an offer of $1 million would not induce the company to make a certain issue once the limit has been produced. The cast is destroyed once the alloted issue is made.

Only a certain percentage of each issue is allotted to specific countries to make sure people in all nations have an opportunity to purchase the sword.

Morocco is the only country which requests the swords they buy be sharpened. Mr. Jackson says this is because they still have laws which say a man's hand is to be cut off if he is caught stealing.

A replica of Captain Cook's sword was made from the real sword found in a Calgary museum. Two swords were made of 24 carat gold selling at $1,500 each while 1,000 other were made from silver.

The value of the commemorative sword increases with time and many people collect the swords solely for profit

Bridge

A new bridge carrying Gibb Street over Oshawa Creek was given approval by the public works department last week. The four-lane road and sidewalks will cost $180,000. Net cost to the city will be $92,500, the remaining will come from a department of highways subsidy.

Fire

A fire at the dance hall at Geneva Park, about two and a half miles north of Taunton Road on Ritson Road completely demolished the building. Damage is estimated at $25,000 with an additional $8,000 damage to the contents. The fire occured just four hours after a special Halloween dance ended at 1 a.m.

Raise mayor

"how many hours a week."

Alderman Humphreys stated his move was made partly to make the position attractive so "someone would be interested."

Alderman Reardon agreed to "a raise", but not to $20,000 and called the mayor's job "a soft job and pretty good deal." She said she objected to someone who would have "no experience in municipal affairs."

Alderman McNeely — another candidate for the job according to some sources — said the salary increase would not make any difference one way or another in his decision whether to seek the position, but in his opinion the position of mayor was not a "soft touch." Discussing the Attersley idea of "hours" McNeely said "this council doesn't even have the authority to rule out who can, and who cannot run." He added that "no political position is defined in such terms."

Alderman Gibson observed that if Oshawa was to be "Central City" a competent leader was required.

Controller Dafoe wanted time to think it over and was "disturbed" by the idea of "using the salary of our top officials as a criteria."

Controller Thomas (a former mayor) said the city could never pay a good mayor enough money. She called for a re-examination of the mayor's salary when regional government takes effect (Her motion to this effect was later lost for lack of a seconder.)

LONELY? DEPRESSED? TRY 576-4781

By Elaine Hallam
staff reporter

All systems are go at the Oshawa Distress Centre, which has been open since October 20. ODC offers the lonely, depressed and suicidal a sympathetic and friendly shoulder to lean on.

By calling 576-4781, any one who has no one to turn to will be heard. The centre is open from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. seven days a week. Eventually, depending on its success, it will be expanded to a 24-hour a day service.

Two key words in running the centre are "confidential and anonymous." Calls are handled on a first name basis and all information is strictly confidential.

The Centre is patterned after the Toronto Distress Centre. The location of the centre and the names of the volunteers who man the phones are kept secret.

In August of this year the Toronto centre received 1,043 calls some of which originated from Oshawa. For the first time in five years the number of recorded suicides in Toronto has dropped from 217 in 1968 to 215 in 1969. The centre likes to think there is a parallel between its service and the decrease and there may well be.

A study carried out recently in England, documented in "Canadian Mental Health" noted that in 20 cities where the survey was carried out there was a five per cent drop in suicides in cities that had a distress centre and a 12 per cent INCREASE where there was no centre.

Mrs. Shirley Lavis, director of the centre, says it is too early to predict any trends in the type of calls or callers at Oshawa.

"All we know is that the phone rings day and night continuously even when the centre is not open. We are planning to have Bell Telephone monitor the calls to see how many we receive and to use this as a basis for additional phones if needed."

At the moment there are 30 trained volunteers who have gone through an initial training period of four nights for three hours a session. A volunteer requires continuous training.

"We are always looking for more volunteers and the ideal person is one who can listen and know what people are feeling. This can be done by the tone of voice, or, sometimes a sigh at the right time can say as much as words," says Mrs. Davis.

A volunteer can arrange for an interview by writing Box 472 or by calling the centre. Both men and women are needed and Mrs. Lavis says the best type of volunteer is often the person who "ponders" for a while and worries about the job.

The Distress Centre got its beginnings from the Social Planning Council of Oshawa who, on the recommendations of the Canadian Mental Health Association, appointed a board of directors to look into the need for such a centre in Oshawa

Jim Henderson, chairman of the board of directors says: "we gathered basic statistics and felt there was a sufficient need for a distress centre in Oshawa."

It took one year from the planning stage until the Distress Centre became a reality three weeks ago. At the moment the centre is running on donations from such service groups as the Kinsmen and from personal donations

Mr. Henderson says operating expenses are kept as minimal as possible. Money is needed to pay for printed cards with the number on them, the salary of the part-time director and, of course, telephone bills.

As soon as the Distress Centre has proven to the public the great service it is operating then the board of directors will proceed to raise money.

The Distress Centre is a community effort and has no affiliation with any religion or service organization. Anyone who wishes to phone may do so whether he lives in Whitby, Ajax, Bowmanville or Toronto (incoming long distance calls are paid for by the caller).

A list of referral agencies is kept by the phone so that if a person needs or wants professional help the volunteer can refer him to the proper channels.

Mr. Henderson hopes, in time, as funds and the need become available the centre will operate on a full-time basis.

"This must be a community effort and it must receive the support of the community. The Distress Centre must not falter because it would have been better not to start at all than to fail," says Mr Henderson

Welfare Budget

Board of control last week approved an additional $50,000 for the social services budget to cover the increasing load of welfare cases. This is the second additional grant and will bring the social services' gross budget to almost $2 million this year.

Twin Arena

The official opening of Harman Park Twin Pad Arena took place last week. Each of the two ice surfaces, equipped for hockey, lacrosse or roller skating, is 14,400 square feet.

OPEN SHOW

The final collection of pictures for rental from the McLaughlin Public Library was opened on exhibition last Thursday evening by the chairman of the Library Board Alderman Gordon Attersley. Initiated by Mrs. Marjory Oxenham the first rental service started in May, 1967 with a circulation of 156 which by 1969 had grown to 436. Next year the service will be the responsibility of the McLaughlin Art Gallery.

On police station site

Major industry to rubble

By Jo Aldwinckle

The demolition squad has just about finished its work and soon the old "Piano Works", as it was familiarly known will have disappeared to make way for a new Police Station.

The "Piano Works" had a proud history

According to the Oshawa Daily Telegram of Saturday, March 8, 1924, the piano and church organ industry of R.S. Williams and Sons was established in Oshawa in 1888 by R.S. Williams of Toronto. It was said to be the best equipped in Canada and equal to the best in any other country.

Mr. Williams purchased the property of the Joseph Hall Works, manufacturing agricultural implements and printing presses and expended a large sum of money in adapting the works to his business.

The old buildings were repaired throughout and reroofed with slate; new hardwood floors were laid. Extensive new buildings were erected on Duke Street, very much lengthening the front of the works, affording necessary floor space.

(Duke Street is the present Richmond Street, named for the Governor-General, the Duke of Richmond)

The history of the site is as follows:

In 1852 the brick buildings of the Oshawa Manufacturing Company were erected and industry established to manufacture agricultural implements and farming hand-tools but, owing to the hard times, this company was compelled to go out of business. Dr. McGill, A.S. Whiting and others were the enterprising citizens composing the company.

In 1858, the well-known implement maker, Joseph Hall of Rochester, N.Y. purchased the works. Mr. Hall, through his manager at Oshawa, retained not only the patrons of the old company but made rapid expansion of this business for a period of thirty years. These works were the largest of its kind in Canada.

The large payroll added greatly to the prosperity of Oshawa. During most of these years, from 1863, Mr. Hall's son-in-law, F.W. Glen, was the manager and it is only fair to state that he largely aided in establishing many other industries in the town.

The Joseph Hall industry ceased operation in 1886. Most of the workmen found employment in other industries.

The Williams Piano Company Limited began in 1849 when Richard Williams started to make pianos in Toronto. The business grew steadily year by year and in 1890 was moved to Oshawa where immense factories were built and the latest machinery installed.

The Williams piano became better and better known until by 1911 the factory employed 250 skilled mechanics, with an annual output of some 3,000 pianos and player-pianos.

In 1911, the factory of solid brick covered a whole town block and was three storeys high. The main building was 386' x 50' in dimension, while the two wings (east and west) were 180' x 50' and 104' x 50', thus giving the company a total floor space of over 100,000 square feet, besides several smaller buildings, large lumber yards, railway sidings etc.

In 1902, the company was re-organized and the men put in control of the business were students of the highest art in piano construction as well as practical piano makers.

An entire revision was made in the whole instrument in scale, acoustics, tone, touch, action and case design.

The New-Scale Williams Piano emerged as the embodiment of all that was beautiful in tone and design with unequalled lasting powers. The improved instrument gave added impetus to the sales and the progressive business policies of the new officers increased the output from two or three instruments per day to the immense total of some 3,000 per annum.

The sale of the New Scale Williams Piano and Player-Piano covered Canada from coast to coast, while export business grew steadily to foreign countries.

A large amount of business came from west of Port Arthur, the people through the West figuring that when bringing an instrument from the East they had better bring the best possible.

The officers of the company at that time were: President and managing director, Frederick Bull; vice-president and eastern Canada manager, George E. Dies, Montreal; Western manager, E.C. Scythes, Winnipeg; secretary-treasurer, F.W. Bull.

Producion increased to 4,000 instruments per annum until Williams became the largest manufacturing establishment of its kind in the British Empire shipping from Oshawa to seven foreign countries.

The piano was the pride of every home. The pin blocks of the Williams pianos were made of Canadian hard maple, seasoned for years and the sounding boards were made of Ontario spruce.

Basswood and chestnut were used for the core and the veneers were of walnut or mahogany one-sixteenth of an inch thick.

Mr. D.B. Carlyle of Oshawa recalls the success of the Williams Piano exhibit at the Wembley Exhibition, London, England in 1926. That was the year the orthophonic victrola made its debut. A new method of reproduction on records made the victrola the most popular instrument in the home.

Williams went into the radio business and in three years became the 7th largest manufacturer of radios in Canada. To keep the hands employed winter and summer Williams started to build canoes and rowboats and was ahead of its time in building sea-fleas.

The proud days of piano making were over. Williams was producing neutrodyne radios, ten and 11-tube sets and disaster struck when the inventors of the superhetrodyne, five, six or seven tube sets flooded the market. DeForest-Crossley and Rogers-Majestic went bankrupt; Williams Company lost $75,000 in that year.

Depression was closing in and in 1931 the "Piano Works" as it was always called, closed. D.B. Carlyle was the last general manager and Charles Peacock, superintendent.

During the war years the government used the building as barracks for the Royal Electrical Mechanical Engineers and after 1946 several light industries, Cole of California, Sklar Furniture, the G & B Company and others occupied the east and west wings, while Coulter's were located in the central section.

The Canadian Corps Unit 42 bought the west wing in 1950.

The Remembrance Day Service for the Citizens of Oshawa will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 11th at the Cenotaph in Memorial Park. Wreath bearers and other members of veteran organizations in Oshawa will parade from the Oshawa Armouries to the Cenotaph where approximately 80 Wreaths will be deposited. These include a Wreath from the Province of Ontario, The City of Oshawa, All Veteran organizations in Oshawa, All Service Clubs of Oshawa, The Secondary Schools, Oshawa Catholic High School, and this year a special contingent of school children bearing Wreaths from the various school areas in Oshawa.

The Service is being organized by Branch 43 Royal Canadian Legion in co-operation with the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce and interested School officials. Rev. Alfred Woolcock, Padre of Branch 43 will conduct the Service aided by Major N. Coles of the Salvation Army. Music will be provided by the Band of the Salvation Army. Col. Wm. C. Paynter will act as Master of Ceremonies.

The parade will form up at the Oshawa Armouries at 10:00 A.M. and will move off at approx. 10:30 A.M. and proceed to the Cenotaph under the direction of Pete Stephenson, Sgt. at Arms of Branch 43. The Band of the Ontario Regiment and Branch 43 Pipe Band will provide the marching music.

The Attendance of Oshawa Citizens at the Service last year was one of the largest in many years and it is hoped that the citizens will turn out in even greater numbers this year to Honour those who paid the supreme sacrifice in defence of freedom.

Five of seven hospitals accredited

Abortion figures high for Oshawa and region

While less than one third of all Ontario hospitals are performing abortions the statistics are much higher in Oshawa and region with five out of seven hospitals accredited to perform abortions.

A hospital must be accredited by the Canadian Hospital Association before it can apply. It then must have a by-law amendment by the lieutenant governor of the province which in turn is forwarded to the Ontario Hospital Services Commission for final approval.

Once approval is given, the hospital must appoint an abortion committee comprised of one psychiatrist and several physicians. They meet regularly to judge the cases presented to them by the personal doctors of pregnant woman.

The OSHAWA GENERAL HOSPITAL was the first hospital in the area to receive approval. (see other story)

The AJAX-PICKERING hospital is performing abortions and has to date received 16 requests and performed 14 abortions. These figures are based on the period from January 1970 to the end of August.

The PORT PERRY COMMUNITY MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, although not fully accredited received final permission to perform abortions just last week. In this short period since approval doctors there have not as yet performed any abortion operations.

Hospital administrator Ben Bohan anticipates requests from local women but he does not believe the hospital will be deluged with requests from women in other areas.

"The woman has to apply to a doctor on staff and it would seem unlikely for a doctor to make application for a woman he has never seen before," says Mr. Bohan.

He said the hospital has Oshawa specialists on staff to perform the operations.

The COBOURG GENERAL HOSPITAL has received permission to perform abortions and does so "as medically required".

Hospital administrator J. Abrams refused to disclose statistics. "This promotes people descending upon the hospital demanding abortions," he said.

BOWMANVILLE HOSPITAL has received interim permission while its application is awaiting final approval at the OHSC. R. E. Elston, administrator said he would not make any comment as to whether the hospital is performing abortions or not.

The PORT HOPE HOSPITAL, according to administrator R. Davis, cannot perform abortions because it has not received accreditation as yet.

"At the moment we are awaiting a hospital survey, and then I am sure we will apply for approval. This may take up to one year."

DR. JOS. O. RUDDY HOSPITAL in WHITBY, which was just opened in June is awaiting by-law amendment. "Hospital policy will be based on this approval," says administrator R. A. C. Ranny.

At Oshawa over 90 per cent approved

Over 90 per cent of the cases before the abortion committee at the Oshawa General Hospital are approved.

As of October 20 there had been 97 requests for therapeutic abortions in 1970 and 89 of these requests were approved. The abortion committee, headed by chairman Dr. R. C. Ross, appears to have adopted liberal policies.

However, one fact that would tend to throw a "monkey-wrench" into these figures is that there are still several doctors in Oshawa who will not present a case before the committee and therefore there is no way of telling how many women there are who would like an abortion but cannot get their doctor to take the steps involved.

To qualify for an abortion, a woman must have written documentation from her doctor and a psychiatrist testifying that to continue the pregnancy would endanger her life or her health (both mental and physical).

The Oshawa General Hospital abortion committee is composed of five members, a chairman, 3 physicians and a psychiatrist. None of the doctors on the committee are allowed to perform the operation.

Assistant Administrator David Home says there is no hesitancy on the part of the committee to approve an abortion if it falls within the terms of regulations.

He forsees future amendments to the criminal code which would allow a woman an abortion in the case of rape, incest or where there is a strong risk to the fetus and where it would not necessarily endanger the life or health of the woman.

Hospital statistics prove that a greater number of unmarried women apply for an abortion than do married women.

Although the law allows an abortion up to the 24th week of pregnancy, it is often considered difficult and in some cases dangerous after the 12th week. Once approval is given by the abortion committee it takes less than one week before the operation is performed.

Mr. Home feels the reason more unmarried women apply for abortions can be found in the pressures put on them by society.

"Being unmarried and pregnant can mean being subject to heavy pressure from society and women in this position seek abortion rather than finding another solution such as having the child."

Mr. Home said that although it is a "liberated woman's" right to have an abortion it should also be her right to have the child, and live within society with no recriminations.

The majority of women who receive abortions at Oshawa General Hospital are from within the community.

Mr. Home predicts that the number of abortions will rise to over 100 by the end of the year.

Ontario lowest

According to statistics gathered by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission less than one-third of Ontario hospitals are now performing abortions.

Of the province's 262 hospitals, 86 are allowing the operation under varying circumstances, 71 are definitely not participating, four haven't decided yet and 101 others haven't replied to an OHSC letter dated December 3, 1969.

There is no information available on how the 86 different hospitals each judge whether a woman is eligible for an abortion.

OHSC does report that in July of this year 456 abortions were performed in hospitals and 416 performed in August. More reliable statistics are expected by the end of the year.

As of October 5, 1970 Ontario had the lowest abortion rate in the whole of Canada.

'Pretty grim' drug scene makes people forget alcohol

According to Dr. Cameron Stewart, Medical Officer of Health for Ontario County, alcoholism is very prevalent and "in the overall picture still outweighs other drug abuse."

It is estimated there are close to 125,000 alcoholics in Ontario and perhaps another 125,000 who are alcoholic prone and haven't reached the stage of diagnosis as yet or who haven't accepted the fact that they may be alcoholic.

"There is an urgent need for communities to gather their resources to treat and prevent both alcoholism and drug abuse," says Dr. Stewart.

As a result the Addiction Research Foundation in co-operation with the Oshawa-Ontario County District Health Unit and the Oshawa Recreation Department is sponsoring a two day seminar on alcoholism and other drugs for professional people today and tomorrow.

The seminar is to be held at the Recreation Department, Civic Auditorium Complex with over 100 participants from the fields of medicine, social work, teaching and theology.

Dr. Stewart feels that although the drug scene is "pretty grim" people tend to forget that alcoholism is also every bit as bad a problem.

"Among professionals closely associated with drug dependency and addiction it is recognized that alcohol is as serious a threat to many members of our society as are other drugs when abused," says Dr. Stewart.

Wayne Weagle, consultant with the Addiction Research Foundation calls drug abuse and alcoholism community problems. "It is the responsibility of the entire community to help with these problems," he said.

He said the purpose of the seminar is to focus on what professional people can do to help the person with a drug abuse and alcoholic problem.

"We are also dealing with the attitudes of the professionals. A person in trouble wants to put faith and trust in a professional so must be assured that the professional his the right attitude, says Mr. Weagle.

The seminar is intended to be a launching pad for further studies on what the community can do to combat drug abuse problems.

X-ray clinic in operation

Mrs. C.D. Russell, President, Ontario County Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, announced at the board meeting held this week that the Multiphasic Testing Survey being conducted at the X-Ray Clinic and Testing Centre, Midtown Mall, Oshawa, was again in operation.

Canvassers are now making calls in certain areas, but it is hoped if anyone has been missed that they will call the clinic, 576-8831 for an appointment.

South Simcoe school action up in air

Parents of students attending South Simcoe Public School who recently protested conditions at the school will have to wait at least another month until any final decision is made as to what renovations will be made.

After parents appeared before the Board of Education over a month ago complaining that conditions at the school were "deplorable" the engineering department of the board has made a routine investigation and has come up with a list of what it considers immediate renovations.

When the report was presented to the Board last week the trustees would approve only one of the recommendations: that the instruction rooms in the basement be carpeted, florescent lights be added, the heating system be renovated to a cost of $4,700.

The total bill of $9,900 was presented to the Board as the approximate cost of renovating the school. Included in this was an estimate of $4,250 to overhaul the basement washrooms. This would include improving the ventilation, adding vinyl flooring, florescent lighting and a wall divider between the washroom and the television room which will be turned into a storage room.

Ken Munroe, associate director of education, told the Board a report would be forthcoming in the next few weeks which would give a list of all the schools in the county and the repairs needed.

The trustees were not in favor of spending money on South Simcoe School without first seeing the report.

"We need a list of priorities and I see no reason why South Simcoe School should receive priority over any other school," said Trustee D. Quick.

Trustees Thomas and Williamson were the only two to voice any support for the renovations.

"I think we have been neglecting the older school in our eagerness to build new schools. We have the money so why not go ahead and fix up the schools," said Trustee Thomas.

The Board voted to approve the renovations to the instructional room in the basement.

Some parents of children at South Simcoe School attended at the meeting but would not comment until they had met with other parents.

OLT's next play s took six years to reach the top

"Never Too Late," one of the biggest Broadway comedy hits in many years is coming to the Eastdale CVI Theatre on Nov. 18. The play, to be produced by the Oshawa Little Theatre grew from a momentary thought that struck its author, Sumner Arthur Long, six years before his comedy eventually achieved its epoch-making New York presentation.

One day, while walking down a Hollywood street, writer Long noticed an obviously pregnant woman walking towards him, who seemed to be at least past the age of 50 and looking radiantly happy

"I wonder what her husband said when she first told him of what was going to happen? he thought.

This speculation grew into a film scenario Long wrote about a family blessed with another child long after any more children might have been expected. Long sold it to a film company for $7,500.

The film company filed it. Long decided the story was too good to be lost and bought it back from the film company — whether at the original sale price or at a "used" reduction is not known. After the play's whopping success on Broadway, Warner Brothers bought the film rights for a sum reportedly more than 40 times the $7,500 at which it had first been sold.

But for a long time, the re-purchase of the story seemed to be a bad investment. Long wrote his stage version in eight weeks and spent the next six years having it rejected by just about everybody he submitted it to. The first rejection was from Long's agent who even declined to handle the play. (In commissions he might have earned close to $100,000.)

Another agent rather unenthusiastically undertook to market the play, and submitted it to leading Broadway producers who all said no.

After four years as a lending library item among producers, the comedy finally achieved a stage production in 1960 — at the Bucks County Playhouse, a summer theatre near Philadelphia — under its first title of "Cradle and All." Though audiences guffawed mightily during this week's performance, nobody rushed to follow up the summer tryout with a Broadway production.

Long refused to give up. He sent the play to still another agent, Daniel Hollywood, who became wildly enthusiastic and sent the scripts on more round of Broadway producers, who all sent it back with notes reading "Thanks, but..." and lived to gnash their teeth later at their bad judgment.

Finally a producer said yes — a qualified yes. He would give the comedy another trial in a summer theatre. He was Elliot Martin, who had that season been associate producer of the Theatre Guild or two plays.

In 1961, at another summer theatre, in Maine this time, Martin gave the show the try-out that proved its appeal beyond all doubt — with Paul Ford in the role of the father-to-be in which he scored heavily later on Broadway.

Two exciting new developments followed: First, George Abbott, the man with the most unfailing magic touch as director and co-author on Broadway agreed to direct a New York production if he could first see another staging in another summer theatre. Second, Martin arranged that one of the prime summer theatres on the eastern seaboard — the Country Playhouse at Westport Conn. — would stage it later that summer to give Mr. Abbott a look-see at the comedy in action before an audience.

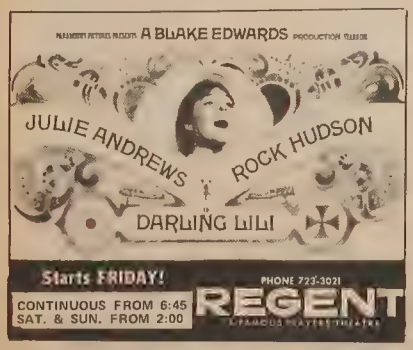
That production at Westport was the clincher. Audiences roared, and George Abbott did too. From there on it was smooth sailing. Elliot Martin and the ever believing Daniel Hollywood decided to join forces and together produce the play in New York. The New York opening took place on Nov. 27, 1962.

Rarely has a play had such a unanimously enthusiastic reception from audiences and critics. Although some New York reviewers were apologetic for having enjoyed themselves at an "unimportant" comedy ("it's merely entertaining, with no significance at all" said one), all of them reported that they had been irresistibly amused and that other first nighters had howled with glee. An overwhelming hit was born. For many months "Never Too Late" was Broadway's "hottest ticket."

The universality of the play's appeal (the problems of becoming a father in late-middle-age are recognizably funny in any language) led to productions in Australia, New Zealand, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Luxembourg, Algiers, Germany, Austria, the Netherlands, Mexico, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Rhodesia, Turkey, Italy, Israel, Argentina and Spain.

It all resulted from Arthur Sumner Long keeping his eyes open and his mind alert to a story-idea on a Hollywood street.

Boys choir starts next week



The Oshawa Boys' Choir is being formed for boys between the ages of 7 to 14 years. This group is to be sponsored by the Oshawa Recreation Department and is to be directed by Ross Cotton.

Mr. Cotton's experience in choral work is well known. Presently, he is the Choir Director and organist at the Centennial United Church and a member of the Canadian Music Adjucators Association.

With the formation of a boys' choir, a new vitality is added to Oshawa's already developing arts and musical excellence. Community support of this project would further enhance the musical life in Oshawa.

For further information in regard to Oshawa Boys' Choir please call the Oshawa Recreation Department at 725-1111 or Mr. Ross Cotton at 728-2054.

The first rehearsal is to begin on November 13, 1970 in the Music Room of Central Collegiate, Simcoe St. S., Oshawa.

Jacques Perrin, gives a brilliant performance as a prosecuting attorney in the award winning film "Z". The movie closely examines the aftermath of a major political crime — The Lambrakis Affair. The death of Gregorios Lambrakis (Yves Montand) deputy of the Opposition in Parliament, which turns out to be murder rather than accidental leads to an extensive investigation. The film shows the inner workings of a totalitarian regime where the army and police maintain power. At the end we witness the overthrow of the government and a coup d'etat. "Z" is being shown at the Marks Theatre beginning November 4 and is well worth seeing.

MODD awaits blast-off

The project MODD — Music In Oshawa A Design For Development, awaits a blast off in Oshawa on Friday, November 13, 1970 at 9 a.m.

The Oshawa Recreation Department, the Youth and Recreation Branch and Curriculum Section of the Ontario Department of Education sponsor this four-phased program to evaluate and express the musical and arts needs and resources of our community.

All students of band music in the secondary schools of Ontario County are requested to attend the band instrumental workshops on Friday, November 13. On Saturday morning, November 14 1970 all community instrumentalists are invited to attend the workshops, observe a rehearsal and discuss methods of study, instructing and performing band concerts. Discussions will be led by members of the University of Western Ontario Band. The public is also invited to attend a concert by the University of Western Ontario Band on Friday, November 13, 1970 at 8:30 p.m. at the new auditorium of O'Neill Collegiate. Tickets are on sale at $1.50 for adults and $1.00 for students at the Oshawa Recreation Department

Drumlins on Ghost Road

The Oshawa Naturalists' Club held its monthly meeting in the auditorium of McLaughlin Library. After a brief business meeting, members took turns reviewing topics on which they had been asked to do research during the past month. These covered a wide range, beginning with a list of waterbirds seen at Willow Beach on different dates in October. Then followed a report on galls and a quick glimpse into the bewildering number of insects which cause them on a great many different species of plants. Another member had done research on drumlins which she discussed with the aid of a topographical map. She had found that there are a surprising number of these formations within the city of Oshawa. Many, for example, can be seen from the "Old Ghost Road".

Degree

Four area residents will receive their Certified General Accountants designation Saturday at the Skyline Hotel in Toronto. The residents are M. J. DeGagne, R. J. Smith, Mrs. F. J. Stone, W. Winstanley, all of Oshawa and A. K. Misiaszek of Ajax.

Cable TV this week

By James Sabyan

For several months there's been an intangible, subtle something missing in the studio. No matter how hard I thought about it the answer eluded me, then the other day Madge Crichton came on the set to do her first show of the season and the answer came like a bolt of lightning

Madge, that lively, effervescent bundle of contained energy was the missing ingredient. It's her energy that flows into each show she does that makes the words, local origination, seem worthwhile.

Her show Cable East — every Thursday evening — is devoted strictly to the ladies and before the year is out the ladies of the audience will see fashions, to what makes groceries so high priced. Her first show of the season was a preview of some of the fashions coming on the scene and the studio — already crowded to the point of distraction — was jammed with good looking girls going through costume changes much to the delight of the camera crew.

But the secret to any show is people. If the MC is down then the show is down. Never in all the shows that Madge has appeared in has the event gone flat.

Besides her boundless energy that she expends on the television media she writes, produces and directs childrens plays for local consumption.

It's people like Madge and the others who have regular shows that will be responsible for the success of the local Cablecasting station.

Next week another girl, Jeaninne Butler will join the staff as the local events and information MC. Jeaninne's show will run for 30 minutes each day from 6:30 to 7:00 pm. If any group or organisation is having an activity it's Jeaninnes job to tell the viewers about it and have someone connected with event on the air to talk about it. Basically her show will be in two parts to cover two events per day. The name of this five days a week show is "Dates, Deeds, and Dialogue" and all groups, organisations and clubs are urged to get in touch with her to help publicise the forthcoming events

This November the 11th, is specials day on ch. 8. From seven pm on, the evening will be devoted to the two world wars. Col. R. B. Smith and Col. H. Millen will join us to talk about those days and Peter Brouwer will talk about the liberation of Holland. A representative of the Polish veterans will be on camera, also to talk about the part they played. During the news that day the feature story will be the service at the cenotaph.

Generals win two in a row

By Jim Bishop
sports editor

The Oshawa Generals Booster Club held their annual "Meet the Generals Night" Sunday and the team responded to the fans by knocking over the Niagara Falls Flyers 9 to 2. Following the team's initial win Friday night against Ottawa they came back to make it two in a row as they completely dominated the hapless Flyers.

In the first period, Sean Shanahan scored from Mahon and Anderson and late in the period, Gerry Methe nearly undressed the Falls' goaltender with some great stickhandling before parking the puck for Oshawa's second goal.

In the middle period it was Pete Sullivan putting on his own personal scoring rampage. Sully scored an official hat-trick as he scored three consecutive goals. He also could have had a couple of others as goalie Rick Kimble barely beat him on a penalty shot and he missed a wide open net on another occasion. Larry Thompson, recently released from these same Flyers scored a pair of goals against his former mates and after each goal he gave the bird to Niagara coach Paul Emms. Singles went to Warren Anderson and Newcomer Al Avery.

So far, it looks like the tradewinds have blown fair for the Generals. All four of the players involved in the Marlie 4 for 2 swap have been impressive. What the club obviously lacked was size and aggressiveness on the forward lines. The three forwards they received are all big boys and all have shown a willingness to mix it up in the corners.

The club looked much better Sunday as they played their positions with much more authority and they threw the puck around better than they have all season and were finally getting some clear shots from the slot. Another aspect that is brightening for the fans is

For years one of the biggest sporting draws in the United States has been College athletics. In Canada, there has not been the same interest, mostly because of the fewer number of schools and their varying sizes have been a deterrent to fielding first-class competition. The only College league in Ontario that is equitable is the football league comprising Toronto, Western, Queen's and McGill. However, with the coming of Canada's Centennial Year in 1967 and the advent of Community Colleges in Ontario, the College sports scene is rapidly gaining momentum.

Durham College of Oshawa has had a hand in changing this important sports picture. They now have teams in three varsity categories. They compete with similar colleges in hockey, basketball and volleyball and plans are underway to be competing in football in a few years.

Durham has had building pains over the last couple of years and have had rather small enrollments until this year. Now with more than 500 students they are capable of fielding some potent athletic teams. Until this season, Durham had not won a game against another school but in the two past weekends have defeated two other schools of comparable size in basketball and hockey.

Dave Stewart, Durham's recently hired recreation director and Gerry Pettit, the guidance counsellor at the school, coach the basketball and hockey teams.

The hockey club has a number of former junior players from Oshawa and around the province and are looking stronger with each outing. The basketball team is much improved over former years and while probably not of championship calibre, should win a few games. The basketball games are played at the local high school gyms and the hockey team has North Oshawa Arena as its home base.

These sports are exciting to watch and always in attendance are some of the prettiest cheerleaders in the province.

The sports fans of the area could do themselves a favor by watching these games and there is no admission charged.

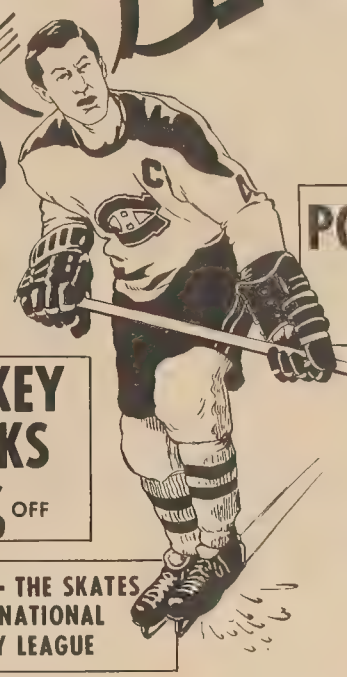
the desire of the boys to help each other out when they get in trouble. The team has not been doing this and as a result lacked unity



One of the highlights of the game was the singing of the National Anthem in French by Jacques Gratton, older brother of Gilles Gratton, the fine Oshawa goaltender. Another brother, Normand, is playing in the General Pro League. This family

The Booster Club are doing their usual fine job of supporting the team The reception for the players and fans after Sunday's game was well-attended and gave the fans a chance to know the players on person to person basis. The club makes an effort to attend every away game and will have a bus going to St. Catherines on Sunday at 4 p.m. Cost for the trip, including admission to the game is $7.

Ten tough questions to ask before you invest in Color TV

A Color TV is a major purchase. Choosing one can be a pretty confusing experience. There are makes and models at all kinds of prices. What are the things you should look for? Why do some sets cost more than others? That's what this is all about . . .

1. Can you make the face look natural?
2. Does the set have Automatic Color Temperature Control?
3. Can the set show you a natural looking mouth?
4. Will the set tune in sharp detail?
5. Is there a noise cancelling circuit?
6. Is it a "Direct vision" picture tube?
7. Does the set have Automatic Fine Tuning?
8. Does the set have Automatic Vertical and Horizontal Hold?
9. Is there a pin-cushion correction circuit?
10. Is there an automatic voltage regulator?

For the answer to all these questions, and the reasons for asking them, visit our TV Color Salon and discuss Color TV in quiet comfort.

Durham wins double-header

The Durham College Lords Basketball and hockey teams are making their own history in the exhibition schedules.

Last weekend they defeated Sir Sandford Fleming College of Lindsay 56-54 in a hard fought basketball game and then later the same day the Durham College won their game 6-3.

This past weekend they pulled a repeat performance against Loyalist of Belleville. Steve Ball was the ace for the home team as he hooped 23 points in Durham's 53-47 win at Donevan Collegiate. Bob Burley had 14, Ted Harrison, 5, Greg Rundle had 4 points, Terry Gibson, 3, while Ron McLeod and Dwight Bradley had 2 each. For the losers Rick Webster and Blair Callam scored 12 and 11 points respectively.

Durham completely dominated the hockey game at North Oshawa Arena as they clobbered Loyalist 7-3. John Horton and Vaughn Smith each scored a pair of goals for Durham and singles went to Mike Rose, Bill Barker and Jim Homeniuk.

Durham travel to Lindsay tonight when both teams will be in action and the hockey club meets York University Saturday night at the North Oshawa Rink at 8 p.m.

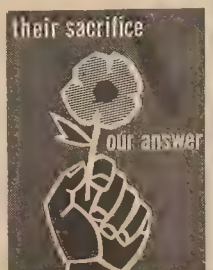
By Jim Bishop
sports editor

There was action galore last week as the Oshawa High Schools football teams met to decide the right to advance in COSSA playdowns.

In Senior, Central knocked off highly-rated Donevan by 7 to 6. Ted Rezulski opened the scoring for Central when a wide field-goal attempt went for a rouge. There was no more scoring in the first half as both defensive squads dominated. In the third quarter, Bryan Plancke took off on a brilliant 55 yard touch-down run to put Central ahead 7-0. In the final period, Jan Kuwasniewski picked up a loose ball from a blocked kick and ran it back 65 yards for Donevan's only score of the game.

In the other senior battle, O'Neill walloped Eastdale 48 to 13.

In junior play it was Eastdale over Central 32-0 and McLaughlin beating O'Neill 12-0.



On Friday at the Kinsman Stadium, Central seniors kept their win streak going as they beat Dunbarton 21-7. Pickering defeated O'Neill 11-8 in the other senior playoff game. Pickering Juniors beat McLaughlin 4-2 and Ajax knocked off Eastdale 20 to 7.

Central Seniors are the only Oshawa team left in the hunt for COSSA football honors and they travel to Belleville today for a meeting with Quinte High School. The winner of this match goes on to meet the Kawartha Area Champs to decide this year's champions.

Crushmen tie

The Oshawa Crushmen had a third period lapse Saturday at the Auditorium but had enough to hang on for a 3-3 tie.

They had a 3-1 lead going into the final frame but Kingston Frontenacs came back with two unanswered goals to pull out a tie. Oshawa received goals from Larry Hopkins, Al Bathe and Laurie Gregan. Gregan, sent to the Crushmen this week for seasoning, broke his ankle and will be out of action for the next couple of months.

College Rally brings out 23

Durham College's third car rally came off without a hitch. The rally which started at 9 a.m., Sunday morning in the College parking lot suffered no significant complications other than a flat tire or two. Lister Robinson, Dean of Academic Affairs and Fred Haywood, Chairman of the College's Business Division organized the event.

The rally consisted of a 100 mile circular route around Oshawa from the College, north to Columbus, east through Haydon and Kirby to Kendall, south to Orono and Hampton, then back to the College. The course was a combination of dirt and paved roads.

The winners of the 100 mile rally were Ian Smith and Ted Harrison in the Senior Division, while Paul Didine and Robert Carson won in the Novice.

The winners of the Novice team event were Bill Walters and Ray Smith, Ron Pidduck and Cathryn Etcher, Mark Cant and Bill Shepherd.

The rally was based on navigating skills, comprised of route and speed accuracy. There were two sets of instructions for the rally entries. The senior entries had high speeds and more changes while the novice had slower speeds and less changes.

There were five check points for novice and six for senior. These points were run by faculty members: Craig Flemming, Edmund McCormack, Gerald Pettit, Jack Davidson, and Dennis Campbell.

The Durham College car rally gets underway as Lister Robinson, Dean of Academic Affairs, acts as official starter. 23 cars participated despite bad weather.

A field of 23 cars, imports and domestics, manned by students and faculty took part in the event..

Dunlop Bonspiel opens

The two top favored rinks in the first day of play in this year's 5th Annual Dunlop Ontario Invitational Bonspiel, Bob Woods of Avonlea and Bruce Munro of Humber Highland, won their way into the finals of the 1st event when play opened Saturday, but not without a couple of last minute hairs breadth decisions for former Swedish Scotch World Cup skip, Bob Woods. Woods, in his morning match against Carlo Chiarelli of Carleton Heights, Ottawa, remained in front throughout the match, but on the last end looked as though he was in danger of losing, when Chiarelli; with his last rock knocked Woods into home.

In his third match, he appeared to have things all sewn up against Stan Jones of Humber Highland with an 8-5 lead and two ends to go, and never having been behind throughout the match, but Jones tied it up at 8-8 in the 12th. It was left for Woods last rock to knock Jones off the button to win the match 11-8.

By comparison Munro had a day of plain sailing, gaining in strength as the day progressed. In the morning he beat Tom Steen of Oshawa by 7-4, and then repeated that winning margin in the afternoon over Ron Kelsch of Tam Heather. In the evening he disposed of Bob Dekker, who curls at Annandale with a score of 7-2.

Dekker and Jones, by losing their evening matches, but having won their first two, will return in the third event of the finals on Saturday November 21st. Tom Steen of Oshawa and Gord Hawkshaw of Oshawa Golf and Curling Club, having lost their morning matches, but coming back with afternoon and evening victories, progress to the fourth event of the finals.

Special interest in the morning matches lay in the draw of two of the best known names in the game. Tom Caldwell, a former Ontario Brier skip, attempting a comeback this year following a lengthy lay-off with a leg injury, met the current Seniors Champion, Alf Phillips Sr. At the last end Caldwell was leading 6-5, but Phillips had two scoring rocks in the House when Caldwell threw his last rock and edged through a port to make it 7-5.

Both, however lost their afternoon games to go out of the competition. It is necessary to win two straight games to progress to the finals of the Dunlop.

In the local matches Ted Waring of Whitby easily beat Gord Hawkshaw of Oshawa Golf and Curling Club by 11-5 in the morning, although Waring lost his next match, coming up against Bob

The unseen men of hockey

By Jim Bishop
Sports Editor

It takes more than players, referees and fans to run an OHA hockey game. Two of the most important officials are the official scorer and the timekeeper. These guys are leaned on heavily by the referee to accurately keep track of penalties being served and to record all scoring points.

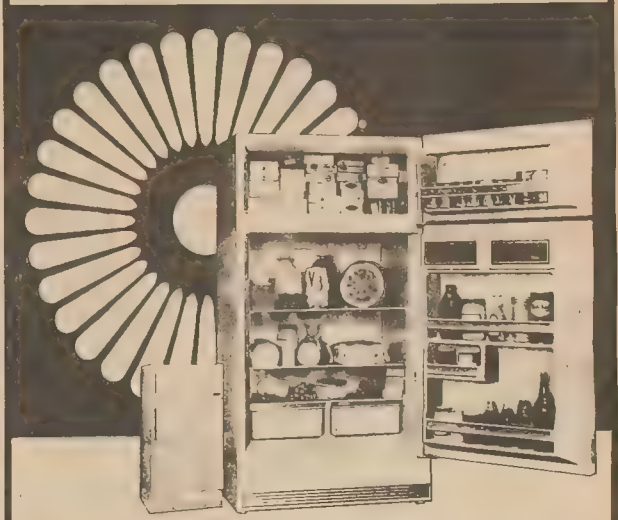
It takes a lot of dedication to devote several nights a week to handling amateur games, but two such dedicated men are Arnold Etcher and Murray Cain of Bowmanville. These two men are residents of the penalty timekeeper's bench yearround, handling all the Generals home games, the Crushmen games, and lacrosse for the Green Gaels and more lately, the Brooklin Redmen. The official scorer and timekeeper is Arnold Etcher, who has as much experience as anyone in Canada probably. Etcher, who also masquerades as a baseball umpire in the warm seasons, (whenever they are), has been at the helm of hockey games as long as he cares to remember. He was the official scorer in the glory-days of the great World Champion Whitby Dunlops and has some very fond memories of their "Cinderella" team back in 1955-56. In fact, the Generals new coach, Ed Reigle, was coaching the North Bay Trappers when the Dunnies Came back from a 2-game deficit to defeat the Trappers for the Ontario Championship on their way to an Allan Cup victory.

After the halcyon days of the Dunlops had passed Etcher returned to Bowmanville and handled minor and industrial hockey until the re-formation of the Generals in the early 60's. The formation of the Oshawa Crushmen added to the amount of time that he had to put into his hobby. Also, the two and sometimes three nights a week in lacrosse season, along with officiating baseball keep him busy most summer evenings.

At one time Arnold Etcher handled the running of the clock, the scoresheet and the timing of penalties by himself but with more complicated rules, such as Jr A's coincident major-penalty rule being evolved, this became too much for one man. Murray Cain, also from Bowmanville, was recruited to operate the clock at the games. This too, is a difficult chore, requiring good reflexes and a sound knowledge of the game. In lacrosse, there is a double duty. He must operate the main clock which governs the over-all play of the game . . . as well as keep a stop watch for the thirty-second rule which states that an attacking team must take a shot on goal within thirty seconds after gaining possession of the ball. Murray has only one complaint; the hand that he must keep on the switch gets cold in October and stays that way until hockey is finished in April or May.

Most of the referees in the OHA have at one time or another commented about the efficiency of the Oshawa timekeeping duo. Since an inexperienced man on the bench could create havoc during the serving of multiple penalties, the referees have deep appreciation for a man with knowledge and integrity to handle that aspect of officiating. Another chore of the official scorer that fans probably are not aware of, is making sure that the starting players listed on the scoresheet are the same players that are on the ice at the time of the opening faceoff. If there is an infraction of this rule it can result in a penalty to the offending team even before the game starts.

There have been a number of humorous incidents that Etcher can recall but the one that comes to mind most often involves big Peter Mahovlich, who now toils very capably with the Montreal Canadiens. Mahovlich was playing for the Hamilton Red Wings and a real donnybrook broke loose. After the penalties from the fight were assessed and the penalty boxes jammed with players Mahovlich received a minor at the 11-minute mark of the second period and did not start to serve it till the 12-minute mark of the third. Mahovlich had been in the box so long that he began yelling at Etcher every 30 seconds, "is it time to go out yet, coach." He also mentions that it is a real pleasure to have players like Oshawa's rookie, Jack Lynch in the box.



Official scorer Arnold Etcher discusses infraction with referee Bill Brethour as Murray Cain looks on.

Woods. Hawkshaw brought off a surprise by having a last end win over Chiarelli. Hawkshaw then went on to win his last two matches, the second when Bob Lawrie missed Hawkshaw's rock by a hairs breadth to give Hawkshaw the victory

Tom Steen of Oshawa Golf Club after losing to Bruce Munro in the early morning met Don Kemp of Whitby and beat him 11-9, before going on to win his third game over Jim Coverdale of Avonlea and reach the finals.

This resulted in three of last Sunday's local qualifiers progressing to the finals.

Munro's rink was comprised of John Cushing as lead, Peter Phillips, second and Chris Johnson as vice. Woods led a rink made up of Howie Atkinson, lead, Brian Longley, second and Mo Handford as vice.

The formation of the other qualifying rinks was: Bob Dekker's — Wayne Henderson (lead), Walter Andruszko (second) and Al Betts (vice); Tom Steen's — Brian Suddard (lead), John Piper (second) and Mike MacKay (vice); Gord Hawkshaw's — Tom Murphy (lead), John Faulkner (second) and John Burch (vice); Stan Jones' — Ted Pordage (lead), Larry Harwood (second) and Russ Reeves (vice).

Before the curlers were piped on the ice, Ontario South MPP, Bill Newman paid tribute to the organising committee for building up an event of almost national importance, which in the near future would achieve international status in the world of curling. He then paid tribute to the way industry and the local community can work together with such good results.

Whitby Mayor, Des Newman, in welcoming the curlers on behalf of the town of Whitby said that the event was becoming so important that there were no less than 15 former Brier skips among the 64 contestants in this year's event.

Blake Grundy, General Sales Manager of Dunlop Canada Limited, on behalf of the sponsors expressed thanks to the Club for the work which has been necessary to bring the event to its present status.

The event continues Saturday, with another 16 entrants. Among the highlights in the morning matches will be a return match between current Ontario champion Paul Savage of Toronto Terrace and Rich Vesey of Oshawa. Last Thursday night Vesey beat Savage in the Toronto Royal Bonspiel.

Snowmobiling to feature arctic explorer

Snowmobiling is our fastest-growing winter sport, and one of the most knowledgeable and interesting snowmobilers in the world is Ralph Plaisted, the rugged individualist who led a group of amateur explorers on a successful snowmobile expedition to the North Pole in the spring of 1968.

A series of columns about various facets of snowmobiling is being written by Ralph Plaisted for This Week.

The first Plaisted Polar Expedition tried to reach the North Pole on snowmobiles in the spring of 1967 but was turned back by excessive breakup of Arctic Ocean ice. The group had started too late, but Ralph Plaisted, a St. Paul (Minn.) insurance man by vocation and an avid snowmobiler by avocation, vowed to return again the next year and beat the challenge of the Arctic.

He and his expedition did return and did beat the Arctic in a grueling 43-day 2-hour 30-minute battle with 40-foot-high pressure ridges, howling snowstorms, hazardous open-water leads thousands of feet deep, and cold that reached 62 degrees below zero!

At 3 p.m. (CST) April 19, 1968, the Plaisted Polar Expedition completed its battle with the Arctic Ice Cap and reached the geographic North Pole on snowmobiles.

At 9:30 a.m. (CST) April 20, 1968, a U.S. Air Force Air Weather Service aircraft, on a routine weather mission over the polar region, passed over the location of the Plaisted Polar Expedition. Both of the plane's navigators, using LORAN, sextant, pressure pattern, and Nord radio beacon from Greenland, plotted the expedition's location and calculated it to be at the geographic North Pole, 90 degrees North.

A band of amateur explorers, led by an insurance man who lives for outdoor challenges, had performed a feat that made history three ways:

It was the first expedition ever to reach the geographic North Pole by motorized travel.

It was the first surface expedition ever to have its location at the exact geographic North Pole confirmed by an outside source, the U.S. Air Force.

And it was the first surface expedition to reach the North Pole since 1909!
